Remembrance Day 1968

CITIZENS and traffic control authorities throughout New Zealand are requested to observe Remembrance Day on Sunday, 10 November 1968. This year the day has special significance as it is the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the armistice which marked the end of the First World War.

The observance of this day should, in general, be similar to that of Remembrance Day last year. Two minutes' silence should be observed from 11 a.m. and all vehicular traffic should halt during that period.

The Government trusts that churches will agree to arrange, as far as practicable, for a morning service on this day to be commenced at such time as to enable 2 minutes' silence to be observed at 11 o'clock.

Where a citizens' memorial service is held, it is suggested that it should be at the local cenotaph or war memorial.

Dated at Wellington this 24th day of October 1968.

The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. The standard periods for normals are: for temperature 1931-60, for rainfall 1921-59, and for sunshine 1960. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*The sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR SEPTEMBER 1968

General—September was marked by a somewhat greater frequency of westerly winds than usual. It was comparatively cool, with lower rainfall than normal. Farmers found growth too slow for the time of the year, and in parts of Canterbury conditions were reported to be very dry. For most of the country it was a good month for lambing. However, in Southland and parts of Otago a cold spell with snow from the 8th to the 10th caused serious losses of lambs and also some ewes.

On the 13th parts of Otago and Canterbury, with Cook Strait, were buffeted by exceptionally strong north-westerly gales. In some inland districts of South Canterbury and North Otago trees were uprooted.

Rainfall—Over the greater part of the North Island and in most of Canterbury and Otago, east of the high country and the Southern Lakes district, rainfall was only three-quarters of the average value. However, over the remainder of the South Island it was somewhat above average. In coastal Southland the surplus was more than 50 percent and Invercargill had its highest September rainfall for over 30 years, of 5.17 in. In the North Island rainfall was somewhat above average in Auckland and parts of Waikato and also in some areas of Taihape and Hawke's Bay.

Temperatures—Temperatures were below average, mainly by a degree.

A cold spell with southerlies on the 26th and 27th brought snow to low levels in some eastern districts of the South Island and in some southern and central districts of the North Island.

Sunshine—Sunshine was mainly close to average. However, it was about 30 hours above average in Gisborne and Northern Hawke's Bay, and also near the coast from Kaikoura to Oamaru. It was below average by the same amount in the Rotorua - Taumarunui - Taihape area and also in parts of Buller.

Weather Sequence—At the beginning of the month a depression was centred near Campbell Island and an anticyclone to the north-west of the North Island. One trough was just moving off the country and another was moving on to the South Island from the west. Rain was reported on the West Coast and in Southland, and some light falls also in parts of the North Island, especially Gisborne. During the next three days the trough of low pressure in the south became slow moving. Rain affected the greater part of the South Island and also western districts of the North Island. A depression developed to the north of Northland, causing rain in that area on the 5th and 6th; while the continued northward passage of the trough caused rain about Cook Strait.

The 7th to 13th was a period of westerly weather. At first a very deep depression far to the south-west was moving eastward; while another trough of low pressure crossed the country, bringing rain to the West Coast and Southland. From the 8th to 10th another trough crossed the country, followed by cold west-south-westerlies with snow in Southland and fairly general rain elsewhere, but only light falls in the east. Some strong gales were reported, especially about Cook Strait. During the next 2 days conditions remained somewhat similar, with further rain in parts of the West Coast, Southland, and the central North Island. On the 13th yet another trough of low pressure moved across the country and a depression developed on it to the south-east of the South Island. Very strong gales were reported, especially in Otago and Canterbury and about Cook Strait. Rain persisted on the West Coast and also affected some western districts of the North Island.

The trough became stationary over the North Island during the 14th to 16th, with another depression forming and moving to the east. Rain continued on the West Coast and spread to Southland once again. It also affected the greater part of the North Island, missing only southernmost districts. Some considerable falls were reported in the Bay of Plenty. The depression moved away to the east and for the next 2 days south-westerlies predominated with the passage of yet one more trough. Some rain or showers were reported in many districts. Better weather prevailed on the 19th under the influence of a weak ridge of high pressure.

On the 20th a very deep depression was centred far to the south-west and another trough of low pressure moved on to the country. A depression soon developed on the trough near Cook Strait. At first rain was restricted to the West Coast and the Alps with parts of Central Otago and inland Canterbury. However, during the 22nd and 23rd the weather cleared in the south but deteriorated over the remainder of the country, with some considerable rain in Hawke's Bay. Westerly conditions were once more renewed on the 24th and 25th, with fairly general rain west and north of the main ranges. During the passage of a trough on the 26th, a depression developed on it east of Gisborne, causing a change to cold southerly winds with snow in some districts and fairly general rain, except in the south-west of the South Island. For the next 2 days the cold southerlies continued to bring showers to eastern districts from Dunedin to northern Hawke's Bay and also about Cook Strait. During the last 2 days an anticyclone was centred to the north with a ridge of high pressure extending over the country. However, on the 29th rain was still reported in Marlborough, Hawke's Bay, Gisborne, and Bay of Plenty.
