ROCKY PATCH, NEAR ANCHORAGE, POVERTY BAY.

THE Harbourmaster at Gisborne reports the existence of a rocky patch in Poverty Bay with only $3\frac{1}{2}$ fathoms on it, and with 6 and 7 fathoms close to. It lies near the anchorage, with Tua Motu bearing by compass E. by S. $\frac{1}{2}$ S., and Flagstaff N. by E. $\frac{3}{4}$ E., distant about one and a quarter miles.

Notice to Mariners, No. 26 of 1883.

Marine Department,
Wellington, 13th July, 1883.

THE following Notice to Mariners, received from the Hydrographer to the United States Hydrographic Office, Washington, is published for general information.

H. A. ATKINSON.

SOUTH PACIFIC OCEAN.—NEW HEBRIDES.—SAILING DIRECTIONS.

THE French corvette "D'Estrées" reports two anchorages to the southward of Foreland: one at Revolieu, three and a half miles S. by E. from Cape Foreland, and the other at Limbam, five miles S. by E. from the same cape.

178. Ambrym.—The "D'Estrées" passed one night at Rodd's Anchorage; the bottom is not good, and with winds from the north it is necessary to put to sea. The coast of the island appears to be safe at a distance of one and a half miles from the shore, excepting the south point, where a bank with depths of from two and a half to eight fathoms extends for one and a half or two miles to seaward. It is a bank of black sand projecting from the land; small vessels anchor on it in fine weather. There is no water on this island.

179. Pentecote or Whitsuntide Island.—The "D'Estrées" anchored one night in Steep Cliff Bay. The bottom is bad, and with westerly winds it would be necessary to get under way. According to information furnished by the D'Estrées, there is an anchorage, sheltered from the prevailing winds, near the middle of the east coast, behind a reef. The west coast appears safe at a distance of one and a half miles; a landing can be made almost anywhere. Several streams fall into the sea on the west coast.

180. Aurora or Maino Island.—The coast appears safe at a distance of a mile and a half. Several streams empty on the west coast.

181. Aoba or Leper's Island.—Shallow water extends for about half a mile off the east coast. The "Wolverine" anchored in four places on the north coast, and the boats could, everywhere, land easily on the sand beaches. In going from west to east along the north coast the "D'Estrées" found four anchorages: Daudoué, Walurigi, Langoa, and Bice Roads. The best anchorage, according to the "Wolverine," is Bice Road; there is a good landing place, and the natives are friendly.

182. St. Esprit Island, St. Philip's Bay.—The "D'Estrées" took the anchorage of Tallomako, anchoring in twelve and a half fathoms, sand bottom, on the following bearings:—

Cape Quiros N. 28° 30' E.
 The Table S. 76° 30' E.
 The mouth of the stream S. 39° 30' E.

The "D'Estrées" also anchored in the S.E. part of St. Philip's Bay, in from nine to eleven fathoms, with the mouth of the stream bearing S. 21° 30' W., and a remarkable white spot to the left of the table, S. 20° 45' E. The depth is moderate, and the holding-ground is good.

Port Obry.—The "D'Estrées" anchored one night at Port Obry. Aside from its being open to the N.E., the bottom is not good.

Leké Bay.—The "D'Estrées" also anchored in eleven fathoms in Leké Bay on the east coast of St. Esprit. Approximate position: latitude, 15° 5' S.; longitude, 167° 5' E. The holding-ground is bad, and the harbour is small and fit only for small vessels.

Requin Bay is sheltered from the N.E., but the holding-ground is bad, and the plateau of coral on which is the anchorage is very small. A stream flows into the head of the bay.

Anchorage on the South Coast.—The anchorage east of Tongoa would be very good if it were not so limited; the holding-ground is good, and a river disembogues opposite the anchorage.

There is also an anchorage west of Tongoa in from eight to twelve fathoms. Approximate position: latitude, 15° 36' S.; longitude, 167° 1' E.

The land between the east anchorage of Tongoa and Second Channel seems to be swampy. There are in this locality several islands not marked on the chart, and among them Maloti and Lagoon Islands, and, closer to shore, Sable and Taoua Islands, between which lies a bank of coral bearing N. 32° W. from the west point of St. Bartholomew Island, and N. 41° 7' E. from Hat Island. It is prudent, when approaching Tongoa anchorage from the eastward, to leave all these islands to starboard. There is no anchorage under Hat Island. The passage between this island and the land is safe.

The small islands to the eastward of St. Bartholomew Island and Setovi Island do not lie north and south from each other as is indicated on the charts. When the small islands have been doubled, it is necessary to steer N. 7° E. to double Setovi.

Cape Lisburn.—To the eastward of Cape Lisburn there is a bay, not so deep and much wider than is indicated on the charts. This bay is open to the southerly winds. A stream of water empties into it.

General Observation.—All the points of the island of St. Esprit which were doubled by the "D'Estrées" are terminated by reefs which project more or less to seaward, but in no case farther than one mile.

183. Mallicolo.—This island has the best anchorages in the archipelago. Along the N.E. coast is a series of small islands, which are terminated to the N.W. and S.E. by reefs, which project a considerable distance, particularly in the case of the two northernmost islands. There is said to be anchorage for schooners behind each one of these islands. It is prudent not to approach them nearer than two miles.

The southernmost of these islands is named "Ourukiki," and not "Ourumbaou," as is indicated on B. A. Chart No. 1,380. The island immediately to the northward of Ourukiki is called Ourumbaou; there is an anchorage on the N.E. coast of it.

Port Stanley.—Between the two islands Ourukiki and Ourumbaou (Entrance Island) is the entrance to Port Stanley. The anchorage is roomy and well sheltered; the holding-ground is good, but the main land is close aboard. The entrance appears easy.

There are three anchorages sheltered from the prevailing winds, which are to be found respectively to the northward of each of the three points situated between Port Stanley and Port Sandwich. The most southerly of these is Port Banam.

Port Sandwich.—The plan on B. A. Chart No. 134 is sufficiently correct for entering. The bank of the River Erskine appears to have extended to the southward; the banks at the entrance to the river uncover at low-water. The bank of coral, near Observation Point, on which the English chart has but three-quarters of a fathom of water, was not found, but a depth of nine feet was obtained a little farther to the northward.

Maskelyne Islands.—The anchorages in these islands are all very small and cramped; the holding-ground is good and the currents are very strong. A river empties to the northward of the North Pass.

The south coast of Mallicolo from Maskelyne Island to Cook Island is protected by a reef which extends far enough to seaward, in the western part, to afford shelter to small vessels. There are several small islands inside of this reef. Vessels going inside should have a pilot. Cook island anchorage is open to the West.

184. Sandwich or Vate Island.—Hinchinbrook Island is not N.W. of Fly Island, as the charts show, but N.E. of it.

Montagne and Pele Islands are surrounded by reefs. The bay which is situated to the southward of these islands offers, in its eastern part, a shelter for small vessels; the western coast is bordered by reefs which project a considerable distance. There is an open anchorage south of Montagne and Pele Islands. The passage between Hinchinbrook and Pele Islands is safe.

Port Havannah.—The plan on B. A. Chart No. 134 is sufficiently correct for entering. If one has to ride out a cyclone in this port it would be better to anchor in Escema Bay. The bottom is not very good, and there is very little room for veering chain.

Port Vila.—It would not be advisable to attempt to ride out a cyclone in this port; the holding-ground is not good, and there is not much room for veering chain.

The south, south-east, east, and north coasts of Sandwich Island are inhospitable; landing is very difficult, and water is scarce everywhere, except at Port Havannah.

185. General Observations.—The great difficulty in nearly all the anchorages in the New Hebrides Archipelago is to find bottom without striking it. Often an ordinary-sized vessel will have barely swinging room and cannot veer chain.

The bottom is generally sand and coral or broken coral, and rarely mud or muddy sand.

Whenever the coast presents black sand one is tolerably certain of finding bottom, and sometimes at a considerable distance from the land.

CONDITIONS AS TO OCCUPATION AND IMPROVEMENTS.

The maximum quantity any lessee can hold is 640 acres of rural land.

Each lessee shall, within two years from the date of his lease, bring into cultivation not less than one-tenth of the land leased by him, and within four years of the said date, not less than one-fifth of the said land, and within six years from the date of his lease, in addition to the cultivation of one-fifth of the land, shall place on such land substantial improvements of a permanent character to the value of £1 for every acre of such land.

Improvements to be suitable to and consistent with the extent and character of the holdings, and none shall be allowed for in any valuation in excess of £5 for every acre of rural land.

The lease will contain an arbitration clause to enable, at the end of the term, the value of improvements to be determined for which an outgoing lessee should be paid by an incoming lessee. It will also provide that, in the event of there being no accepted tenderer for the new lease, the old lessee shall have the option of accepting a fresh lease for the same period and on the same conditions as his first lease, at a rental to be fixed by arbitration, minus the value of the improvements, which is also to be fixed by arbitration.

Tenderers may offer for any number of sections, but no tender will be accepted for more than 640 acres in the aggregate. Such sections must, however, be contiguous.

A deposit of one half-year's rent must be made at the time of tendering, the amount to be calculated on the highest amount offered by any tenderer for an aggregate area of 640 acres or any less quantity; but no deposit will be required for any quantity of land tendered for beyond the 640 acres.

Coloured lithographic plans of the above sections are on view at the several land offices throughout the colony.
