The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard periods for normals are: Temperature 1941-70, Rainfall 1941-70, Sunshine 1941-70. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR JULY 1975

General—July was marked by an unusually high frequency of winds from west to south-west. There were two very cold spells, the one in the third week bringing exceptional snow to parts of the North Island.

In some areas feed was short due to comparatively frosty weather this winter and in a few places this shortage combined with wet ground conditions adversely affected the health of stock.

Gales were widespread east of the ranges during the last 5 days of the month. On the 31st north-westerly winds reached storm to hurricane force over Central and North Otago, uprooting many trees and blowing roofs off buildings. This storm was to extend to Canterbury, Marlborough, and Wairarapa on 1 August.

On the 14th a small local tornado caused some damage in New Plymouth.

Rainfall—Rainfall was above normal on the West Coast, in Southland, and nearly the whole of Otago; also in western districts of the North Island from Wellington to Waitomo. The percentage excess was greatest in the South Island. Eastern Southland with parts of Central Otago had more than double the normal value.

Most northern and eastern districts of both Islands received less than three-quarters of the normal rainfall. Eastern and northern Northland, Coromandel, most of Gisborne and eastern Bay of Plenty, and also the Kaikoura Coast with the coast of Central Marlborough, received less than half.

The heaviest rains in the month were recorded on the 14th in the Alps and parts of the West Coast, with daily falls of 100 to 160 mm.

Temperatures—Temperatures were mainly $\frac{1}{2}$ °C below normal in the North Island and western and northern districts of the South Island, and the same amount above normal in eastern and inland districts of the South Island. However, they were more than a degree below normal in Gisborne with parts of Bay of Plenty and Taupo.

The coldest days of this winter to date were the 21st to the 23rd, when unusually heavy snow covered the high country of the central North Island and lighter falls were reported to low levels in the southern part of the North Island; while in the South Island parts of Canterbury were affected. An earlier cold spell with snow in parts of the South Island and some also in the central North Island was reported on the 3rd and 4th.

By contrast, most of the last week of the month was unusually warm, especially in eastern districts of the South Island.

Sunshine—Sunshine was from 20 to 60 hours above normal over most of the North Island south of Auckland and also over most of Marlborough and parts of Nelson. Central and northern Hawke's Bay were especially favoured. Napier's 184 hours equalled the previous highest for July.

Sunshine was 15-25 hours below normal over Southland and most of Otago.

Weather sequence—At the beginning of July a deep depression passed close to Campbell Island and the associated trough of low pressure crossed the country, with rain west of the ranges. As this depression moved away, small secondary centres developed, one east of the North Island and another near north Westland. During the 2nd and 3rd there was a southerly change bringing cold temperatures. Rain became general and snow was reported on the high country of both islands, besides being down to low levels in parts of Southland and Otago. During the next 3 days an anticyclone centred initially to the south-west extended over the South Island. The weather remained cold with showers in some eastern districts. By the 7th the anticyclone covered most of New Zealand and the weather was fine, except in parts of Southland and coastal Otago.

From the 8th to the 10th pressures remained high to the south-west and also to the north-east, while a small depression from the Central Tasman Sea crossed Cook Strait. Light rain was reported in western districts from Waikato to South Westland. Pressures remained rather low over the country during the next 2 days, with a depression passing close to Northland and a trough of low pressure affecting parts of the South Island. Rain was reported in eastern Northland and Gisborne in the north, and in Fiordland and on the Southland coast in the south. From the 13th to the 15th a very deep depression over Tasmania moved south-eastward while the associated trough of low pressure crossed the country, bringing a change from north-westerly to westerly winds. Considerable rain was reported but only light falls affected eastern districts. Temperatures became warm, especially in the east. During the next 2 days a small depression formed over the South Island and moved eastward. The distribution of rain remained rather similar but moderate falls were reported in Otago, Nelson, and parts of Marlborough and Wairarapa. An improvement came to many districts on the 18th and 19th with pressures low to the east of the country, and also near Campbell Island. However, some light rain was still reported in Southland and on the West Coast besides some showers in western districts of the North Island.

On the 20th an anticyclone was centred to the south-west and another one to the north-east, while a depression lay to the east of the Chatham Islands. As another depression moved south-eastward across the North Island southerlies developed, and the period from the 21st to the 24th was the coldest so far this winter. Rain affected mainly the North Island on the 20th and 21st, but some eastern areas of the South Island were also affected. Snow fell over the high country of the North Island on the 21st and 22nd, and it was also reported to low levels in some southern districts of the North Island. As the depression moved away on the 22nd snow also affected parts of Canterbury, especially Christchurch. With rising pressures during the next 2 days the weather improved rapidly but some showers were still reported, especially in Gisborne and Wellington.

From the 25th to the 28th pressures were high to the north and very low to the south. Westerly conditions prevailed and it was unusually warm for July, especially in the east. Rain was reported mainly on the West Coast and in parts of Southland but other districts were affected at times such as Otago, Wellington, and central districts of the North Island. On the following day a trough of low pressure associated with a deep depression near Campbell Island brought a change to south-westerlies and a period of general rain. On the 30th a ridge of high pressure extended over the country from an anticyclone over the Tasman Sea, bringing fair weather and also temporarily cooler temperatures. On the last day of the month a very deep depression passed to the south of Campbell Island and the associated trough of low pressure was approaching the South Island. Considerable rain was once more reported on the West Coast and in the Alps with some also in Southland and Otago. Temperatures became very warm once again and north-westerly gales developed over eastern districts of the South Island and about Cook Strait.

DIRECTIONS FOR EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

A REPORT PREPARED BY THE ADVISORY COUNCIL ON EDUCATIONAL PLANNING

This report marks the culmination of the activities of the Educational Development Conference. The Advisory Council has recommended the directions it considers New Zealand education should go in the next 5 or 10 years.

Five principal areas are identified as requiring attention. Education is seen as a lifelong activity, and emphasis is therefore placed on the "foundations"—early childhood education, the school curriculum and special provision for special needs, and parent education.

Special attention is given also to the relationships between the school and the community, the need for close mutual support and co-operation, including understanding and respect for minority cultures.

A key to the quality of education is the people involved in it. Teacher education, the availability of advisory and ancillary staff, as well as resources for materials and research, have a chapter devoted to them.

Since education is seen as a lifelong activity, this is considered at some length. Facets such as accessibility, transfer of credits, and the role of existing institutions are discussed, together with ways in which continuing education could be provided for the whole community.

In discussing the administration and organisation of education, the principle followed is the maximum devolution of authority and responsibility to the agencies and the community, at for instance, school committee and district level.

GROWING TAMARILLOS

Agriculture Bulletin No. 307

Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries

The tamarillo or tree tomato is a native of the Andean region of Peru. The first known record of the tamarillo in New Zealand is in the 1891-92 catalogue of D. Hay and Sons, Auckland.

The commercial production of tamarillos in this country began in a small way more than 50 years ago, but it was not until the supply of tropical fruits such as bananas, pineapples, and citrus from overseas was restricted during World War II that any appreciable quantities were produced for marketing.

In New Zealand this fruit used to be called the tree tomato. The tree tomato officially had its name changed to "Tamarillo" in January 1967 to provide a more appealing and exotic name, especially for export promotion.

This handy little booklet supplies information on how to grow and care for tamarillo plants.

KILN SCHEDULES FOR NEW ZEALAND TIMBERS

By J. A. KININMONTH and D. H. WILLIAMS

New Zealand Forest Service Information Series No. 69

This 16-page booklet outlines the selection of suitable kiln schedules. The interrelationships of the variables involved in drying timber are set out, along with the requirements to be taken into consideration, such as grade, thickness, width, and end use of a particular species. Both low- and high-temperature drying are discussed and also special kiln treatments such as preliminary steaming, intermediate high-humidity treatment, equalising, and final conditioning.

The kiln schedules are presented in tabular form giving wet and dry bulb temperatures and final conditioning times for various species and moisture contents. Comments are attached to these schedules regarding characteristic features of the kilning of the species and the expected range of drying times.

MACHINE STRESS GRADING

(An alternative to visual grading of timber for strength)

By I. D. WHITESIDE

This book outlines the need for commercial machine stress grading in New Zealand.

Stress grading studies carried out by the writer in 1967 on radiata pine from Kaingaroa Forest showed that machine stress grading gave better grade recoveries over visual grading hence raised the value of a considerable proportion of the sawn output in framing sizes.

The writer firmly believes that the introduction of machine grading will help overcome the present lack of stress grades in New Zealand. This lack of availability is thought to have been a major cause of timber not being much more widely used as a structural material in competition with concrete and steel.

An informative book for builders, building inspectors, and specifiers to prepare them for the introduction of machine stress graded timber.

THE MAORI AS HE WAS

By ELDON BEST

Fifty years of public demand since this book was first published resulted in the need for reprints in 1934 and 1952.

The text has been reproduced unchanged but the originals of some of the figures could not be traced and these have been replaced with similar illustrations.

There have been many advances in our knowledge of Maori life since this book first appeared. The work of numerous ethnologists, and more recently archaeologists, has critically examined many of the earlier concepts, confirming some, disproving others, and altering others to varying degrees. No one has yet produced a synthesis of the results of all this scholarship and there is still nothing as comprehensive as this book of Best's to give a general account of the Maori.

This book was first published when Best was 68 and thus represents the accumulated knowledge of a lifetime. It has now become a classic introduction to Maori life. Its continued availability should help the reader to obtain a basic background to old-time Maori life which can be extended by further reading.

295 pages. 1974 reprint.
