LATE RETURNS

The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. The standard periods for normals are: for temperature 1931-60, for rainfall 1921-50, and for sunshine 1935-60. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR OCTOBER 1965

General: October was a cool month and in many areas also rather dry. In Marlborough and Bay of Plenty, after two months with very little rain conditions were becoming very dry with a serious effect on pastures.

A particularly strong north-westerly gale buffeted inland Canterbury on the 3rd. In some areas it was reported to be even more destructive than the gale of 13 July 1945.

Rainfall: Over the greater part of the country rainfall was 25 per cent below average. In Bay of Plenty and Marlborough it was less than half; and in both of these areas it was the second month in succession with rainfall well below average.

There were two main areas with rainfall above average. The first included the whole of Southland, Otago except for coastal districts from about Dunedin northward, and inland South Canterbury. In parts of Central Otago and inland Southland it was twice as wet as the normal value.

Temperatures: Except in parts of the Gisborne district temperatures were below normal, mainly by 2 degrees. In Southland and Central Otago departures were as high as 3 degrees.

On the 6th a cold front brought snow to the high country of both islands extending also to low levels in parts of the South Island including Dunedin, Christchurch, and Nelson.

Sunshine: Sunshine was somewhat above normal over the greater part of the country, and some eastern districts were favoured with a surplus of 30 hours or more. In western and northern districts of both islands sunshine was close to or somewhat below average, with deficits of up to 30 hours in Northland and Manawatu.

Weather Sequence: The westerly conditions which had predominated during the last three weeks of September persisted for the first five days of October. Two very deep depressions passed to the south and the associated troughs crossed the country. The weather was unsettled on the West Coast and in Southland with frequent periods of rain, which extended at times to inland districts of Otago and Canterbury and also many parts of the North Island.

Gales buffeted many districts and they were reported to be exceptionally strong in inland Canterbury on the 3rd.

On the 6th a small depression formed off the Otago coast and moved rapidly north-eastward with an associated cold front. Snow fell on the high country of both islands and to low levels in many areas, including Dunedin, Christchurch, and Nelson.

During the 10th and 11th a trough of low pressure moved over the country, with some light rain in western districts of both islands. As the trough reached Gisborne a small depression, developed on it, causing considerable rain there and in Hawke's Bay on the 12th and 13th, with some rain also extending at times to other parts of the North Island and to Marlborough.

From the 20th to the 22nd a small depression with its associated trough of low pressure moved eastward across the North Island, while another trough crossed the South Island. Rain was reported on the West Coast and in western and northern districts of the North Island. As pressures rose on the 23rd with an anticyclone over the Tasman Sea, the weather improved generally, but some showers were reported in Gisborne, Hawke's Bay, Manawatu, and Invercargill.

From the 25th to the 29th a trough of low pressure moved rather slowly northward over the country, with some rain in all districts, heaviest in Buller. A small depression formed on the trough to the north and moved on to the Auckland Province, with further rain on the 30th and 31st. On the last day of the month a depression also passed close to Southland, with rain there and in Otago and some heavy falls on the West Coast.
