NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR OCTOBER 1968

General—Winds from a westerly quarter were exceptionally strong and frequent over New Zealand in October, and for the greater part of the country it was the windiest of any month in many years of records. It was also cooler and wetter than usual. The persistence of cool temperatures for both September and October seriously retarded growth, and dairy production was reduced. Late frosts, mainly on the 12th, affected the fruit crop in Central Otago.

The stormiest period was from the 22nd to the 29th. A very deep depression passed close to Southland early on the 26th, and violent north-westerly gales buffeted the South Island, Cook Strait, and parts of the North Island.

Rainfall—Rainfall was mainly about 50 percent above average. It was more than double the average value on the main ranges of the South Island, including the Southern Lakes district.

It was drier than usual by about 25 percent in Bay of Plenty, together with parts of Waikato, Taupo, and Gisborne; also on the Canterbury plains and coast, together with North Otago and the Kaikoura coast; and on parts of the east coast of Northland, Auckland, Hawke's Bay, and Wairarapa.

Otira's total rainfall for the month was 49.52 in., of which 11.92 in. fell during the first 4 days and 29.12 in. from the 22nd to the 29th. Following on the second period of heavy rain, serious flooding affected parts of the West Coast, cutting off road access, especially through the Buller Gorge.

Severe hailstorms were reported on several occasions, notably in Herekino (Northland) on the 4th, in Hawera and Rangiora on the 10th, in Waipukurau on the 16th, and in Manawatu on the 30th.

Temperatures—Temperatures were mainly below average by 1-2 degrees in the North Island. Highest departures of 3-5 degrees were reported in a 60-mile wide belt centred on the main ranges of the South Island, and extending from the Buller river southward. This belt included Fiordland and most of Westland, besides parts of western Southland, Central Otago, and the Canterbury high country. Milford Sound had its coldest October in over 30 years of records. In coastal areas of Gisborne and Hawke's Bay temperatures were warmer than usual by a degree.

The main snowfalls affecting the ranges and high country of both Islands were from the 11th to the 16th. The snow was reported to low levels at times in eastern districts of the South Island and, on the 16th, also in parts of Hawke's Bay.

Sunshine—Northland, Gisborne, Nelson, North Otago, and most of Canterbury were favoured with 20-30 hours above average sunshine. Western districts of the North Island and parts of Buller and coastal Southland were below average by a similar amount.

Weather Sequence—At the beginning of the month an anticyclone was centred to the north-east of the North Island, while depressions lay to the east and south-east of Tasmania. Strong to gale north-westerlies buffeted the South Island, while troughs of low pressure were advancing over the Tasman Sea. Heavy rain was reported in the Alps, with some rain also in the Canterbury high country, Nelson, Marlborough, and Wellington. For the next 2 days somewhat similar conditions continued, with troughs of low pressure crossing New Zealand. Rain spread to many North Island districts, but not to the east coast between Castlepoint and East Cape. By this time one of the depressions had reached Campbell Island. On the 4th and 5th there was a change to westerly and south-westerly winds with a clearance from the south in western districts, while rain spread to the east coast from Christchurch northward.

The front became stationary over Northland on the 6th and 7th, and a small depression formed there. Considerable rain was reported from Northland, with some rain over the remainder of the North Island and also in northern and western districts of the South Island. On the 8th the depression lay to the east. The rainfall distribution remained rather similar, but considerable falls were reported in some North Island districts and in Nelson. During the next 2 days the depression to the east moved southward, while troughs of low pressure crossed the country. Rain affected mainly western districts of both Islands and also Southland and Otago. A southerly change on the 11th brought rain to most of the South Island and parts of the North Island. Snow was reported to low levels in Otago and Canterbury, and also on some of the North Island ranges. The weather cleared in some districts on the 12th, but there was rain in Northland with a slow moving trough, while another trough of low pressure affected Southland, Fiordland, and South Westland.

During the 13th and 14th a very deep depression was passing far to the south while the associated trough crossed the country. Rain was fairly general except for most eastern districts. Somewhat similar conditions continued at first on the 15th, with gales in Canterbury. A change to southerlies then occurred, with rain becoming fairly general and snow to low levels in Otago and Canterbury. On the 16th a depression formed near the Chatham Islands. The weather cleared over most of the South Island, but light rain persisted in the north. On the following day a weak ridge of high pressure extended over the country, but some rain was still reported on the West Coast and in central districts of the North Island.

On the 18th a trough of low pressure crossed the country, with an associated small depression. Rain extended over most of the South Island and southern and central districts of the North Island. On the following day a weak ridge of high pressure brought mainly fine weather. On the 20th a small depression crossed the southern North Island, and the associated trough brought rain mainly to northern districts of that Island, but some rain was also reported in northern and western districts of the South Island. On the following day the weather cleared in the north as the depression moved away, but southern districts of the North Island received some rain, while Southland and Fiordland were affected by a trough of low pressure in that area. Pressures were again very low far to the south, and as the trough crossed the South Island on the 22nd northwesterly gales were reported about Cook Strait. Rain affected the whole of the South Island and western districts of the North Island, with some particularly heavy falls in the Alps. On the following day, with the passage of the same trough over the North Island, rain spread to northern districts there, while the weather cleared in Marlborough and Canterbury. On the 24th an anticyclone was centred to the north-west of the North Island. Some rain still persisted on the West Coast and in central districts of the North Island.

During the 25th and 26th a very deep depression passed close to Southland, while the associated trough of low pressure crossed the country. Many very strong north-westerly gales were reported in the South Island and around Cook Strait. Rain extended to all districts except on the east coast from Balclutha to Gisborne. Some considerable falls were recorded in the Alps. From the 27th to the 29th the depression moved southward and eastward past Campbell Island, while another trough of low pressure crossed the country with strong westerly to north-westerly winds behind it. Further heavy rain was recorded in the Alps and on the West Coast, and some rain was also reported from most western and central districts of the North Island. In remaining districts of the South Island rain continued at first, but the weather gradually cleared in the south. The 30th was a day of south-westerlies, with rain affecting mainly western and central districts of the North Island. At the end of the month an anticyclone was centred over the Tasman Sea and a ridge of high pressure from it brought mainly fine weather. However, some light rain was still reported, mainly in parts of Southland and Westland.

NOTES TO THE ACCOUNTS

NOTE 1—The Board has decided, as from 1 April 1967, to amortise the discounts and premiums annually over the term of the investment on a straight line basis, and to show the value of the stock in the balance sheet at cost price plus amortised discount to date. Previously New Zealand Government stock was shown at face value with discounts and premiums showing as an investment fluctuation account. In accordance with this policy, the sum of $6,125 has been transferred to the profit and loss appropriation account.

NOTE 2—The basis of the valuation of fixed assets is at cost less accumulated depreciation to date, which has been charged at the rates approved by the Inland Revenue Department.

AUDITORS' REPORT

We have examined the balance sheet of Taranaki Savings Bank, as of 31 March 1968, and the related profit and loss account for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheet and profit and loss account present fairly the financial position of Taranaki Savings Bank at 31 March 1968, and the results of its operations for the year then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.
