NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY, 1940.

General.—February was a most unseasonable month presenting a number of unusual features. Average pressures were low generally but the lowest values were in the south, where previous records were broken. The westerly type of situation, which is not common at this time of year, predominated throughout the month, so that strong winds were very persistent. There was some rain on most days in western and far southern districts, which had an exceptionally wet month. Sunshine and temperature suffered accordingly. East of the ranges in the rain shadows, where the rainfall was light, the winds have parched the countryside. Elsewhere pasture growth has been rapid and prolific and most crops are good. Dairy yields have been moderate to heavy, and all stock are very healthy. Although harvesting has been delayed by wind and rain, the past weeks have seen most of the Canterbury wheat successfully harvested. High winds have caused considerable damage to trees and serious loss in orchards. White butterflies and other pests were fairly prevalent.

Rainfall.—The Auckland Peninsula and some eastern areas—viz., Poverty Bay, Wairarapa, and North Canterbury—show appreciable rainfall deficits. Elsewhere the averages were exceeded. For Taranaki, Westland, and Southland the month was the wettest February on record and at some stations, mostly in Southland, it was the wettest of any month irrespective of season. In these areas flooding was very serious, and towards the end of the month the Canterbury rivers, fed by the heavy rains in the Alps, were unusually high. Thunder was frequent, especially in the far south, and was often accompanied by hail.

Temperatures.—Due to Föhn effects there were many hot, windy days in the east where temperatures averaged about normal. Excepting the far north, the rest of the country was cooler than the normal, and, in fact, the month was a record February for coldness in Central Otago and Westland, where the departures were as much as 5 degrees Fahrenheit. Although on several occasions snow fell on the ranges, temperatures were fairly uniform and no severe extremes were experienced. Some frosts occurred but they were quite light.

Sunshine.—West of the ranges sunshine figures were extremely poor, while to the east average values were exceeded. Blenheim had the high total of 270.6 hours.

Weather Sequence.—Fair weather prevailed at the beginning of the month, pressure being high to the north. By the 3rd a vigorous depression from the Tasman Sea had caused heavy rain in western districts and intermittent rain became widespread. On the 4th, with the advance of another anticyclone to the north, the weather cleared considerably but westerly winds were strong in many places. An extensive and active depression crossing New Zealand on the 6th resulted in strong northerly winds. Cloud increased and in western areas south of Taranaki intermittent rain developed extending to Otago and to Auckland. Winds then backed to west or south-west and continued strong. Conditions remained unsettled in the west, and some snow fell on the southern ranges, but meanwhile to the east the weather was for the most part fair. Barometers were very low to the south-east. On the 10th winds moderated, but a southerly change advancing from the south brought rain to eastern areas which had previously escaped. Temperatures became cooler and further snow fell in the mountains. A marked improvement occurred on the 11th.

From the 12th to the 17th many westerly disturbances passed with high winds blowing and rain falling continually in the west. More definite south-westerly changes gave showers in eastern areas also. Exceptional rain in Southland resulted in serious flooding in Invercargill on the 14th. The high-pressure system to the north on the 18th spread over the whole country on the following day, the weather being fine and mild generally, but northerly winds were still strong about Cook Strait. On the 20th the anticyclonic centre moved to the north-east, where it remained several

ESTATE OF CHARLES ROOKING CARTER.

In the matter of a certain bequest under the will of CHARLES ROOKING CARTER, of Wellington, Gentleman, deceased.

TAKE notice that a petition filed by the Royal Society of New Zealand to approve a scheme varying the terms of a certain bequest under the will of the above-named deceased will be heard in the Supreme Courthouse, Wellington, on Wednesday, the 1st day of May, 1940, at 10.30 a.m.

The bequest was of the sum of £50 for the purpose of erecting a brick room within which to house a library of books on New Zealand previously presented by the deceased to the Colonial Museum. The money was insufficient for the purpose and has been allowed to accumulate. It is now proposed to vary the terms of the bequest by spending the accumulated funds in the purchase of steel book-cases for housing the books in the Dominion Museum, in the upkeep of the books, and in adding further books as opportunity offers. The proposed variation has been approved by the Attorney-General.

Any person may inspect the scheme (without fee) at the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court at Wellington.
