No. 765

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of an application by Waverley Publishing Co. Ltd. for a decision in respect of the book Your Sex Drive by Robert Chartham, Ph.D., published by Pinnacle Books Inc., New York.

A written submission was received from the applicant.

DECISION OF THE TRIBUNAL

Your Sex Drive

This is another book on sex by Dr Robert Chartham in which he discusses and gives his explanation of the term "sex-drive". It is a question and answer discussion interspersed with a large number of case histories of husbands and wives with extracts from diaries in which they record in detail their lovemaking.

Dr Chartham endeavours to justify the recording of these with a veneer of pseudo-medical scientific comment—a device, it would seem, to have the book accepted as an authoritative study of sexual behaviour. We question the integrity of the writing.

The deliberately explicit and somewhat tedious accounts of sexual behaviour both natural and unnatural are offensive and in the opinion of the Tribunal render the book indecent within the meaning of the Act.

The Tribunal classifies this book as indecent.

R. S. V. SIMPSON, Chairman.

14 December 1973.

No. 766

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of a reference to the Tribunal under section 12 (1) of the said Act by the Magistrate's Court at Wellington for a decision and report in terms of the said section in respect of the book Itch No. 2, published by Itch Publications.

Miss Tuohy appeared on behalf of the publishers and made submissions. Mr Neazor and Mr Trendle, solicitors, appeared on behalf of the Police and made submissions. Mr Rosenberg appeared on behalf of the defendant in the Court proceedings but did not make submissions.

DECISION AND REPORT

Itch No. 2

The Tribunal is charged by section 10 of the Indecent Publications Act 1963 with determining the character of any book submitted to it and with classifying it within the categories there provided. The Tribunal has no function in respect of what precedes or follows its determination of the character of a book and its classification. Accordingly, that part of the submissions by the publishers relating to their dealings with the police is simply put aside by the Tribunal.

In considering Itch No. 2 the Tribunal has taken into consideration the matters set out in section 11 of the Act. These may be summarised as the overall effect of the work, the intrinsic worth of its contents, its intended or probable readers, its price, the possibility of corruption of any readers and the likelihood of benefit to others, and the sincerity of the author. Dealing with sex, horror, crime, cruelty, or violence in a manner injurious to the public good is the fundamental ingredient which must be found in a work declared indecent. The Tribunal has on various occasions referred to discussion of the provisions of the Act in the case of Robson v. Hicks, Smith, and Sons Ltd. [1965], N.Z.L.R. 1113, and wishes on this occasion to refer to two statements in the judgment of Haslam, J. At page 1120 he states that the words of section 11 (2) lead him to the conclusion "that the effect of the publication of a book upon the 'public good' is to be the primary element in its classification, and that this expression of variable content, designed to direct attention to the impact of a published work upon the community, is expressly left undefined so that the Tribunal may exercise its statutory powers with due regard to changing conditions".

Again, at page 1121, he says:

"It is therefore clear that protection of young persons from contamination by mischievous literature still survives as the salient purpose of the present Act."

In considering the effect and impact of Itch No. 2 the Tribunal notes the information given to it that the 6,500 copies have been distributed principally through direct sales by children to other children.

The purpose of the publication is stated on the inside of the front cover thus:

"Education should help people understand their position or role in society and help them to learn how they can change this role. It should also teach them the nature of that society and give them some kind of insight into what they can do to change it.

The present education system in New Zealand does none of these things for the majority of students. Fortunately it has alienated some of us enough to make it worth our while to teach ourselves some of these things.

However, we are privileged in that we were born white and upper middle class and thus learnt to read and discern in an education system that is designed for, and to perpetuate, the class that we came from. We are also lucky in that we have access to a large amount of information and publications.

Itch is attempting to fill these deliberate gaps in our society. Itch is also hoping to give young people the chance to express themselves without fear of censorship or recrimination."

The presentation and discussion of sexual experience in two of the articles has been the principal matter in respect of which the question of possible indecency has arisen. This material is clearly related to the latter of the two aims identified in the last of the paragraphs quoted above, although the more substantial article is not original to this publication, but derived from an Australian publication. The relationship of this sexual material to the first of the stated aims is more elusive, the chief concern of the articles being personal pleasure rather than social activism. In the submissions by the publishers, including the evidence called on their behalf and the statements by Dr Margaret Sparrow and the Rev. Robert Scott handed to the Tribunal, the informative purpose of the sexual material was put before the Tribunal as the basis for the submission that no restriction was justified. This contention is now examined.

The Tribunal has considered numerous publications for which an educative purpose has been claimed and has a clear view of what is acceptable, and what is not acceptable, within the Act. For instance, in respect of illustrated sex instruction books it stated the lines of its approach in decisions No. 432-5. The Tribunal has drawn a distinction in other decisions between publications which genuinely inform and those which seek to "get at" people. A principal test which the Tribunal has applied to publications in this field is that of objectivity. Sex information imparted in a straightforward, natural manner, and in a tone appropriate to the complexity of human sexual experience and to the privacy normally accorded it, meets that test. Decisions of the Tribunal make clear that in its view frankness and fullness in the instruction given are served by, and not prevented by, the maintaining of such standards of objectivity. On the other hand, discussions of sexual experience which betray by their furtiveness or their prurience a desire to exploit rather than to inform have not been accepted.

The two articles in question in this issue of Itch lack such objectivity and sensitivity. The tone of the article giving a teacher's account of her discussions with her class has an emphasis on the pleasures of the teacher's own sexual experience and the excitement of her daring to divulge it that allows no place for educating children about sex in a positive responsible way. In the second article the satisfying of curiosity and the offering of advice at a crudely physical level is the chief concern. The pursuit of sexual gratification for its own sake dominates, children being told not to be afraid "to explore the possibilities of all sorts of relationships whatever society says". The relationships envisaged have been outlined in the crude language that pervades the article.

In another article and its accompanying illustration the primacy of aggressive sexual explicitness in creating and sustaining magazines of this kind is emphasised, and the informative purpose claimed for the sexual material is thereby further rendered suspect. The cover contributes in a minor way to this view also. When other matters are considered—particularly the age group amongst whom the magazine is intended to be sold and the method of distribution—the offensiveness of the publication and its capacity to harm clearly go beyond the mere affronting of propriety and good taste. This publication diminishes human sexuality to an impulse to be followed wherever it leads and pushes that view upon children. The public good requires that such blatant irresponsibility be restrained. Nothing in the rest of the publication offsets the dominant emphasis of this injurious treatment of sex.

The Tribunal classifies this issue of this magazine as indecent.

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of a reference to the Tribunal under section 12 (1) of the said Act by the Magistrate's Court at Wellington for a decision and report in terms of the said section in respect of the following comic books: Binky Brown Meets the Holy Virgin Mary, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Armageddon, published by Barney Steel and Last Gasp Inc., California, Dopin Dan, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Big Ass, published by Rip Off Press, California, Greaser, published by Half Ass Press, California, If the Shoe fits No. 2, published by Fits Collective, California, Slow Death No. 2, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Slow Death No. 3, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, The Tortoise and the Hare, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Up from the Deep, published by Rip Off Press, California, Legion of Charlies, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Skull Vol. 1 No. 2, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Skull No. 3, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Motor City published by R. Crumb Productions, Thrilling Murder, Young Lust No. 1, published by Last Gasp, California, Young Lust No. 3, published by Last Gasp, California, Mother's Oats, published by Rip Off Press, California, Merton of the Movement, published by Last Gasp Eco Funnies, California, Tales of the Armorkins, published by CO and Sons Publishing Co., California.

Mr Drury, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the Collector of Customs and made submissions. Mr Taylor, a party to the Court proceedings, appeared and made submissions.

DECISION AND REPORT

20 comic books

Each of these comics is, in the Tribunal's view, likely to have a damaging and corrupting influence upon children. Some of the books could also be harmful to other sections of the community for whom this form of literature has appeal, namely adolescents and the semi-literate sections of the adult population.

In a large number of these comics sex, violence, horror, and crime are depicted in gross and explicit detail, and although the number of objectionable frames varies greatly between the comics, the Tribunal considers that their explicitness, wherever they occur, makes all of the comics equally unsuitable for children. Some of the books express a strong political view, but even where the satirical purpose is most in evidence there is sufficient that is objectionable in the treatment and presentation of sex, violence, or crime to render these books unacceptable as possible reading for young children.

Some of the comics are deemed to be so offensive in their treatment of sex and violence as to render them indecent for all readers. Included in this group are Thrilling Murders No. 1, Greaser No. 1, The Legion of Charlies, Young Lust, No. 2 and 3, Armageddon, Up from the Deep, and Big Ass Comic, Slow Death No. 3 and Skull, No. 2 and 3. In the first three comics mentioned, there is an overriding emphasis upon violence, horror, and cruelty. Sex is the main concern of the remainder. Although The Legion of Charlies and Slow Death No. 3 are clearly satirical, this element is considered to be undermined by the undue emphasis upon violence and sex.

In the second group of comics of this set, the number of frames depicting violence and sex is much more limited and more related to the satirical purpose which in each book is clearly discernible. The comics belonging to this group are Binky Brown Meets the Holy Virgin Mary, If the Shoe Fits, Motor City Comics, Slow Death No. 2 and The Tortoise and the Hare. The Tribunal is of the opinion, however, that children, adolescents, and the semi-literate are unlikely to grasp the meaning or purpose of the comics and are therefore likely merely to dwell upon the images presented. The treatment of sex and violence where these subjects occur is likely to have ill-effects upon children and these books would therefore warrant some form of restriction.

Dopin Dan, Mother's Oats, Tales of Amorkins, and Merton of the Movement are concerned mainly with sub-cultures, some of them associated with drugs. The sexual content is minimal and lacks the blatancy of other comics in this set. Indeed there is little which could be considered harmful to the more mature reader. However, the crudity of language along with one or two frames depicting or suggesting sexual activity and some frames depicting the administration of drug dosages could have detrimental effects on the young.

The latter two groups of books could, if it were possible, be allowed restricted circulation. The Tribunal however, is not free to impose restrictions on the circulation of comic books when they are likely to be read by children.

Section 2 (3) of the Act states:

"When the Tribunal decides that a picture-story book likely to be read by children is indecent in the hands of children under a specified age that picture-story book shall be deemed to be indecent in the hands of all persons."

As these books clearly fall into this category the Tribunal has no alternative but to classify all these comic books as indecent.

The Tribunal classifies each of these 20 comic books as indecent.

No. 787

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

In the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of a reference to the Tribunal under section 12 (1) of the said Act by the Magistrate's Court at Wellington for a decision and report in terms of the said section in respect of the book Oh, Copenhagen by Jerry Yulsmain, published by Lancer Books, New York.

Mr Drury, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the Collector of Customs and made submissions. Mr Taylor, a party to the Court proceedings, appeared and made submissions.

DECISION AND REPORT

Oh, Copenhagen

This book claims to be a photo-documented survey of Danish culture and mores today, with particular emphasis on Copenhagen's legal and flourishing pornography industry and includes interviews with writers, artists, teachers, and men and women who are engaged in the pornography show business in Copenhagen.

Many of the photographs are explicit and display sexual encounters with great detail. They are of group sexual orgies in pornography clubs, of shots from films, and of advertisements on public display in Copenhagen.

The book lacks an honesty of purpose and is written in a manner which is offensive and indecent within the meaning of the Act. The explicit nature of the photographs also constitutes another sound reason for the decision of the Tribunal.

The Tribunal classifies this book as indecent.

The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard periods for normals are: Temperature 1931-60, Rainfall 1921-50, Sunshine 1935-60. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER 1973

General—November was cloudy and warm. Most of the areas where the October weather had been too dry received adequate rain in November, and growth was reported to be good. However, conditions were too dry in South Canterbury and in parts of Northland.

Rainfall—Rainfall was above normal over the greater part of the country. The surplus amounted to more than 50 percent in Central and Southern Hawke's Bay, Western Nelson with Buller and North Westland, and most of the Marlborough Sounds. Rainfall was below normal by 25 percent in Coromandel, Gisborne and Northern Hawke's Bay, South Canterbury; most of Northland, Bay of Plenty, and Southern Wairarapa; and parts of Wanganui, Manawatu, Central Canterbury, and Central Otago.

Some heavy falls were recorded in Central and Southern Hawke's Bay from the 14th to the 16th, amounting over the 3 days to 130-150 mm. In the Alps and on the West Coast the 2nd and 3rd were very wet, with amounts of up to 250-300 mm over the 2 days; and amounts of 100 mm and more on the 20th caused some flooding, especially around Karamea.

Temperatures—Temperatures were 1° to 2°C above normal over the North Island, and 1°C above normal over the northern half of the South Island. The first eight days were particularly warm, except on the 4th in the south.

Sunshine—Sunshine was mainly below normal by 30-50 hours. However, in most eastern districts from Oamaru northward it was about normal.

Weather Sequence—At the beginning of November a deep depression far to the south-west was moving eastward and the associated trough of low pressure was approaching the South Island, while another trough was moving off the North Island. Rain was reported west of the ranges and also in parts of Southland and about the Otago coast. Temperatures were warm. The approaching trough moved across the country during the next three days with the formation of small depressions and it became stationary over the North Island. Rain became fairly general but was light east of the ranges in the North Island. The rain was heavy on the West Coast and in the Alps, and several Canterbury rivers reached flood levels. Temperatures remained rather warm. From the 5th to the 7th a depression over the western Tasman Sea moved south-eastward towards Campbell Island and the associated trough of low pressure crossed New Zealand. In the warm north-westerlies further considerable rain was reported on the West Coast and rain was also reported in Southland and parts of Otago, and in some western districts of the North Island. Conditions remained similar on the following day as a depression to the south moved eastward, but on the 9th a southerly change brought a clearance on the West Coast and a little light rain to eastern districts of the North Island and the Cook Strait area. On the following day a weak ridge of high pressure brought fine weather.

During the 11th a depression passed to the south and its associated trough of low pressure moved over the country with further rain on the West Coast and some also in western and northern districts of the North Island, while temperatures once more became warm. On the following day a secondary depression which formed over the eastern Tasman Sea passed through Cook Strait, causing considerable rain over most of the South Island and parts of the North Island. Another secondary depression followed a somewhat similar track but further northward, moving rather slowly from the 13th to the 16th. Rain was rather persistent and heavy at times over the North Island, especially from the 14th, and parts of the South Island were also affected at times. During the next two days the weather was affected by yet another trough associated with a depression far to the south, and rain was reported in many parts of both islands. Inland districts of the South Island and eastern districts of the North Island received little or none. An improvement occurred in many areas on the 19th with the approach of an anti-cyclone, but rain persisted in the west and far south of the South Island.

A depression crossed Southland from the west during the 20th and 21st, while the associated trough of low pressure moved over the country. Rain was fairly general west of the ranges and in Southland. A ridge of high pressure brought improved weather on the following day, except in South Westland and Fiordland, where the rain persisted. A small depression over the North Tasman Sea brought some rain to Northland on the 23rd, while unsettled conditions persisted on the West Coast. During the next three days the weather became more settled with the passage of an anti-cyclone across New Zealand. On the 27th the weather deteriorated once more on the West Coast with the passage of a depression to the south. However, a large anticyclone covered New Zealand during the next two days with fair weather. A depression passed close to Southland on the last day of the month, while the associated trough of low pressure moved over New Zealand. Rain was fairly general but light in some eastern districts and the Bay of Plenty.
