NOTE—At stations where departures from normal have an asterisk, the temperature record has been maintained for less than 10 years, the rainfall record for less than 20 years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921–50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY 1961

General: February was a cloudy month. In the North Island it was also a month of low rainfall. In most districts the soil was still reasonably moist on account of the good rains in the last half of January, and pastures were still green. However, in parts of the Manawatu the ground was reported to be very dry.

The comparatively wet weather experienced in Canterbury and Otago proved beneficial for pastures and was greatly appreciated by the sheep farmers. On the other hand, in these districts it was not a good month for harvesting, and some of the wheat crop was spoilt.

Rainfall: In the North Island rainfall was at least 25 per cent below average, except in Taranaki, parts of southern Hawke's

Bay, and the islands of the Hauraki Gulf. In Bay of Plenty, Gisborne, and most of Northland it ranged from a sixth to a half of normal.

In the South Island rainfall was mainly close to average. However, most of inland Canterbury and Central Otago were wetter than usual, while Marlborough (apart from the Kaikoura coast) was drier.

Temperatures: Temperatures were mainly within about a degree of the normal value. However, in Marlborough, Nelson, and Westland they were two degrees warmer than average.

Sunshine: Sunshine was below average over the greater part of the country, and deficiencies of over 30 hours were recorded in some western districts of both islands and also in some central districts of the North Island and in Central Otago.

Compensation for Refugees

THE Acting Minister of External Affairs has been informed that an Agreement has been concluded between the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the German Federal Government which could be of interest to persons in New Zealand. The Agreement is in favour of refugees who were persecuted under the national-socialist regime in disregard of human rights.

Under the Agreement the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany has undertaken to place at the disposal of the High Commissioner for Refugees the sum of 45 million deutschmarks for assistance to certain types of refugees. Persons eligible to apply for assistance must show that they were persecuted under the German national-socialist regime for reasons of nationality, and that their circumstances justify some assistance. They must, in addition, have been refugees on 1 October 1953; and they must not hitherto have obtained any payment under German federal measures for the indemnification of victims of persecution. Any persons in New Zealand who think they may qualify for assistance under this agreement should write directly to:
