*Sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR OCTOBER 1966

General: Barometers were high over New Zealand during October, and it was marked by a comparative absence of winds from a westerly quarter. The month was sunny and dry.

A small local tornado caused some damage in Remuera, Auckland on the 8th.

Rainfall: Over most of the country rainfall was about half the average value. However, in the Gisborne district, on the Canterbury Plains, and on the North Otago coast it was mainly somewhat above average.

Daily falls of as much as 4 in. were recorded on the 8th on the East Coast during the passage of a depression over this district.

Temperatures: Temperatures were mainly close to average. However, they were 1-2 degrees below average in eastern districts of the North Island from Wairarapa to Bay of Plenty, and also in Auckland and parts of Northland.

Sunshine: Sunshine was above average by 20-70 hours, except in Northland, Southland, and most of Otago, where it was close to average. It was the sunniest October in Auckland in 58 years of observation.

Weather Sequence: For the first four days of the month conditions remained somewhat similar to those experienced in the last six days of September, with an anticyclone centred to the east, and settled weather over most of the country.

The period from the 5th to the 9th was the wettest during the whole month and it was the only period of generally unsettled weather. The depression over the Tasman Sea remained stationary west of New Zealand, while another centre developed east of the South Island. By the 6th only parts of Hawke's Bay remained dry. However, as the depression to the east moved away on the 7th and the stationary centre lost intensity, there was a temporary improvement, with only scattered light rain.

The 10th to the 13th was a period during which the weather was unsettled at times in some areas, with mainly light rain or showers. The depression over the Tasman Sea continued to lose intensity and finally disappeared, while the other centre had reached Chatham Islands by the 10th.

From the 14th to the 17th an anticyclone was crossing the North Island, with mainly fine weather. However, parts of Fiordland recorded rain on two or three days.

During the next two days a weak trough brought rain to the West Coast, Wellington, Manawatu, and Waikato. On the 20th a weak ridge was associated with better weather, but showers were reported on the Southland and Otago coast.

From the 24th to the 26th an anticyclone crossed the country, with mainly fine weather.

For the last five days of the month a weak trough moved slowly north-eastward over New Zealand. It was preceded by rain on the West Coast, and also accompanied by a belt of light rain in some areas.
