NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR JUNE 1964

General: June was a comparatively dry month in the South Island, and also cloudier than usual over most of the country. In general farmers were finding the winter a good one, with some growth still in many areas. The long dry spell which had affected Hawke's Bay and other eastern districts since October was broken by heavy rain; but in some areas the rain was too late and there was a shortage of winter feed.

Rainfall: Rainfall was less than half the average value in the South Island, except for Nelson and Marlborough and the south coast. In parts of North and Central Otago totals were exceptionally low. Clyde (Central Otago) received only 0.03 in., the lowest in nearly 70 years of record; and Oamaru had 0.18 in., the lowest in 80 years of record.

Central and western districts of the North Island and Northland were mainly somewhat drier than average. However, near the east coast from Cape Palliser to East Cape and also in parts of Coromandel rainfall was from one and a half to three times the average value. The 12th to the 14th and the 21st and 22nd were two periods with heavy rain in parts of the North Island. During the 21st and 22nd Warkworth (north of Auckland) received 5.38 in., and flooding was reported in this district. Some heavy falls were also reported at this time in Gisborne, Hawke's Bay and Wairarapa.

Temperatures: Temperatures were close to average, except in Northland, where they were a degree above. A cold spell on the 9th and 10th brought snow to low levels in parts of Southland, Otago, and Canterbury.

Sunshine: Sunshine was below average by 10 to 45 hours except in the Taranaki-Taumarunui area, on the West Coast, in coastal Otago, and in the Otago Lakes District. Deficiencies of more than 30 hours were reported from parts of Bay of Plenty, Marlborough, Canterbury, and Central Otago. Tauranga had its lowest June sunshine in 32 years of record.

Weather Sequence: A spell of settled weather associated with the passage of an anticyclone across the country had commenced on 30th May and it finished on 1st June.

On the 2nd a small depression and its associated trough crossed the country, with fairly general rain. However, most of Canterbury and Hawke's Bay missed the rain.

During the period from the 3rd to the 11th south-westerlies predominated, with very unsettled conditions in Southland. An anticyclone over the Tasman Sea was moving eastward. Showers affected many districts on the 3rd, but were dying out on the 4th; and for the next two days only a few were reported outside Southland. A temporary change from south-westerlies occurred over parts of the North Island on the 7th as a trough and small depression affected mainly Northland. However, south-westerly conditions returned on the 8th, with rain at times on the West Coast. A cold change on the 9th and 10th brought snow to low levels in Southland, Otago, and Canterbury.

From the 12th to the 14th a depression crossed the country north of Wellington, with rain over the North Island and the northern half of the South Island. Some considerable falls were reported in Wairarapa, Wellington, and parts of the Auckland Province. On the 15th the depression lay to the east of the North Island, and rain persisted in Bay of Plenty and Gisborne.

A trough of low pressure which moved on to the South Island on the 16th crossed the country during the next two days. There was considerable rain on the West Coast and some light rain around Cook Strait and on the west coast of the North Island. The progress of the front was delayed by the development of a small depression to the north, and by the 19th this depression lay to the east of the North Island, causing rain in Gisborne and Hawke's Bay. However, on the following day a small anticyclone was centred east of the South Island and the weather was mainly fair.

A complete depression soon started to affect Northland and Auckland. One centre of low pressure remained stationary over the Tasman Sea while a second centre moved south-eastwards over Northland. On the 22nd and 23rd rain spread over the whole North Island and parts of Marlborough and North Canterbury. Some heavy falls were reported from Gisborne and Hawke's Bay; and also near the east coast just north of Auckland City, with flooding.

The weather remained unsettled over most of the Auckland Province from the 24th to the 29th as two more small depressions and their associated troughs crossed Northland. Elsewhere it was mainly fair, under the influence of a weak ridge of high pressure; but light rain affected Manawatu, Wellington, the Kaikoura coast, and Southland at times. By the 30th an anticyclone centred near the Chatham Islands extended on to New Zealand and the rain had cleared, except in Coromandel.
