Decisions of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

No. 139-141

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of an application to the Tribunal for decisions in respect of the following magazines:

Modern Man, the Adult Picture Magazine, November 1968;
Modern Sunbathing Quarterly, Vol. 50 (811), Winter 1969;
and

Tiger, the Book-Magazine for Real Men, No. 7 (811), Winter 1969.

DECISIONS OF THE TRIBUNAL

THESE three magazines, published by Publishers' Development Corporation, Skokie, Illinois, U.S.A., have been considered by the Tribunal on the application of the Comptroller of Customs. No submissions were received from the Comptroller but Mr Whitaker of R. F. Whitaker Ltd., the importer of the magazines, appeared at the hearing and made submissions.

In respect of each magazine the Tribunal decides as follows:

Modern Man, the Adult Picture Magazine, November 1968.

The magazine is about sex. The pictures are of nudes and seminudes in various poses ranging from the merely provocative to the perverted and contrived; the articles are slight in content, trivial in tone, and on such themes as "Nutty Neuters", "The Lowdown on Kinky Sex", "Hot Films", "How to Mix Pleasure with Business". The advertisements are for blue films, "raised skirt" photographs, and the paraphernalia of the perversions. In our view this magazine is indecent in the sense that it deals with sex in a manner that is injurious to the public good and we decide accordingly.

Modern Sunbathing Quarterly, Vol. 50 (811), Winter 1969.

Modern Sunbathing Quarterly is a nudist or naturist magazine with additional emphases. The practice resorted to by the publishers of painting out the public areas results in graceless and unnatural representations of the human form and is dishonest and offensive. In our opinion the magazine is indecent in terms of the Act and we decide accordingly.

Tiger, the Book-Magazine for Real Men, No. 7 (811), Winter 1969.

The issue of Tiger referred to us is in our opinion objectionable. There is too much extreme artificiality in the posing of photographs; there are overtones of horror and violence and preoccupation with aberration for the sake of aberration. We do not consider the presentation to be healthy or in the public interest and we decide that it is indecent in terms of the Act.

L. G. H. SINCLAIR, Chairman.

19 March 1969.

The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. The standard periods for normals are: for temperature 1931-60, for rainfall 1921-59, and for sunshine 1935-60. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*The sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

Weather Sequence—February commenced with an anticyclone over the Tasman Sea and low pressures to the east. On the 1st and 2nd southerly winds prevailed, with rain in most eastern districts besides Nelson, Wellington, and Manawatu. On the following day a ridge of high pressure extended across New Zealand from the anticyclone and the weather was fair. On the 4th the weather commenced to deteriorate in Northland with the approach of a tropical storm from the north-west. This storm weakened a little, and on the 5th and 6th as it passed to the east of Northland there was considerable rain in northern districts of the North Island besides Gisborne. Some rain was also reported over the remainder of the North Island and there were scattered falls in the South Island. On the following day the depression moved away to the east and conditions improved, although some rain was still reported, especially in Northland.

During the 8th and 9th a trough of low pressure crossed the South Island, causing rain in parts of the West Coast. At the same time a depression was approaching the North Island from the north-west and rain commenced again in Northland. During the following 2 days an anticyclone centred to the south-west of Southland moved eastward, while the depression to the north-west moved slowly towards North Cape. Rain spread over the remainder of Northland, commencing a period of 6 days (11–16 February) of very heavy rain, especially just north of Whangarei. From the 12th to the 15th the depression remained to the north of North Cape and the anticyclone moved to the east of the South Island. Persistent easterlies reached gale force at times in Northland, and the rain spread southward as far as Christchurch and Hokitika. There were some particularly heavy falls in Northland on the 14th, with flooding. During the 16th and 17th a tropical storm was centred near Raoul Island, the anticyclone lay to the east of the Chatham Islands, and a trough of low pressure moved over New Zealand from the west. The rain became fairly general, but conditions improved in Northland on the 17th.

On the 18th an anticyclone covered the Tasman Sea, but pressures were still low to the east. Rain was reported from most eastern districts, besides the area around Cook Strait, and the Bay of Plenty. The anticyclone showed little movement, and the depression remained almost stationary to the east. The 19th–21st were days of settled weather, but with cloudy conditions in the south-easterlies around Gisborne and Hawke's Bay. During the next 2 days another depression to the north-east of East Cape made its presence felt, causing rain in Gisborne and northern Hawke's Bay. At the same time a weak trough of low pressure brought some rain to coastal districts of Southland, Otago, and Canterbury.

During the 24th and 25th an anticyclone centred to the east of the South Island extended over the country and the weather was again settled. For the last 3 days of the month the weather was affected by a trough of low pressure which moved slowly north-eastward over the South Island.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY 1969

General—There was an unusually high frequency of easterly winds over New Zealand during February, bringing excessive cloud and rain to Northland and considerable cloud also to eastern districts of the North Island; while in inland South Island districts the weather was very dry and sunny. Throughout the country pasture growth was reported to be good. However, most fruit and vegetables were slow in ripening. In Gisborne and Hawke's Bay and even in most of Canterbury the weather was not suitable for harvesting.

Rainfall—Rainfall showed exceptionally wide variations. It was mainly less than half the average value in the South Island south of Hokitika and Ashburton, around Christchurch and Banks Peninsula, and in Marlborough, Wellington, and Southern Wairarapa. From inland South Canterbury to the Southern Lakes district many stations recorded less than a tenth of the average, including a record low total for February of 0.03 in. at Lake Tekapo.

By contrast, rainfall was more than double the average value in Northland, Coromandel, and the Tauranga - Te Puke area. Greatest excesses were recorded to the north of Whangarei, including Hikurangi; totals were up to about 32 in., 4–6 times the average value. Here more than three-quarters of the rain fell during the 6 days 11–16 February, amounting to 17–26 in. This was a period of persistent easterlies, and considerable flooding was reported.

Temperatures—Temperatures were mainly a degree below average. In eastern districts from Gisborne to Wairarapa together with Rotorua-Taupo they were 2–3 degrees below average. In the Alps they were 2 degrees warmer than average.

Sunshine—In eastern districts of the North Island and in Northland sunshine was up to 70 hours below average, Kerikeri receiving only 111 hours and Gisborne only 151. On the other hand, the West Coast and most inland South Island districts were favoured with up to 50 hours above average.

At the same time a small depression developed off the Westland Coast and moved north-eastward. Some rain was reported over most of the South Island, with heavy falls on the West Coast and in the Alps. By the night of 28 February–1 March rain was also falling in most northern and western districts of the North Island. A particularly heavy fall over a few hours caused serious flooding in New Plymouth.
