SUMMARY FOR THE MONTH OF FEBRUARY, 1926.

During the first fortnight of February conditions were dominated by three intense areas of low-pressure located eastward of the South Island, and strong southerly winds brought cold, unsettled weather and heavy rain, especially in the South. Fair weather predominated between the 14th and 21st, except about the 18th, when considerable rain fell in Westland, the effect of a westerly disturbance passing in the South. The latter portion of the month, though very changeable, was on the whole warmer, but on the 27th and 28th a strong southerly and general rains were experienced. This benefited the Hawke's Bay district, where dry conditions have persisted during the past six months. The total rainfall was in excess of the average over the South Island, except about Nelson and Collingwood. It was also above about Kawhia, Wanganui, and Foxton, but elsewhere in the North Island it was below the average. The difference was greatest in Otago, where the aggregate rain ranged from 100 to 200 per cent. above the mean. The month was remarkably cool, and on several occasions frosts occurred in places widely apart.

PRESS OPINIONS.

The Hon. G. M. Thomson in writing this manual has evidently taken up a labour of love. He writes not so much for the scientific as for the general reader. It is a valuable and likely to be one of the most popular works issued by the Board of Science and Art. It is a notable addition to Mr. Thomson's other works.—Evening Post, Wellington, N.Z.

A bright little book. Mr. Thomson has provided a book sufficiently scientific to be authoritative, and yet informal and simple enough to be interesting to the young and uneducated. We shall look forward eagerly to Part II.—Herald, Timaru, N.Z.

It is a book of unusual interest. There is nothing like it in print, and the wonder is that it has not been done before. Mr. Thomson is to be thanked for producing a work so useful and so timely. Technical terms and scientific language have been avoided as far as possible, with the result that we have a narrative as interesting as any romance. It will prove a valuable and useful book.—Evening Star, Dunedin, N.Z.
