Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963 and in the matter of an application by Transworld Publications Ltd., of London, in respect of a paperback edition of Another Country by James Baldwin.

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

THE Tribunal has been called upon to consider an application made by Transworld Publications Ltd., of London—with the consent of the Minister of Justice—in respect of a paperback edition of the book Another Country by James Baldwin—whether it is indecent or not, or alternatively for a decision as to its classification.

The application was made some time ago but the hearing had been adjourned, pending the outcome of an appeal to the Supreme Court regarding a paperback edition of Lady Chatterley's Lover in respect of which the Tribunal—by a majority—had declined to impose a restriction limiting circulation to persons over 18 years of age. The Supreme Court (in a majority decision) rejected the appeal.

At the hearing before us Mr R. A. Heron, on behalf of the publishers, made brief submissions. No submissions were made on behalf of the Secretary for Justice.

Our decision in respect of the hard-back edition of Another Country—given in March 1964—was that the book, presenting as it does a powerful and forceful picture expressed sincerely and honestly, was not indecent. We made the observation that the dust cover was simple and dignified and that the price at which the book was sold—26s.—was a relevant consideration. In fact the book had been on sale for some time, and about 1,400 copies had been sold. We said too, that “were it to be published in a cheap edition with a suggestive cover our view might well be otherwise”.

The book as now submitted to us is a cheap edition—it is to be retailed at 6s. 3d.—but the cover is neither lurid nor suggestive. It is simple and dignified. Just as we held that the hard-back edition did not call for condemnation as indecent, so too, we hold the same opinion regarding the paperback edition now submitted to us.

We are not disposed to make any order restricting distribution and hold accordingly that the book is not indecent in terms of the Indecent Publications Act 1963.

K. M. GRESSON, Chairman.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR AUGUST 1965

General: August was marked by an unusually high frequency of winds from an easterly quarter, with excessive cloud and rain in Gisborne and Hawke's Bay. In these areas especially, but also in other parts of the North Island, the wet weather caused the loss of many lambs. However, in Southland, Otago, and South Canterbury the weather was comparatively dry but frosty, with better conditions for stock.

A local tornado, said to have been accompanied by a fireball, did some damage at Cobden (Greymouth) on the 10th.

Rainfall: Rainfall was two to five times the average value in Gisborne and Hawke's Bay, also in Coromandel and about Auckland city. Elsewhere in the North Island, except in western districts from Waitomo to Manawatu, rainfall was also somewhat above average. In the South Island, west of a line from Nelson to Christchurch, rainfall was below average, mainly by 25 per cent. Central and North Otago received less than half the average value.

Two totals of 35 in. were recorded, one at Makororo, inland from East Cape, and the other at Maraetotara, south-east of Hastings. Flooding was reported in parts of Gisborne and Hawke's Bay following heavy rain from the 10th to the 15th. At Maraetotara nearly 20 in. was recorded during the 13th and 14th.

Auckland city had a total of 12.76 in., the highest August rainfall in well over a century of records. More than 9 in. of this fell in three days, the 25th to the 27th, with some flooding, slips, and landslides.

Temperatures: Temperatures were 1-2 degrees above average in central and most eastern districts of the North Island. On the other hand, they were 2-3 degrees below average in Southland and Central Otago.

The spell of cold snowy weather at the end of July persisted for the first six days of August, with snow in some eastern and central districts of the North Island and light falls even in Waikato and Auckland, an unusual occurrence. Snow also affected roads in the Taupo-Taihape area from the 21st to the 23rd.

Sunshine: Sunshine was more than 50 hours below average in Gisborne and Hawke's Bay; and Napier's total of 93 hours was the lowest for August in 58 years of record. Over the remainder of the North Island and in coastal Canterbury sunshine was mainly 10-40 hours below average. The West Coast, Central Otago, and Southland were favoured with 15-45 hours above average.

Weather Sequence: The weather for the first six days of August was in the main a continuation of that experienced in the last three days of July. It was dominated by cold southerlies or south-easterlies with further rain in Wellington and eastern districts of the North Island and more snow on the high country, especially about the main ranges and in the Taupo-Taihape area. The depression near the Chatham Islands moved away north-eastward very slowly, while the anticyclone initially over the Tasman Sea moved south-eastward over the South Island and to the east.

On the 7th and 8th the weather was generally settled as the anticyclone extended over the whole country.

Conditions soon deteriorated again, except near the east coast from Oamaru to Gisborne, as a depression crossed the South Island and a second depression developed to the north on the slow-moving trough associated with the first depression. Considerable falls of rain were reported on the 10th and 11th in Northland, Bay of Plenty, Nelson, and parts of Westland. During the next four days the depression to the north deepened and remained almost stationary, while pressures were relatively high over the South Island. The weather cleared in the north and west and over Otago and Southland; but rain moved to eastern districts as far south as Timaru, with some exceptional falls on the East Coast and in Hawke's Bay, resulting in serious flooding. By the 16th the depression had lost intensity and the rain was lighter; but with the approach of another depression over the Tasman Sea rain had commenced in Westland and Buller.

As the depression over the Tasman Sea moved slowly across the South Island with an associated trough of low pressure during the next four days, rain was again fairly general except in eastern districts, which received little or none. Pressures soon rose in the south, but a series of depressions crossed the North Island from the 21st to the 24th; and winds turned to cold south-easterlies. Rain was general as far south as Westport and Kaikoura and also on the east coast to Invercargill. Some considerable falls were reported in the Wellington Province. Snow was reported once again well down on the high country, especially in the Taupo-Taihape district.

By the 25th an anticyclone was centred over the Chatham Islands, and during this and the next three days a trough and a small depression were stationary near Auckland with excessive rain, causing slips, landslides, and flooding in this district. Rain was also reported at first over the remainder of the North Island and in Nelson, Marlborough, and North Canterbury. However, by the 27th the weather had cleared except over the Auckland and Hawke's Bay Provinces. On the 29th the depression was still centred to the north-east and rain was still falling east of a line from about Coromandel to Waipukurau; while at the same time the weather was deteriorating in Fiordland and Southland with the approach of a trough of low pressure from the south-west.

During the last two days of the month an anticyclone covered the Tasman Sea and a weak trough of low pressure crossed the South Island. Rain affected the West Coast, and there were also light falls on the Southland and Otago coast and a few showers in Auckland.
