NOTE—At stations where departures from normal have an asterisk, the temperature record has been maintained for less than 10 years, the rainfall record for less than 20 years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921–50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR JUNE 1960

General: June was mild and rather cloudy, with an unusually high frequency of easterly winds. In most districts stock were reported to be in good condition, with reasonable supplies of winter feed. However, some farmers, mainly in Northland, Gisborne and Hawke's Bay, and Southland, were finding the ground too wet after considerable rain.

Rainfall: Rainfall was appreciably above average in eastern districts. North and central Canterbury and coastal Otago received double the normal value. On the Kaikoura and north Canterbury coast it was one of the wettest Junes on record, with totals of 11–12 inches, of which more than three-quarters fell from the 19th to the 22nd.

It was drier than average in Manawatu and on the Wairapa Plain, in the Buller district, and in parts of inland north Otago. Some stations in these areas received only half the normal rainfall.

Heavy rain caused flooding in Northland and Gisborne on the 8th; in parts of Canterbury, Otago, and Southland from the 19th to the 22nd; and in Northland and the Hauraki Plains on the 28th.

A violent thunderstorm brought some brief but exceptionally heavy rain to the Christchurch area on the morning of the 13th. Many thunderstorms were also reported in the Auckland Province on the 18th.

Temperatures: Temperatures were warmer than average, mainly by 1–2 degrees.

Snow fell on the high country of the South Island on the 19th. Falls also occurred on the mountains of both islands about the 6th, 10th, 15th, and 29th.

Some unusually frosty weather was reported in parts of central Otago during the last six days of the month. At Alexandra the temperature rose above freezing point on only two days of the six, and then only by a degree.

Sunshine: Sunshine was below average over the greater part of the country. The deficiency exceeded 20 hours in Central Otago, and also in parts of Canterbury, Nelson, and Taranaki. For Alexandra, with a total of 54 hours, it was the cloudiest June in 32 years of record.

Northern Northland was favoured with 20–30 hours more sunshine than usual.

Weather Sequence: On the 1st most districts received some rain during the passage of a trough of low pressure and a small depression. During the next two days an anticyclone crossed the North Island and generally the weather improved. However, pressures were low to the south, and western and far southern districts of the South Island received considerable rain. During the 4th and 5th a depression from the south Tasman Sea crossed the South Island, and the rain spread to other districts except Gisborne, Hawke's Bay, and most of Canterbury. The associated cold front also crossed the country, but the development of a depression to the northwest of Northland on the 6th retarded the motion of this front and caused it to move southward as a warm front for four days. The depression moved slowly southeastward across the North Island. Strong easterlies brought heavy rain to most of the Auckland and Hawke's Bay Provinces, and the weather was unsettled over the remainder of the North Island. In the south it was mainly coastal districts which suffered, and rainfalls were much lighter.

A change to a more westerly type of situation occurred on the 10th, and on this and the following day rain was restricted mainly to western and southern coasts of the South Island. However, a few showers were reported in the Auckland Province. There was another period of general rain with the passage of a trough on the 12th and, early on the following morning, a violent thunderstorm around Christchurch brought some brief but exceptionally heavy rain. Apart from this the 13th was a day of south-westerlies, with showers in a few districts. For the next three days an anticyclone over the North Island brought fair weather to most parts of the country. However, rain was reported on the 14th in Invercargill, and showers affected the West Coast and some coastal districts of the North Island at times.

With the approach of a complex trough of low pressure, rain set in on the 17th on the West Coast and in Northland and Bay of Plenty. A depression formed and moved slowly eastward across the country during the next four days, and rain soon became general. Many thunderstorms were reported in the Auckland Province on the 18th. After winds had turned to cold southerlies over the South Island on the 19th there were two days of heavy rain in Canterbury and Otago, with some flooding; but the weather cleared on the West Coast. Snow was reported on the high country. On the 22nd and 23rd the depression was moving away to the east of the North Island and rain was confined mainly to eastern districts, clearing from the south.

During the last seven days of the month northern and eastern districts of the North Island received considerable rain as a depression remained almost stationary to the west of Northland. On the 28th and 29th thunderstorms were reported in Northland, and heavy rain caused surface flooding on some highways. The South Island enjoyed good weather apart from rain at times on the Kaikoura coast and on the last three days in Southland. By the 30th conditions had improved over most of the Auckland Province as the depression moved past North Cape and away to the east.
