NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR AUGUST 1975

General—August was a mild month, and in the South Island it was unusually cloudy and wet. Some farmers found the weather too wet, and conditions were at times unfavourable for lambing.

Exceptionally strong north-westerly winds which had commenced in Southland and parts of Otago on 31 July, spread into other eastern districts as far north as Wairarapa on 1 August. Instrumental observations at Timaru Aerodrome, Christchurch Airport, Kaikoura Peninsula, and the northern end of Lake Wairarapa all indicated winds of hurricane force, that is, averaging at least 64 knots over a period of 10 minutes. Widespread damage was reported, including devastation of large areas of forest, houses deroofed, buildings demolished, and seven power pylons blown down near the upper Selwyn River in Canterbury. Unusually high gusts included 105 knots on Kaikoura Peninsula, 93 knots at Christchurch Airport, and 92 knots at Eyrewell Forest, north-west of Christchurch.

Small local tornadoes caused some damage at Governors Bay (Lyttelton) on the 1st and at Kaitaia on the 13th.

Rainfall—Rainfall was above normal over nearly all the South Island and also over most of the North Island west of the ranges and south of Hamilton and Tauranga. It was more than double the normal value over most of Canterbury and parts of Otago, Nelson, and Manawatu.

2-day rainfalls of 130-200 mm on the 19th and 20th around Lyttelton and Banks Peninsula caused considerable flooding, especially of the Heathcote River in Christchurch.

Temperatures—Mean temperatures were mainly above normal by up to 1°C. Snow fell to low levels in parts of the South Island on the 1st and 28th, and on the high country of both islands on the 7th and 8th.

Sunshine—Sunshine was below normal by 40-70 hours except east of the ranges in the North Island, where it was mainly close to normal. Dunedin's 68 hours, Queenstown's 71 hours, and Greymouth's 63 hours were all record low totals for August.

Weather Sequence—At the beginning of August a very deep depression was passing to the south of the country and north-westerly winds were exceptionally strong in eastern districts as far north as Wairarapa, reaching hurricane force in many places and causing considerable damage and devastation to forests. A trough of low pressure which crossed the country at the same time spread some rain to most districts, but the falls were light in the east. Temperatures were warm. From the 2nd to the 4th an anticyclone moved on to the North Island and away to the east, while pressures remained low to the south of the country. Rain was reported on the West Coast. During the next 2 days a deep depression passed to the south-west and the associated trough of low pressure crossed the South Island, causing heavier falls on the West Coast and light rain in many other districts. Temperatures were very warm in eastern districts of the South Island. On the 7th and 8th this trough crossed the remainder of the country and winds changed to cold southerlies with some rain in the east of the South Island and over most of the North Island.

From the 9th to the 11th an anticyclone moved eastward across the North Island while depressions again passed to the south. Considerable rain was once more reported in western districts while eastern districts enjoyed warm temperatures. With the development of a depression over the Tasman on the following day some rain was also reported in Northland and Bay of Plenty. As this complex depression crossed the North Island from the 13th to the 15th rain was fairly general, with some heavy falls in northern districts of both islands. However, the weather started to clear on the 15th. During the 2 following days a weak ridge of high pressure passed across the North Island. Light showers were reported in a number of districts.

From the 18th to the 20th a complex depression crossed the country while an anticyclone developed to the south-west. Rain was general with some heavy falls, especially in Canterbury, where flooding was reported around and south of Christchurch. Temperatures became cold in the east of the South Island. Somewhat similar conditions persisted during the next 4 days but with less rain as the anticyclone remained centred near Campbell Island, while a series of small depressions crossed the country.

On the 25th and 26th an anticyclone over New South Wales was moving eastward while pressures were low to the east and south. Light showers were reported in many districts but temperatures were warmer than previously. Conditions remained somewhat similar on the following day with a complex depression extending over Tasmania and part of the South Tasman Sea and frontal systems from it affecting New Zealand. However, more rain was reported in central districts. On the 28th one centre moved across Cook Strait while a second deeper centre was situated west of Southland. An anticyclone was centred near Campbell Island. The warm front from this depression brought rain to most of the country. Temperatures became cold in the South Island with snow to quite low levels. Heavy rain caused flooding in parts of Manawatu. During the last 3 days of the month the depression west of Southland moved eastward and another smaller depression also crossed the country. Westerlies brought rain mainly west of the ranges with thunderstorms at times, while temperatures became warmer over the South Island.
