SUMMARY FOR THE MONTH OF OCTOBER, 1930.

General.—The past month has been, for the country as a whole, the coldest October experienced in New Zealand since the accurate recording of temperatures commenced. From all parts of the country come accounts of the coldness and backwardness of the season. October is the month in which pastures usually show rapid growth after the semi-dormant winter period, but this year the growth has been very poor in most districts. The stormy weather experienced during the month added to its severity. The adverse conditions as regards growth of vegetation have been accentuated, so far as most districts are concerned, also, by the lack of sufficient precipitation. In consequence, stock are generally in a somewhat backward condition. Frosts occurred on several days over large parts of the Dominion, and, in some cases, they were severe. A certain amount of damage was consequently caused to orchards and small crops, but generally speaking it does not appear to have been severe.

Rainfall.—Precipitation was greater than the average on the West Coast of the South Island, over most of Otago, and in scattered parts of the western districts of the North Island, especially around Auckland. Elsewhere there was a deficiency. Even in Central Otago some parts had less than the average amount. In North Auckland, and the East Cape, Gisborne, Hawke's Bay, and Wairarapa districts, around Wellington, and in Nelson, Marlborough, and North Canterbury, the month was a very dry one.

Snow fell on the ranges on the 14th, 17th to 19th, 22nd, 23rd, and 25th. The falls which occurred at various places on the 17th, 18th, and 19th were the heaviest, and extended to low levels in parts of the South Island. Hailstorms were frequent at many places.

Temperature.—As has been mentioned, temperatures were generally lower than had been recorded hitherto in New Zealand. At Napier, Hokitika, and Dunedin, one slightly colder October has been experienced, but at all other stations this year's was the coldest.

It is noteworthy that the present spell of abnormally cold weather has lasted, with only short breaks, over most of the country since June, 1929.

Storms and Pressure Systems.—At the beginning of the month, a deep depression was located to the east of the Dominion, and strong southerly winds and very cold temperatures prevailed during the first three days. A series of depressions of the westerly type followed. These caused squally and showery weather in western districts, more especially of the South Island, where the rain was heavy. Hail storms were rather frequent.

On the 13th a deep cyclonic depression developed at the eastern entrance to Bass Strait, and, moving eastwards, crossed North Auckland on the 15th. A secondary followed it on the 16th. Heavy rains fell on the 14th or 15th over most of the North Island.

This depression passed eastwards, but on the 17th commenced to deepen in the neighbourhood of the Chatham Islands. From the 17th to the 19th strong southerly winds and cold weather prevailed in consequence. The southerlies reached strong gale force in places and, on the 19th, some damage was done at Christchurch. There was much snow on the higher levels and thunder and hail in places.

Another spell of westerly weather followed, but pressure remaining low to the east, winds were more frequently from south of west than north of it. On the 22nd and 23rd very boisterous conditions prevailed. Damage was done by westerly gales in Taranaki Bight on the 22nd. Further snowfalls occurred on the high levels.

A depression which crossed the Dominion on the 24th developed a cyclone in its northern portion and, on the 25th, this was centred east of Hawke's Bay. The west to south winds in its rear were again particularly severe. Rain was widespread, many heavy falls being experienced. The 25th was the worst day, and considerable damage was done at Auckland on that day. A large petrol-storage tank partly collapsed under the force of the gale. Snow fell on the ranges. On the 26th there were severe thunderstorms from Auckland northwards, and at Kaitaia a small tornado developed from one of these.

A vigorous westerly depression crossed the South Island on the 30th and 31st, causing heavy rain in western districts.
