Note on Change in Method of Publication.

AS a measure of economy in paper it has been decided after January, 1941, to publish in the Gazette the first two pages only of the monthly meteorological statistics and to eliminate the detailed rainfall records. An exception will be the inclusion of the 1940 rainfall data in the Gazette in March, 1941.

The monthly rainfall records for January, 1941, onwards will be included in an annual publication of the Meteorological Office, and anyone who desires to have detailed information on rainfall more promptly than by the medium of this annual publication should communicate with the Director, Meteorological Office, P.O. Box 722, Wellington C. 1.

NOTE.—A thunderstorm, accompanied by heavy rain and some hail, was experienced on the evening of the 15th. Lightning was also observed on the night of the 7th. On the afternoon and evening of the 8th frequent hail-showers occurred. Snow was unusually low down on the ranges after this cold spell.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER, 1940.

General Notes.—November was cool and rather unseasonable, but the weather considerably improved towards the end of the month. Showers caused some delays in shearing operations but on the whole the rain was welcomed by farmers, especially on the east coast of the South Island where falls were just sufficient to bring relief to the cereal crops at a critical time. Most types of crops promise good harvests and haymaking has started earlier than usual. The feed position is most satisfactory and stock are well advanced and healthy.

Rainfall.—The total for the month was unusually excessive in central Hawke's Bay, chiefly as the result of torrential rain on the 3rd. A surplus was recorded over the rest of the North Island with the exception of the south-western portion of the Auckland Province. Rainfall was lighter than usual over the major part of the South Island, but moderate excesses occurred in North Otago and about the southern sounds region. There was a good deal of thunderstorm activity throughout the month, the main displays being just after the middle of the month.

Temperatures.—Mean temperatures were below normal in many cases by 1° or 2°, but several days were very hot. Snow fell on the southern ranges on several occasions and hail was of fairly widespread occurrence. Temperatures were, however, on a much warmer level during the last part of the month.

Sunshine.—The duration of bright sunshine was under average in the Central Districts, but was considerably above over the northern half of the North Island as well as in Westland, Otago, and Southland.

Weather Sequence.—An extensive depression approaching during the 2nd caused a deterioration from the prevailing anti-cyclonic conditions and later brought light rain to most districts. One low-pressure centre which deepened over Hawke's Bay was responsible for very heavy rain in that region as well as for numerous south-westerly gales in central and northern districts. There was an improvement on the 5th before a new and deep depression advanced from the west. On this depression, a cyclonic centre developed off New Plymouth and moved across the North Island on the 7th. While in the far south conditions remained fine, elsewhere it was unsettled with rain at times and with snow on the ranges. Gales were experienced and there were thunderstorms accompanied by hail-showers.

Although conditions had improved generally by the 9th, another fairly extensive disturbance gave scattered but mainly light rain on the 10th and 11th, but under the influence of an anticyclone located to the north, the weather soon became fine and warm again. On the 13th a depression began to cross the South Island, steady rain developing in Westland. Scattered moderate falls later occurred over the rest of the South Island and scattered showers fell in western areas of the North Island. The southern and eastern coasts of the latter had thunderstorms with brief torrential downpours on the evening of the 15th.

The 16th was fine, but a depression near Lord Howe Island was developing into a cyclone which was the cause of widespread heavy rain setting in over the North Island on the 17th. With pressure low to the south-east and high to the west, south-westerly winds prevailed from the 19th to the 23rd. Conditions were cold and changeable and all districts had showery intervals, and Canterbury and Otago, in particular, received much-needed rain. At this period further snow fell on the ranges and some frosts occurred in the south.

An anticyclone, building up from the south, covered the Dominion on the 24th so that fine and warmer weather persisted for several days, but at the close of the month a disturbance affected the South Island where there was some light rain and a drop in temperatures.
