Indecent Publications Act 1963

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963 and in the matter of an application to the Tribunal for a decision in respect of the magazine Playboy, November 1967, Vol. 14, No. 11.

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

THE Comptroller of Customs has applied to the Tribunal for a classification of the magazine Playboy, November issue, 1967. There were no submissions on behalf of the Comptroller. Mr R. A. Heron appeared as Counsel for the publishers, H.M.H. Publishing Coy., Inc., of Chicago, Illinois, and for Gordon and Gotch (N.Z.) Ltd., the New Zealand distributors. Mr Heron called Mr F. A. Smith, the General Manager of Gordon and Gotch (N.Z.) Ltd., to testify as to the method of distribution; he also submitted a letter from a reader of the magazine.

In a decision dealing with earlier issues of this magazine, the Tribunal made the following statement:

"Playboy is a sophisticated and ably written magazine, designed primarily for men of affluence and intellect. . . . Its literary and pictorial quality is acknowledged. The contents include searching and informative interviews, short stories, authoritative and stimulating articles on a wide variety of topics by contributors who are in some cases world-famous, along with pages of nude or almost nude models very capably photographed, various drawings, jokes, and cartoons. There is considerable emphasis on sex, but virtually no smut or snigger."

The issue before us is generally in line in style and standard with those earlier numbers, which we have already considered. It does, however, contain the latest article in a critical and historical series under the title "The History of Sex in Cinema". This is the seventeenth article in the series, and it is produced under the sub-title "The Stag Film". Without the accompanying illustrations, the text of the article would not come into question, but, the question remains whether the whole article should be condemned because of them. After due consideration, we have come to the conclusion that they are acceptable as relevant illustrations to a serious study. Divorced from a consideration of the text, as they might be in the hands of juveniles, we think they are objectionable. Our attention has been drawn to a report to the effect that before the magazine was approved for circulation in some other places the pages containing the illustrations in question were removed. Our statute contains no provision for the imposition of such a condition.

We classify this issue of the magazine as not indecent except in the hands of persons under 17 years of age.

L. G. H. SINCLAIR, Chairman.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER 1967

General—November was very wet. It was also unusually cloudy and windy; but November 1967 will probably be remembered mainly for the exceptionally heavy snowfall on the 16th and 17th in the Mackenzie country and surrounding areas of inland South Canterbury and North Otago. This snow caused considerable losses of sheep, besides flattening crops and disrupting transport and communications.

In many districts the rain was welcomed after the previous dry weather, and growth was generally good. However, shearing and haymaking were adversely affected; and in parts of the North Island lambs were not doing as well as usual.

No less than four tornadoes were reliably reported during the month: near New Plymouth on the 19th; in the Feilding-Woodville area of Manawatu on the 23rd; at Greymouth on the 24th; and in the Remuera-Meadowbank area of Auckland city on the 25th. All four did some damage; and the last one wrecked a hospital at Remuera.

Rainfall—Rainfall was more than double the average value over most of the South Island and Stewart Island; also over most northern districts of the North Island. The Canterbury high country about and to the south-west of Lake Coleridge received more than four times the average value. A number of stations in various parts of the country reported their highest November total; and Half Moon Bay, Stewart Island received 13.33 in., the highest in any month in 53 years of record. Oтира received no less than 52.81 in. for the month.

The only area with rainfall appreciably below average was part of inland western Southland.

Temperatures—South of a line from Greymouth to Christchurch temperatures were mainly 3-6 degrees below average. Elsewhere they were close to average.

The snowfall in the Mackenzie country was reliably reported to be 2-3 feet deep in places and several times as deep in drifts. In some areas it was the worst in living memory in any month of the year. Temperatures were greatly depressed by snow lying for several days, and the mean temperature of 43°F at the Hermitage was lower than any previously recorded there in November or even October.

Sunshine—Sunshine was below average by up to 70 hours except in eastern districts and most of Southland, where it was close to average. In Buller and most of Westland it was the cloudiest November on record. Hokitika's total was only 106 hours, and Westport received 119 hours.

Weather Sequence—The month opened with an anticyclone over the North Tasman Sea and pressures low to the east and south-east. Rain was reported on the coast from South Westland to Southland; and there were also isolated showers in the North Island. With the approach of a trough of low pressure on the following day the rain extended further over the western and southern districts of the South Island. As the trough crossed the country on the 3rd and 4th light rain affected many districts.

From the 5th to the 7th a deep depression crossed the South Tasman Sea and moved past Campbell Island, while two associated troughs crossed the country. Winds were mainly between north-west and south-west, reaching well beyond gale force in some areas, especially about Cook Strait. Excessive rain was reported in the Alps and on parts of the West Coast and lighter falls elsewhere, except in eastern districts from Gisborne to Otago. A brief temporary improvement occurred in most areas on the 8th, with a small ridge of high pressure over the North Island. However, some light rain was still reported on the West Coast and the Southland coast.

Six days of strong westerlies followed. During the 9th and 10th a depression crossed the North Island and moved to the east of the South Island; and a cold front moved over the country behind the depression. Rain was fairly general. The westerly to south-westerly airstream behind the front continued for two more days, with rain on the West Coast, in the Alps, and in parts of Southland, and showers in western districts of the North Island. Somewhat similar conditions still persisted during the 13th and 14th as a depression passed close to Campbell Island and the associated cold front moved on to the South Island. The rain on the West Coast and in the Alps became much heavier.

The cold front was stationary over the northern half of the South Island on the 15th and 16th, owing to the formation of a wave depression on it over the Tasman Sea. Heavy rain persisted over Westland while many parts of inland Canterbury and North Otago were blanketed with heavy snow. Coastal Canterbury also received considerable rain, and lighter falls were reported over the remainder of the South Island and northern districts of the North Island. During the 17th and 18th the cold front crossed most of the North Island and the depression developed a second centre to the east of Cook Strait. Rain became general, with heavy falls in some western and northern districts of the North Island; while some lighter falls of snow were still being reported in Canterbury. By now the front was losing intensity. It became stationary again over Northland from the 19th to the 21st, with some further rain over most of the North Island, while the weather cleared in the south.

From the 22nd to the 24th pressures were high to the north and very low to the far south; and westerly conditions again prevailed, with three troughs crossing the country in succession. Rain covered the South Island except for the Canterbury Plains and coast, and it extended also to the North Island except for most eastern districts. Further very heavy falls were reported in the Alps. A weak ridge of high pressure brought a clearance in some areas on the 25th, but the rain persisted on the West Coast, and it was also reported in Bay of Plenty.

On the 26th a deep depression was centred over the South Tasman Sea, and on the following day it moved just to the south of Southland. Once again very heavy rain was reported in the Alps, with fairly heavy falls also on the West Coast and in parts of Nelson and the Marlborough Sounds. Some rain extended to remaining areas of the South Island, apart from the Canterbury Coast and most of Otago and Southland. Somewhat similar conditions persisted during the 28th with the formation of a small depression off the Westland coast, but the rain in the Alps was lighter. During the last two days of the month a trough associated with this depression crossed the North Island. The rain cleared over the southern half of the South Island and also over North Canterbury and most of Marlborough; and it now affected also districts north of a line from Wanganui to Wairoa, with some very heavy falls in Bay of Plenty.
