Table with columns: Station, Height of Station Above M.S.L., Air Temperatures in Degrees (Fahrenheit), Rainfall in Inches, and Bright Sunshine. Includes a sub-table for LATE RETURNS for East Gore in Jan and Feb 1954.

NOTE.—At stations where departures from normal are in parentheses, the temperature record has been maintained for less than ten years, the rainfall record for less than twenty years.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR MARCH 1954

General.—March was cloudy and warm. It was also much wetter than usual, especially in the North Island.

A tropical storm passed down the west coast of the North Island from the 6th to the 8th. Auckland Province suffered damage from the north-easterly gales and flooding.

Rainfall.—Rainfall was more than twice the normal value over the greater part of the Auckland Province, in the Wairarapa, and in the Nelson-Motueka-Takaka area.

For Auckland City the total of 10.54 in. was the highest for March in 100 years of records. At Shaftesbury, near Te Aroha, the total fall for the month exceeded 26 in., nearly all of which fell from the 2nd to the 8th.

Thunderstorms were more frequent and widespread than usual. One which was reported from Invercargill on 26th and another at Napier on the 31st were exceptionally violent.

Temperatures.—It was the warmest March since 1938. Temperatures were everywhere appreciably above normal, and the departure exceeded 2° F. except over most of the Auckland Province and on the West Coast.

Sunshine.—Sunshine was appreciably below normal over most of the country. The deficiency exceeded 40 hours over the North Island, excluding Northland, the Bay of Plenty, Gisborne, and the Wellington Province.

Weather Sequence.—On the 1st a belt of high pressure covered the South Island and the area to the east, the main centre being beyond the Chatham Islands.

thunderstorms, and there were also light falls on the east coast of the South Island. A tropical cyclone which formed off the Queensland coast moved south-eastwards, causing winds over the North Island to increase and become more north-easterly.

The weather became temporarily fair for two or three days, but on the 12th and 13th there was considerable rain on the West Coast with the approach of an extensive trough of low pressure across the Tasman Sea.

On the 20th a trough of low pressure brought general rain, except from Cape Palliser to East Cape. Showers persisted over the South Island on the 21st in the south-westerly airstream, but on the following day the weather was fair.

Pressure remained low over the country, with an anticyclone stationary near Tasmania. On the 28th the weather deteriorated again in the far south with the approach of a vigorous cold front.
