NOTE—At stations where departures from normal have an asterisk, the temperature record has been maintained for less than 10 years, the rainfall record for less than 20 years. Rainfall normals have been revised and now refer to the standard period 1921-50. Where observations are not available for the whole period, or where the site of the rain gauge has been changed, the normals are partly interpolated.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER 1962

General: November was unusually sunny, and also somewhat warmer than usual. In the middle fortnight the weather was for the most part settled, but the rains at the beginning and end of the month were mainly adequate. Stock and crops were in good condition in most districts. However, it was somewhat too dry in parts of Northland, Gisborne, and Hawke's Bay; and in the Waitomo-Taumarunui area it was too wet, and a number of cases of fly strike were reported in lambs.

Rainfall: Rainfall was only about half the average value in Gisborne and Hawke's Bay, and three-quarters in Northland and also Central Otago.

It was appreciably wetter than usual in the Waikato - Waitomo - North Taranaki area, in coastal districts of South Canterbury, and North Otago, and also in parts of Marlborough and Nelson. In most of these areas the surplus was 50 to 100 per cent.

A violent thunderstorm affected parts of North Otago and South Canterbury on the 29th and it was reported to have been accompanied by unusually heavy rain and hail in the Windsor district, north-west of Oamaru.

Temperatures: Temperatures were mainly above average by 1-2 degrees, highest departures being recorded in parts of the Thames - Bay of Plenty area. This was the fourteenth successive month with temperatures above average.

Snow fell on the ranges during a spell of westerly winds from the 4th to the 8th.

Sunshine: Except for parts of South Canterbury and Central Otago, the whole country was favoured with sunshine above average. The surplus amounted to over 60 hours on parts of the West Coast and to 30-50 hours in most of the Marlborough and Wellington Provinces. Elsewhere the surplus was mainly 20-30 hours, but less in coastal districts of Otago and Southland.

Weather sequence: For the first eight days the weather was very unsettled. A depression over the central Tasman Sea which had been affecting New Zealand since 28 October moved on to the South Island. At first Southland and most of Otago were the only areas without some rain. However, the weather deteriorated in this part of the country on the 3rd, with a violent thunderstorm and heavy rain at Invercargill. For the next three days the depression lay to the south of the South Island and unstable westerlies brought general rain, with thunderstorms in many areas. However, there were only light falls in most eastern districts. Temperatures were cool, with snow on the ranges. Similar conditions persisted on the 7th and 8th as another depression passed to the south.

By contrast, the period from the 9th to the 17th was marked by mainly fine weather. For the first half of this period a belt of high pressure covered the country. However, on the 13th and 14th a weak trough brought some rain to Fiordland, South Westland, and coastal Otago. The 15th was generally fine, under the influence of an anticyclone; but on the 16th a small depression to the north-east caused considerable rain in Waikato and Bay of Plenty. The 17th was fair or fine, apart from rain in Fiordland associated with the approach of a trough of low pressure.

The trough, which was associated with a deep depression to the south, crossed New Zealand on the 18th and 19th with heavy rain on the West Coast, some rain over the remainder of the South Island, and light falls in the Wellington and Taranaki provinces. An anticyclone brought two more days of fine weather, apart from some rain in Fiordland. However, on the 22nd and 23rd a slow-moving trough was accompanied by a belt of rain, mainly light, as far north as New Plymouth and Napier. A ridge of high pressure was accompanied by brief fine weather on the 24th.

The last six days of the month, like the first eight days, were unsettled. At first a trough associated with a depression to the south brought general rain, except in most eastern districts. Another trough affected initially only western and far southern districts of the South Island, on the 27th. However, it became slow-moving over the North Island during the next three days, with the formation of a small depression, and some rain affected most areas except the West Coast. The rain was mainly light, except in North Taranaki and Taumarunui and also in parts of Canterbury and North Otago.

APPLICATION OF THIS ORDER

3. This order applies with respect to sales by way of retail of all cornsacks other than secondhand cornsacks sold in New Zealand.

FIXING MAXIMUM RETAIL PRICES OF CORNSACKS TO WHICH THIS ORDER APPLIES

(4) Any freight charges imposed by a retailer pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this clause shall be shown separately on the appropriate invoice.
