NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR APRIL 1967

General: Winds from a westerly quarter were usually frequent in April and they blew almost continuously during the last 16 days. In the North Island the weather was drier than usual, and in the north and east also sunnier; in most areas the drier weather was appreciated after the previous wet months and farmers found it a good month. In the South Island it was wetter than usual and also more cloudy in some areas. Following several months of rather dry weather the additional rain was appreciated so that here also farmers found April a favourable month. However, in parts of Canterbury and Otago the ground was still too dry.

Winds were particularly strong from about the 20th to the 25th, with many gales, especially from Cook Strait southward. Some particularly strong gales were reported on the 25th, especially about Cook Strait and in Fiordland.

Rainfall: In the South Island rainfall was mainly 50 percent above average. It was more than double the average value in Fiordland, the Southern Lakes, and also most of the Alps, the high country of South Canterbury, and Central Otago. In some northern and eastern coastal districts, notably the Marlborough Sounds and the Christchurch area, rainfall was below average by at least 25 percent.

In the North Island rainfall was mainly only two-thirds of the average value. Central districts of the North Island together with Bay of Plenty, Waikato, and Auckland received less than half. On the other hand, in Wellington and southern Manawatu and on the Wairarapa and Hawke's Bay coasts, rainfall was somewhat below average.

On the West Coast most of the rain fell in two periods: 6-8 April, in moist northerlies; and 19-26 April, in westerlies. In the Alps and Fiordland some areas received monthly totals of 30-50 inches, of which 20-35 inches fell during the period 20-26 April, with serious flooding around Milford Sound and in parts of Westland. The highest recorded rainfall was 47½ in. at Doubtful Sound of which more than 36 in. fell during 19-25 April.

Temperatures: Temperatures were close to, or a little above, average over the whole country.

Sunshine: Eastern and some northern districts of the North Island were favoured with 15-50 hours sunshine above average. On the other hand western and some inland districts of the South Island together with Manawatu received 15-50 hours below average.

Weather Sequence: Pressures were high over the country at the beginning of the month and up to the 5th. For the first three days weak troughs crossed the country, and a depression developed far to the southeast. Some rain was recorded, mainly on the 2nd, on the Southland coast, in North Canterbury, Buller, Wellington, and Wairarapa, Waitemoa, and Northland. The weather became generally fine during the 4th and 5th with an anticyclone over the North Island moving slowly eastward.

A depression over the North Tasman Sea had been moving slowly south-eastward and on the 6th, moist northerlies set in over the South Island, with a rapid deterioration in weather. During this and the next two days considerable rain was reported in the Alps and on the West Coast, with quite good falls soon extending to the remainder of the South Island and also to Bay of Plenty, while temperatures became warmer. The depression moved to the south of the South Island and the associated trough of low pressure soon became almost stationary through Cook Strait, with rain from the 9th to the 11th in the northern half of the South Island and the southern half of the North Island. By the 12th a ridge of high pressure extended across most of New Zealand and to the east from an anticyclone over the Tasman Sea.

The trough of low pressure had moved to a position just off the north-east coast of the North Island, but it became stationary again owing to the presence of a tropical cyclone south of Fiji. Rain soon extended to eastern and northern districts of the North Island, with some heavy falls in eastern Northland. During the next two days the weather gradually improved in these districts but by the 14th some light rain was still being reported in Gisborne and a few showers in eastern Northland.

For the remainder of the month, from the 15th to the 30th, winds were continuously from a westerly quarter, apart from southerlies on the 26th and 27th.

From the 15th to the 19th an anticyclone was centered over the Tasman Sea while depressions passed far to the south and south-east of New Zealand. Winds were westerly to south-westerly and the weather was mainly fine. However, from the 15th to the 17th there was rain in Fiordland, with lighter falls in Westland and Buller and on the Southland coast, and on the 18th, showers were reported in Northland and Auckland.

From the 20th to the 24th there was an anticyclone to the north while pressures were low to the south, and several troughs of low pressure crossed the country. Frequent periods of rain were reported on the West Coast. On the 20th, rain also extended to Southland and parts of Otago and to some western districts of the North Island. On the 22nd and 23rd a particularly vigorous trough caused the rain to extend over nearly the whole of the South Island, with some very heavy falls in the Alps, and on the following day most of the North Island was affected, while the weather cleared in eastern districts of the South Island.

On the 25th a depression developed off western Southland behind a trough of low pressure. There were some further very heavy falls of rain in the Alps and bad weather once again covered nearly the whole of the South Island. Gales were reported in Cook Strait. On the following day the depression crossed the South Island and rain became general with a change to southerlies in some areas as another depression formed near East Cape. On the 27th a ridge of high pressure brought a brief clearance in the South Island except for North Canterbury and the Kaikoura Coast.

The depression moved away to the south-east, while pressures remained high over south-eastern Australia and the western and northern Tasman Sea. For the last three days of the month winds were westerly to south-westerly. Rain again afflicted the West Coast and Southland. North Taranaki, Auckland, and Northland also reported unsettled weather, and showers extended at times to some other areas, mainly in the North Island.

In the matter of the Alexander Turnbull Library Endowment Trust Board, notice is hereby given that an application has been made to the Supreme Court of New Zealand, under Part III of the above-mentioned Act, by the above-named Board for its approval of a scheme for the extension or variation of the powers of the Board and the mode of administering the trusts of Deed of Declaration of Trust, dated the 7th day of November 1934. The said deed provides that the trustees are empowered to apply the income of the trust fund in or towards the purchase of material for the Alexander Turnbull Library, at Wellington, and in the binding, rebinding, and restoration of such purchases. It has been found in practice that certain other powers are desirable to enable the Board effectively to carry out the intention of the Trust under present day conditions. Under the scheme proposed, which has been filed in the Court, and a copy of which may be inspected at the office of the undersigned solicitors to the Board, the Board will be empowered to expend capital or income of the fund (subject to retention at all times of not less than £5,000 of capital), on the existing objects and in the following additional ways:

3. In having edited and published material from the holdings of the library or the Board.

The Board will also be empowered to sell, exchange, donate, or otherwise dispose of such reproductions or publications, or any surplus material in the hands of the Board.

The scheme also provides for removal of the special qualifications of the trustees of the deed and will give to the Board the usual power of appointment of new trustees along the lines provided in the Trustee Act 1956.

The said application is set down for hearing before the Supreme Court at Wellington, on Wednesday, the 28th day of June 1967, at 10 a.m., and any person desiring to oppose the said scheme is required to give written notice of his intention to do so to the Registrar of the Supreme Court at Wellington, and to the Board, and to the Attorney-General, no less than seven (7) clear days before that date.
