THE following Report of the Court of Inquiry held under "The Inquiry into Wrecks Act, 1863," on the wreck of the s.s. "South Australian," is published for general information.

JOHN HALL.

INQUIRY INTO WRECKS.

REPORT on the Wreck of the screw steamship "South Australian."

To the Honorable the Postmaster-General of New Zealand.

I, the undersigned, Alfred Chetham Strode, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and a Resident Magistrate in and for the Colony of New Zealand, having been on the fifth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, applied to by Thomas Hill, Esq., Principal Officer of Customs at the Port of Dunedin, for a formal investigation pursuant to Section VII. of "The Inquiry into Wrecks Act, 1863," and other provisions of the said Act, respecting the loss of a certain steamship, called the "South Australian," of the Port of Melbourne, Victoria, on the second day of April last, on the reef of rocks lying four miles south of "Cook's Head," on the East Coast of Otago, did duly proceed with the said investigation, to wit, on the ninth, tenth, eleventh and eighteenth days of April, instant, and had before me and examined on oath divers persons and witnesses, to wit, Hugh Mackie, master mariner; Hunter Regnart, chief mate; Henry Mullen, second mate; John Thomas Nutt, chief engineer; James Aitken, Magnus Brown, Fowler Masterton, Evan Davis, seamen (all of the "South Australian" steamship); Francis Dillon Bell, Albert Griffiths, John Reid Mackenzie, passengers on board; Alexander McKinnon, master mariner; Spencer Brent, clerk; John Bell Mudie, merchant; and George Simpson, master mariner; the original depositions of whose evidence are hereunto annexed, signed by me, being assisted therein by William Thomson, Harbour

Master of Otago, and a master mariner, holding a Certificate of Competency from the Board of Trade in London, who was duly appointed by Thomas Hill, Esq., Principal Officer of Customs at the Port of Dunedin, to act as Assessor to me the said Justice of the Peace and Resident Magistrate, and upon such investigation and examination of witnesses as aforesaid I find, and beg to report to the Honorable the Postmaster-General of New Zealand as follows, that is to say:—

1. That the official number of said ship called the "South Australian" is 29,570, of which Hugh Mackie is master, who holds a Certificate of Competency, and which ship belonged to Messrs. McMeekan, Blackwood and Co., of Melbourne, Victoria, merchants.
2. That the loss or damage herein more particularly mentioned happened on the second day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, at about eleven o'clock in the evening, on the reef of rocks lying four miles south of "Cook's Head," on the East Coast of Otago.
3. That the loss or damage appears by the evidence to have been caused mainly by the incorrectness of the deviation card supplied by the authorities at Melbourne, inasmuch as the actual course made by the "South Australian" on the night in question has been one and three-quarter ($1\frac{3}{4}$) points to the westward of the course indicated by the deviation card, supposing the position of the point at which the course was shaped to have been correct.
4. That the nature of the loss or damage done was total wreck. That it is not known to the master or any one in Otago whether the vessel is insured or not. That the "South Australian" is barque-rigged; her port of registry, Adelaide, South Australia; her registered tonnage, 435 83-100. That no lives were lost through the wreck.

And I, the said Justice of the Peace and Resident Magistrate, further state my opinion on the matter aforesaid to be as follows—That at the time the course was shaped abreast of Cape Saunders (up to which time the vessel had been steered by the land) presuming the vessel to have been about four miles off the coast, as appears by the evidence of the master, she must have taken considerably more than the customary offing for steamers in daylight: the usual course being when abreast of that Cape about one and a half ($1\frac{1}{2}$) miles from the land, a S.S.W. course, which was the course set, steered according to the deviation card, from one and a half ($1\frac{1}{2}$) miles from Cape Saunders, the usual track for steamers, would, with the current on the port bow, which is known to exist, place the vessel on the reef on which she struck. There seems by the evidence to have been no effort made from time to time to determine the true position of the vessel, and, particularly at the time of shaping the course, the evidence of the master and that of the chief officer being on that point very conflicting. Moreover, this is the more apparent from the fact of the master having after the vessel struck supposed his position to be south of the Nuggets, and having given an order to one of the officers in charge of a boat to steer a N.N.E. course in order to fetch the Molyneux. It appears from the testimony of all the witnesses that the night on which the disaster occurred was fine, calm, and starlight, with a slight haze over the land, but quite clear overhead. Under these circumstances it seems somewhat unaccountable that the close proximity of the land was not observed by those connected with the management of the ship, and consequently but one conclusion is forced upon me, (i.e.) that the lookout was insufficient and careless of his duty; and even supposing that the land was partially obscured by the haze, a cast of the lead every hour should have been taken. The evidence discloses that no officer was in charge of the bridge of the vessel where the telegraph to the engine-room was fixed. This circumstance appears to show something, to say the least, unusual, when a steamer is under weigh; but from the evidence adduced I must conclude that the loss of the "South Australian" was not, in the words of the two hundred and forty-second section of "The Merchant Shipping Act, 1854," caused by the wrongful act or default of the master or any other officer of the ship. In conclusion, I deem it right to state that the master had been fourteen years at sea, and four and a half years in the trade between Otago and Melbourne, and had never before met with the slightest accident.

Given under my hand this twenty-third day of April, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, at Dunedin, in the Province of Otago, New Zealand.

A. CHETHAM STRODE, J.P. and R.M.

I, William Thomson, Nautical Assessor on the inquiry into the cause of the wreck of the steamship "South Australian," concur in the above Report concerning the loss of the said vessel.

Nautical Assessor.
