Table with columns for Station, Height of Station Above M.S.L., Air Temperatures in Degrees (Fahrenheit), Rainfall in Inches, and Bright Sunshine. Includes a section for LATE RETURNS.

NOTE.—At stations where departures from normal are in parentheses, the temperature record has been maintained for less than ten years, the rainfall record for less than twenty years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921-1950.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR OCTOBER 1952

General.—With relatively warm temperatures and adequate but not excessive rainfall, October contributed very favourable conditions for the spring season.

Crops and pastures made excellent growth, and dairy production was at a high level. In the sheep country, too, conditions were generally very favourable and the shearing programme in the North Island was reported to be well advanced.

Rainfall.—Rainfall was above average in the provinces of Auckland (except parts of Northland), North Taranaki, Canterbury, Otago and Southland, with more than double the average amount on the Canterbury Plains and in Central Otago.

Temperature.—Mean temperatures were generally at least 1° F. above the average. In the interior conditions were even milder, and over a wide area temperatures were 2-3 degrees above average.

Sunshine.—Over most of the North Island and in Nelson and Marlborough the duration of bright sunshine was slightly above average. There was a slight deficiency in Hawke's Bay and the far north and also over much of the South Island.

Weather Sequence.—Apart from some rain in the south at the start, fair to cloudy weather prevailed for the first few days during the passage of an intense anticyclone across the North Island.

After travelling rapidly across the North Tasman Sea on the 6th, an active depression continued on south-eastwards to pass centrally over New Zealand on the afternoon of the 8th.

A general improvement took place with the arrival of an anticyclone whose centre passed over Auckland on the 10th.

night of the 11th a cold front moved in from the south-east over Otago and Southland accompanied by rain and a sharp drop in temperature. Although an anticyclone to the south-east rapidly intensified, the northern part of the front became stationary just out to sea without causing any appreciable deterioration in the east coast weather.

Westerlies replaced north-easterlies after the passage of an active trough on the 14th. On that occasion the rain failed to penetrate as far as eastern districts between Canterbury and Hawke's Bay.

The weather showed signs of improvement on the 22nd, but another cold front which began to advance north-eastwards across the South Island on the morning of the 23rd brought a further period of showers.

Rising temperatures and a change to northerly winds on the 28th were accompanied by an outbreak of widespread shower activity over the northern half of the North Island.
