During October rainfall was, as a rule, poorly distributed in time and place, and the 14th and 23rd were the only days on which it was at all of a general character. The total for the month was considerably below normal over the whole of the North Island, and in the Marlborough and Nelson Provinces in the South Island. Canterbury and Otago had a moderate excess, while in Westland the differences from normal were slight.

The pressure distribution was chiefly of the westerly type, and the disturbances of slight to moderate intensity. The changes were generally too rapid to allow of rain developing to any extent. On the 23rd, however, a very intense cyclone developed east of the South Island, and on the 24th the Chatham Island barometer fell to 29.07 inches. From the 23rd to 25th strong southerly winds to gales were experienced, and very cold temperatures prevailed in the rear of this cyclone. Light falls of snow occurred on the 23rd and 24th in various parts of the South Island and also in the high central area of the North Island. Ground frosts were reported on the mornings of the 25th and 26th, more especially in Canterbury and Otago, but the damage to fruit-trees was, fortunately, only slight.

There was a tendency for anticyclones to move in more northern latitudes, but one, which controlled the weather between the 25th and the 29th, was centred over New Zealand on the 27th, with pressure as high as 30.50 inches.

On the whole, fair to fine weather predominated, with moderate to strong north-westerly winds. The cold spell from 23rd to 25th was, however, severe, especially in Canterbury and Otago, and some losses of lambs occurred. Though dry, the month was a good spring month. It was particularly favourable for sheep, but less so, owing to the dryness, for the dairy industry.

PRESS OPINIONS.

The Hon. G. M. Thomson in writing this manual has evidently taken up a labour of love. He writes not so much for the scientific as for the general reader. It is a valuable and likely to be one of the most popular works issued by the Board of Science and Art. It is a notable addition to Mr. Thomson's other works.—Evening Post, Wellington, N.Z.

A bright little book. Mr. Thomson has provided a book sufficiently scientific to be authoritative, and yet informal and simple enough to be interesting to the young and uneducated. We shall look forward eagerly to Part II.—Herald, Timaru, N.Z.

It is a book of unusual interest. There is nothing like it in print, and the wonder is that it has not been done before. Mr. Thomson is to be thanked for producing a work so useful and so timely. Technical terms and scientific language have been avoided as far as possible, with the result that we have a narrative as interesting as any romance. It will prove a valuable and useful book.—Evening Star, Dunedin, N.Z.
