NOTE.—At stations where departures from normal have an asterisk, the temperature record has been maintained for less than 10 years, the rainfall record for less than 20 years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921–50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR DECEMBER 1961

General: For the third successive month barometers were unusually high over New Zealand; and December was warm and for the most part sunny and very dry. From Taranaki and Hawke's Bay to Canterbury the weather had been comparatively dry since the end of September, and in some areas there was little or no green feed. Elsewhere conditions were more variable, but still mainly too dry, except in Southland and Bay of Plenty. Sheep (especially lambs) were losing condition in some districts, and dairy production was also suffering.

Rainfall: Rainfall was mainly less than half the average value, except over the greater part of the Auckland Province and in Southland. In a number of areas it was below a quarter, especially north of Kaitiaki, to the north and east of Kaipara Harbour, around the western side of Egmont, the Napier-Hastings area, the Marton area, around Christchurch, and in some inland districts of Nelson, Marlborough, and Canterbury.

The only areas appreciably wetter than normal were the greater part of Bay of Plenty north of Rotorua, eastern Coromandel, and just south of Hamilton. Around Whakatane it was particularly wet, with totals up to 12 in., of which more than half fell on the 3rd and 4th.

For the three months October-December rainfall was the lowest in more than 50 years of record for a number of stations in the southern half of the North Island and also in Marlborough and Canterbury. These stations included Marshlands (Blenheim) .95 in., Hastings 1.24 in., Christchurch 1.4 in., Palmerston North 2.7 in., Ashburton 2.7 in., Wellington 4 in., New Plymouth 6 in.

Temperatures: Temperatures were warmer than normal, mainly by 3-4 degrees. Departures exceeding 4 degrees were recorded on the central plateau of the North Island and in some inland districts of Canterbury and Otago.

Sunshine: Sunshine was mainly above average, by 30-90 hours. Western districts were particularly favoured, with departures exceeding 50 hours. Some of the highest totals were recorded at Foxton, Wellington, New Plymouth, and Wanganui. In the last three centres it was the sunniest December for at least 25 years.

Less sunshine than normal was recorded in eastern Northland, Bay of Plenty, Gisborne, and parts of South Canterbury. The only station with a deficit of over 30 hours was Kerikeri.

Weather Sequence: The month opened with a well-defined trough off the north-east coast of the Auckland Province, causing some rain over most of the North Island and also in parts of the South Island. Considerable falls were recorded in the Rotorua-Taupo area. From the 2nd to the 7th a belt of high pressure extended from the Tasman Sea across New Zealand and far to the east, but pressure remained low to the north as a depression near New Caledonia moved slowly southward. For most of the country this was a period of fine, sunny weather. However, moist easterly winds brought showery weather to Northland and at times also to Gisborne and Bay of Plenty. In addition a weak trough brought some light rain to the southern half of the South Island on the 2nd and 3rd.

By the 8th the depression to the north was quite close to Northland and pressure was also falling in the south with the passage of a deep depression to the west of Campbell Island. Some rain extended over the whole of the North Island, with considerable falls in Bay of Plenty. On the following day there was still rain over the greater part of the North Island and it extended also to the West Coast. A weak ridge of high pressure brought mainly fair weather on the 10th.

For the next four days a trough of low pressure moved slowly north-eastward over the country, accompanied by a period of rain, mainly light. Another trough affected mainly eastern districts, on the 15th. From the 16th to the 19th an anticyclone passed slowly across New Zealand, with fine weather.

Pressures remained high, but a weak trough caused some light rain on the 20th and 21st in Southland and on the 22nd in South Canterbury. Another weak trough which passed over during the next three days brought rain at first to the West Coast and later some light falls to eastern districts and Bay of Plenty. From the 26th to the 28th an anticyclone covered the country, and the weather was fine, apart from a few isolated showers.

There was a deterioration during the last three days of the month as a shallow depression became almost stationary over the north-east Tasman Sea and a trough of low pressure moved slowly across New Zealand. There was rain on the West Coast and over most of the Auckland Province and also in parts of Southland, Nelson, and North Taranaki.
