The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard periods for normals are: Temperature 1931-60, Rainfall 1941-70, Sunshine 1935-60. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR APRIL 1974

General—The month was characterised by a high frequency of north-easterly winds, giving very cloudy and wet conditions on the eastern side of the country and above normal temperatures in many areas. The above average rainfall and rather warm conditions resulted in very good grass growth in many districts. In some parts of Hawke's Bay and Canterbury conditions were too wet for harvesting some crops. In a small area of Northland and in parts of South Auckland, Waikato, Waitomo, and Taumarunui conditions remained dry.

Rainfall—On the 3rd, 4th, 5th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 18th, 20th, and 21st there were heavy rainfalls in many parts of the country. On the 16th, 96 mm was recorded in 6 hours in Christchurch; this is double the previous highest 6 hourly rainfall since 1929. A wide area of Canterbury experienced very heavy rainfalls on the 16th. Over three times the normal monthly rainfall was recorded in some parts of Canterbury, Marlborough, Nelson, Wellington, Wairarapa, and Hawke's Bay. About the Orongorongo Ranges (15 km east of Wellington City) the rainfall was four times the monthly normal.

Temperature—Over the North Island the mean temperature was above normal by about 1 to 2°C. In the South Island the mean temperature was above normal by about 0.5 to 1.5°C. except in parts of Canterbury and Southland where it was slightly below normal. The first 10 days of the month were considerably warmer than the last 20 in most places.

Sunshine—The total duration of sunshine was a little above average in the west of Northland and Auckland and on the West Coast. Elsewhere the totals were low with the east of the North Island and the north-east of the South Island receiving 60% or less of the monthly normal. In some of these areas it was the lowest April sunshine since the 1930s.

Weather Sequence—During the first seven days of the month an intense large anticyclone was centred just east of the Chatham Islands and a northerly flow predominated over New Zealand. There was some rain on each day in the north and west of the country but on the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th there were some very heavy falls on the West Coast, about Nelson and Marlborough, and in Northland and Auckland.

From the 7th to 11th a slow moving complex trough of low pressure crossed New Zealand and by the 12th an anticyclone had moved from the Tasman Sea on to the country. The trough brought some rain to most districts except the central and northern North Island regions.

On the 13th a very active trough of low pressure was approaching from the west and there was widespread rain over the South Island. This trough produced some very heavy rainfalls as it crossed the country. This resulted in flooding in the Nelson Province and on the West Coast, and some local severe flooding in Christchurch. Many other places experienced surface flooding. On the 16th the daily rainfall at Christchurch was of an intensity to be expected less than once in 50 years. During the period 16th to 22nd as the trough moved slowly eastwards to cross the North Island there was further widespread rain over the North Island and the first significant rain at Taupo (160 mm) for several months.

By the 23rd a large anticyclone was approaching Fiordland and a small depression, on the western edge of the large trough lay just east of Hawke's Bay. Rain was widespread in eastern districts of the North Island on the 23rd and there was some rain on each day till the 30th in this area. A low pressure area remained east of the North Island till the end of the month resulting in persistent south-easterlies over the country.

On the 26th a fast moving cold front moved northwards over the country bringing a freshening of southerly winds. These became storm force about Cook Strait on the 27th but gradually decreased on the 28th and 29th.

The disturbed weather pattern which had characterised the month ended on the 30th with an anticyclone to the south-east of the South Island extending a ridge of high pressure across the country in the direction of Norfolk Island.
