2. This order shall take effect on the day following the date of publication hereof in the Gazette.

3. In this order—

(a) A reference to a type of wave is a reference to the type of radio-electric emission so named and defined in Regulation 39 of the Radio Regulations 1932:

(b) "Authorized officer" has the same meaning as in the Shipping Radio Emergency Regulations 1941.

4. This order shall apply to all ships subject to the Shipping Control Emergency Regulations 1939 to which the Shipping Radio Emergency Regulations 1941 apply.

5. The master of every ship to which this order applies is responsible for compliance therewith on the part of all persons on board whether members of the crew or passengers.

6. Every such ship shall, in addition to the main aerial forming part of its radio-transmitting installation, be fitted with an auxiliary aerial for emergency use which shall be erected in a different plane from that of the main aerial.

When the ship is at sea both main and auxiliary aerials shall at all times be capable of immediate connection with the main radio transmitter by means of a switch or link. A spare length of aerial wire shall be carried on board for use in case the main and emergency aerials are destroyed or otherwise rendered useless.

7. On every ship there shall be provided and maintained radio-receiving apparatus as herein specified:—

- (i) A wireless receiver capable of receiving waves of Types A1, A2, and B on frequencies of from 6,000 kilocycles per second to 25,000 kilocycles per second:
Provided that until such apparatus is, in the opinion of the Naval Board, readily available it shall be sufficient compliance with the foregoing requirements if the receiver is capable of receiving waves of the types aforesaid on frequencies of from 6,000 kilocycles per second to 20,000 kilocycles per second.
- (ii) A wireless receiver capable of receiving waves of types A1, A2, and B on frequencies of from 15 kilocycles per second to 1,000 kilocycles per second; or
- (iii) In lieu of the apparatus specified in paragraphs (i) and (ii) of this clause a single wireless receiver capable of receiving waves of Types A1, A2, and B on all frequencies referred to in paragraphs (i) and (ii) of this clause:
- (iv) A wireless receiver separate from any receiver referred to in the preceding paragraphs of this clause and capable of receiving waves on frequencies from 488 kilocycles to 513 kilocycles:
- (v) Sufficient batteries to operate the receivers:
- (vi) Adequate mechanism to recharge the batteries while maintaining continuous reception on any one receiver.

8. On any ship there may, in addition to the apparatus hereinbefore referred to, be carried the following radio-receiving apparatus, namely:—

- (i) One set of direction-finding apparatus;
- (ii) One set of auto-alarm apparatus;
- (iii) One set of radio-telephony apparatus;
- (iv) One echometer sounding apparatus;
- (v) One radio-receiving set for use in emergency;

- (vii) One broadcast radio-receiving set with such loud-speaker extensions as may be desired for the use of members of the crew and passengers;
- (viii) If the apparatus described in the last preceding paragraph (vii) of this clause be not carried then one broadcast radio-receiving set installed in each mess-room or recreation-room provided for the use of members of the crew and one broadcast radio-receiving set installed for each class of passenger carried:

Provided, first, that the total number of receiving-sets authorized by this paragraph on any ship shall not exceed twelve in number:

Provided, secondly, that no extension loud-speaker shall be used with any apparatus installed under the authority of this paragraph.

(ix) A radio-receiving set installed in the master's cabin.

9. No radio-receiving apparatus shall be installed or used on any ship except such apparatus as is required or permitted by this order, and no other radio-receiving apparatus, whether the property of the shipowner or crew or passengers or of any other person, shall be carried on any ship except as cargo or except under seal and in the custody of the master.

10. No radio-receiving apparatus shall be installed or used on any ship without the personal approval of the master.

11. Every broadcast radio-receiving set installed under the authority of paragraph (vii) or paragraph (viii) of clause 8 hereof shall be fitted in a position approved by an authorized officer, and shall be secured so that it cannot be removed by any unauthorized person.

12. The electrical energy actuating every broadcast radio-receiving set installed under the authority of paragraph (vii) or paragraph (viii) of clause 8 hereof shall be controlled by a switch capable of being locked, and the key of every such lock shall be retained in the custody or under the direct control of the master.

13. No aerial shall be used in connection with any broadcast radio-receiving set installed under the authority of paragraph (vii), paragraph (viii), or paragraph (ix) of clause 8 hereof—

- (i) If any part of such aerial is within 50 ft. in any direction of the aerials of a direction-finder; or
- (ii) If the aerial is liable to set up electrical interference with any other of the ship's radio installations:

Provided that this clause shall not apply to an aerial fitted in a permanent manner the position and character of which have been approved by an authorized officer.
