NOTICE TO MARINERS.

HIS Excellency the GOVERNOR has been pleased to direct that the following Extract from a Communication received from Captain Richards, of H. M. Colonial Brig, Victoria, relative to the approach by Sea to the Harbour of Port Nelson, be published for the information of Mariners.

By His Excellency's Command,
WILLOUGHBY SHORTLAND.

EXTRACT FROM A COMMUNICATION FROM CAPTAIN RICHARDS, OF H. M. COLONIAL BRIG "VICTORIA."

"We rounded "Stephen's Island," in Blind Bay, on our way towards Nelson Haven, and worked to the southward during the night, with a light breeze; next morning we passed Cruzelles Bay, with the wind from the seaward, and when about eight miles from the Harbour, saw the commencement of the Shingle Bank, by which it is formed, along which we ran for a distance of one and a half or two miles, anchoring in seven fathoms, one mile from the bar, when a Pilot came on board, and took the brig into the Harbour, with the flood tide.

It is advisable in proceeding to this Port, to keep the southeastern shore on board, to avoid a sunken rock, which is said to exist, and of which the following are supposed to be the bearings and distance. The entrance of the Harbour, S. by E. 7 miles. The Outer Mark on the White Cliff, W. by S. $\frac{1}{2}$ S.

From the best information I could obtain, I am of opinion, that ships may anchor outside the bar without danger. During the fourteen days that we remained here, the weather was extremely fine, although the wind was blowing hard from the N. W. in the Straits.

It appears to me, that large vessels may go either in or out of this Harbour with perfect safety, by taking the advantage of the proper time of tide. The loss of the Fifeshire was occasioned in consequence of due attention not having been paid to this precaution.

The passage is dangerous if a vessel be taken into it, on leaving the Port, after the ebb-tide has begun to make, but not otherwise.

The Clifford, a large emigrant vessel, was lying safely at anchor outside the entrance of the Port, and inside the bar.

It is high water at Nelson at nine o'clock, full and change. Rise and fall of tide, 12 feet. Depth of water on the bar, in spring tides, 22 feet."
