The Potatoes (Transportation) Order 1945, No. 2

PURSUANT to powers conferred on the Primary Industries Controller by the Primary Industries Emergency Regulations 1939,* and duly delegated to me by the said controller pursuant to clause 5 of the said regulations, I, Ross Pappill Fraser, the Director of the Internal Marketing Division of the Marketing Department, do hereby order and direct as follows:—

1. This Order may be cited as the Potatoes (Transportation) Order 1945, No. 2, and shall come into force on the 11th day of December, 1945.

2. While this Order remains in force no person shall, except with the permission of an officer of the Internal Marketing Division of the Marketing Department, consign any potatoes for sale from the area contained within a 15-mile radius of the Pukekohe Post-office.

3. Unless sooner revoked or extended this Order shall continue in force until the 15th day of January, 1946, and no longer.

Dated at Wellington, this 10th day of December, 1945.

R. P. FRASER, Director.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze the data. This includes both primary and secondary data collection techniques. The analysis focuses on identifying trends and patterns over time, which is crucial for making informed decisions.

The third part of the report details the results of the study. It shows that there has been a significant increase in sales volume over the period analyzed. This growth is attributed to several factors, including improved marketing strategies and a strong focus on customer service.

The fourth section discusses the challenges faced during the study. One major challenge was the difficulty of obtaining complete data from all participants. Despite these obstacles, the research team managed to gather a substantial amount of information that provides valuable insights into the market.

Finally, the document concludes with a series of recommendations for future research and business operations. It suggests that continued investment in data analysis tools and methods will be essential for staying competitive in the current market environment.

The author expresses their appreciation to the participants and the research team for their hard work and dedication. They hope that the findings of this study will be helpful to other businesses looking to optimize their operations and improve their financial performance.
