Given under my Hand, and issued under the Public Seal of the Colony, at Government House, (L. S.) Auckland, this fifteenth day of December, in the year of Our Lord One thousand eight hundred and forty-six.

GEORGE GREY,

Lieut. Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

By His Excellency's command,

ANDREW SINCLAIR,

Colonial Secretary.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN!

Colonial Secretary's Office,
Auckland, 21st December, 1846.

HIS Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has been pleased to direct that the following Despatch received from the Secretary of State, in answer to a Memorial from the former Inhabitants of Russell, praying to be compensated for losses sustained by the destruction of that place, should be published for the information of the Memorialists.

By His Excellency's command,

ANDREW SINCLAIR,

Colonial Secretary.

Downing Street,
10th June, 1846.

SIR,—I have received your Predecessor's Despatch, marked "Separate," of the 30th of October last, accompanied by a Memorial from above forty persons, formerly resident at Russell, in New Zealand, soliciting compensation for the losses sustained by them in consequence of the destruction of that Town by the Natives, in March of last year.

This claim raises, or involves, a general principle of great practical extent, and of very wide and general application. It is the principle that British subjects who have settled themselves in the immediate vicinity of uncivilized Tribes of men, and who may subsequently become the victims of their hostility, are entitled to throw on the British Treasury the losses consequent on any such attacks, if they can shew, either that there was not a sufficient military force at hand for their protection, or, that a sufficiently vigorous and skilful use was not made of that force, or, that the British Government or its Officers were guilty of any such error or oversight in their transactions with the Tribes in question, as may possibly have provoked or increased their hostility to the Settlers. It is alleged in the Memorial that such has been the invariable rule or practice in all such cases.

To this general assertion it is impossible to subscribe. The Memorialists have quoted no solitary instance of the kind they mention, and I am not aware of the existence of any. Neither the ancient British Settlers in North America, nor those who in recent times have settled in Western or in Southern Africa, ever received from the Government compensation for the losses they incurred by the devastation and plunder of their Settlements by the Savages in their immediate vicinity. They emigrated not in the hopes of their country, but with a view to advantages, real or imaginary, and included, or ought to have included, the danger of barbarous invasion as one of the most serious risks of that speculation.

In the present case the Claimants cannot even allege that their Settlement in New Zealand was encouraged, or approved, or even known by their own Government. They resorted thither before the Treaty of Waitangi, and before the Government was reluctantly compelled by the unauthorized Emigration of British subjects to that Country, to negotiate for a Sovereignty which they had deprecated as an undesirable, if not injurious acquisition. When at length that Sovereignty was assumed, the Government gave the utmost possible publicity to the fact that, it was impossible to withdraw from the British Army a Garrison adequate to the protection and defence of the Settlers.

If errors, either Civil or Military, were subsequently committed in the administration of the Government of the Colony, I cannot admit that to those errors alone, or chiefly, are to be attributed the attacks of Heki and his followers on the Town of Russell, and, even if I could make that admission, I should not admit to the inference that the British Treasury are bound to pay both for the expense of the warfare, and for the losses of the Settlers. The Government and their local Officers, Civil and Military, were all placed in a situation in which it is scarcely probable that any degree of foresight, skill, or courage could have averted all risk of such evils. They were drawn into that situation by the precipitancy of others, not by any ill policy of their own. Besides, it is a new and startling doctrine that the Queen's subjects are individually entitled to compensation for any losses in which the honest errors, political or military, of the Queen's Government may involve them.

For these reasons I must decline to advise Her Majesty to award any compensation to the Memorialists, however deeply Her Majesty has been concerned to receive this intelligence of their misfortunes. I abstain from tendering that advice the more carefully, because, the great stress laid in this Memorial on supposed precedents of similar grants, reminds me of the hazard, and possible inconvenience of now establishing a precedent of that kind to which reference might under any corresponding circumstances, be made hereafter.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

W. E. GLADSTONE.

Lieut.-Governor Grey,
&c., &c., &c.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency GEORGE GREY,
Esquire, Lieutenant-Governor and
Commander-in-Chief in and over Her Majesty's Colony of New Zealand, and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

WHEREAS an Ordinance was enacted by the Lieutenant-Governor of New Zealand, with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council thereof, Session 7, No. 16, intituled "An Ordinance to provide for the Establishment of Resident Magistrates' Courts, and to make special provision for the administration of Justice in certain cases." And whereas an Ordinance was in like manner enacted, Session 7, No. 15, intituled "An Ordinance to repeal the Police Magistrates' Ordinance and the Native Exemption Ordinance." And whereas it was provided by the said recited Ordinances, that they should respectively come into operation throughout the Colony on the first day of May, 1847, or on such earlier day, and either throughout the Colony, or within any district or districts thereof, as His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor should by Proclamation direct and appoint.
