1. In terms of section 104 of the Commerce Act 1975 (as amended by section 34 of the Commerce Amendment Act 1976) the Minister of Trade and Industry has, in a letter dated 17 March 1977, requested the Commerce Commission to conduct a public inquiry into the following matters:

- The circumstances giving rise to exchange losses or gains on the repayment of overseas loans by New Zealand persons or corporations.
- Whether in relation to price control measures such gains or losses ought to be admitted in the determination of the prices of goods or services.

- The methods by which such gains or losses could be reflected or admitted in the prices of goods or services.

In addition to the considerations prescribed in section 98 of the Commerce Act 1975 (as amended by section 29 of the Commerce Amendment Act 1976 and without limiting section 2A of that Act) as it considers appropriate, the Minister asks that the Commission take the following matters into account:

- Any law, government requirement, or policy affecting the borrowing of money outside New Zealand by persons or corporations and the treatment of any losses or gains arising from that borrowing.
- The treatment of exchange gains or losses in current accounting practice in New Zealand.
- The effect that the admission of exchange gains or losses would have on economic stability including domestic price levels.

2. Parties intending to make submissions to the Commission in connection with this inquiry are invited to notify the executive officer of the Commission of that intention no later than Friday, 29 April 1977. Where possible, such parties should also indicate briefly the general or specific nature of their interest.

No. 882

Decision of the Indecent Publications Tribunal

IN the matter of the Indecent Publications Act 1963, and in the matter of an application by the Secretary for Justice for a decision in respect of the publication Down Under the Plum Trees, written by Felicity Tuohy and Michael Murphy and published by Alister Taylor of Martinborough, and in re L applicants seeking to be joined as parties to those proceedings.

BEFORE THE INDECENT PUBLICATIONS TRIBUNAL

Messrs L. M. Greig (Chairman), D. M. Wylie, I. R. Cross, Miss W. M. Rolleston.

Hearing: 22 February 1977.

Appearances: Mr H. R. Sorenson for Secretary for Justice, Mr A. Taylor in person (with him Mr Rosenberg), Mr G. Joseph for third party.

DECISION

On 21 December 1976 the Secretary for Justice made application to the Tribunal in respect of this book. At the same time he applied ex parte, under section 14A of the Act, for an interim restriction order, the book having become available for sale in a number of book shops in the country. As is provided under the Act, this latter application was considered urgently, without hearing other parties, and an interim restriction order was made and later extended to expire on 22 March 1977.

The hearing of the main application took place on 22 February 1977 when the Tribunal heard the Secretary, the publisher, and the evidence then presented. In addition an application was made to be joined as parties by the parents of a child whose photograph appeared in the book without permission and that on this ground he was a person likely to be affected. The Tribunal was satisfied of the merit of this application in the particular circumstances and granted the application. Submissions and evidence were given on behalf of these jointed parties.

In the course of the hearing and in submissions delivered to us thereafter the Secretary for Justice endeavoured to persuade us to limit the hearing of evidence. We have said before and repeat that, in our view, the usefulness or relevance of evidence is very limited but, pursuant to section 6 (1) of the Act, the ordinary rules of admissibility do not apply. In practice the Tribunal receives, in some cases including this one, a wide range of representations from members of the general public as well as from the parties and their witnesses. While the weight which we place on parts of the whole of the information before us varies the wide range of information does, in our opinion, assist us in dealing effectively with the matter before us.

Down Under the Plum Trees is described as "a resource on sex and social development" for the purpose of, according to the publisher, providing accurate sex information for children of about 12 and upwards and of encouraging discussion among young people and between students and teachers and parents and children. There are some 260 pages of text and photographs plus an index. It includes basic information found in sex manuals. The major part of the book consists of a series of reports of interviews said to record the speech of the person interviewed with an accompanying commentary. It describes and depicts sexual practices, including some which are unlawful, and while the legal position is set out the general tenor of the book is acceptance of all kinds of sexual activity for its own sake. One of the publishers' witnesses criticised the book for its lack of attention to the emotional and human relationships of sexual activity. The language used in the book is explicit.

In isolation parts of the book are plainly indecent. What we must decide is whether, taken as a whole, the book is indecent or not. In other words whether the indecent parts are redeemed by the rest.

Turning to the matters to be taken into consideration under section 11 (1) of the Act we have no hesitation in saying that there is little literary or artistic merit in the book. The style and language is monotonous and repetitive. It may have some social value but certainly has no medical, social or scientific importance.

It is both intended for and likely to be distributed among and read by younger people from about age 12 to age 18. The price at $5.95 does not inhibit its purchase by the youngest in that age group.

The dominant effect of the book is to emphasise the value of physical aspects of sexual activity to the exclusion of other aspects. Another effect could be to diminish the influence and advice of parents, teachers, and others. There may be some educative value in a book like this but we were impressed by the fact that witnesses who supported the book felt that its best use would be in discussion with parents or professional advisers. Its beneficial aspects are therefore limited, particularly for the younger age group at whom the book is aimed.

It is this last aspect which has caused us the most difficulty. As reading for adults its distribution would not be contrary to the public good. Unrestricted distribution of the book would mean that while young people would read it and perhaps discuss it among themselves they would be unlikely to discuss it with adults. Because of the style and tenor of the contents it is a book which, if children are to read it, should only be available through parents and professional advisers. Without that control we conclude that the book does not meet the community standards of decency. It is the opinion of the majority of the Tribunal that the appropriate classification is indecent for those under 18 unless under instruction of parents or professional advisers.

Dissenting Opinion of I. R. Cross

Having regard for what I believe to be the intention of the law and also for the intention of the publisher and authors of Down Under the Plum Trees, I hold that the Tribunal has only two decisions open to it in dealing with the book—to allow it to be distributed without restriction or to apply a complete restriction upon it.

Section 11 (1) (c) of the Indecent Publications Act states that in making a decision the Tribunal should take into consideration the intended readers of a book. In his submission to the Tribunal on this point, the publisher states that the book "is aimed at an audience of young people". The authors, too, have declared that this was their intention and in their book directly address young readers. The publisher also informed the Tribunal: "I have evidence that it has been read in part by 8- and 10-year-olds, while even younger children have looked at the photographs."

Section 11 (3) of the Act states that "when the Tribunal decides that any picture-story book likely to be read by children is indecent in the hands of children under a specified age that picture-story book shall be deemed to be indecent in the hands of all persons."

Although it is open to argument whether Down Under the Plum Trees is a picture-story book in terms of the Act, the book certainly is wholly designed and written for "a young audience" and certainly does carry over 120 pictures and illustrations. The Tribunal, having deemed the book indecent in the hands of readers under a specified age, is in my view bound to have regard for the intention of section 11 (3) and relate it to the express purpose for which the book is written, illustrated, and published. This means declaring the book to be indecent in the hands of all persons. The only alternative to such a decision is to allow the book to be distributed without restrictions.

The Tribunal's decision means that a book wholly aimed at young readers is deemed to be indecent in their hands, except in circumstances unlikely to be realised for the great majority of them. This is bound to attach undesirable interest to the book and place outside the law those young people who read it without adult instruction. I do not believe the intentions of the law or the intention of the authors and publisher are met by the decision.

In accordance with the majority opinion the Tribunal classifies Down Under the Plum Trees as indecent in the hands of persons under 18 years of age unless such persons are being instructed by parents or professional advisers.

The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard period for normals is 1941-1970. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY 1977

General—During February pressures were higher than normal over the whole of New Zealand for the first time in several months. Rainfall was below normal over most of the country, the month being rather sunny in most areas. There were two spells of particularly wintry weather on the 11/12 and 22/23 when the daily maximum temperatures were well below normal over most of the country. Farmers reported in many parts of the North Island that conditions had become very dry with pastures showing little growth. Some considerable falls of rain towards the end of the month did bring relief to farmers in some areas.

Rainfall—Rainfall was below the normal February value with the exception of parts of Taranaki, Manawatu, Wellington, Wairarapa, Hawke's Bay, Nelson, Marlborough, South Canterbury, and Southland. Parts of Hawke's Bay received nearly 4 times the normal value whilst some stations in the Northland region received only 15 percent of the normal value for the month. Fiordland and Westland were dry, having only received about 40 to 50 percent of the normal monthly fall. Areas north of Hamilton and Tauranga nearly all had less than half the normal rain. There were heavy falls of rain in the Hawke's Bay region on the 23rd and 24th when 190 mm was recorded at Wairoa in a 48 hour period up to 9 a.m. on the 24th. One reporting station near Wairoa recorded 230 mm in 24 hours on the 23rd/24th. Major flooding in Wairoa was caused by the Tawhaara Stream breaking its banks, and many slips closed the road from Gisborne to Napier.

Temperatures—Temperatures were slightly above normal over most of the northern half of the North Island. Parts of Hawke's Bay, Wairarapa and Wellington were ½ to 1°C below normal. In the South Island, the West Coast, Otago and parts of Canterbury had temperatures above normal by as much as ½°C, but other areas were below normal by the same amount.

Sunshine—Sunshine was above or near normal over the whole of New Zealand. Some areas in Northland, Auckland, Taranaki, Westland and Otago had nearly 50 hours more sunshine than normal. Some districts of Hawke's Bay had slightly below normal hours of sunshine for the month.

Weather sequence—The ridge of high pressure that had extended onto the North Island at the end of January moved to the east with pressures falling to the south of the country. A cold front was moving towards the South Island and on the 2nd this front moved northwards over the country bringing considerable rain to the West Coast. Temperatures were warm in the Poverty Bay and Hawke's Bay areas.

On the 3rd the front had moved to the north of New Zealand and a ridge of high pressure extended onto the whole of the country from the Tasman Sea though pressures were low to the south of the country. An anticyclone became established over the country and persisted from the 4th to the 6th bringing settled weather to most of the country. Temperatures were warm in areas of coastal Southland and Otago.

By the 7th the anticyclone had started to move away from the country and a trough of low pressure with associated cold front was approaching the South Island. As this front passed northwards most of the South Island, with the exception of parts of Nelson and Marlborough, recorded some rain. The front was weak as it passed over the North Island and only a few isolated areas reported small falls of rain. A ridge of high pressure extended from the Tasman Sea onto the country late on the 7th and an anticyclone persisted over the country until the 10th. Temperatures were warm in coastal Canterbury, Hawke's Bay and Poverty Bay.

A trough of low pressure moved onto the South Island early on the 10th with pressures still high over the northern half of the North Island. As the cold front associated with the trough moved onto the North Island a small depression formed on the front, this moved northeast and brought heavy rain to the Wellington area and parts of Hawke's Bay on the 11th. Temperatures were cold over most of the country especially on the east coasts of both Islands on the 11th and 12th.

The depression moved eastwards and a ridge of high pressure extended onto the country. An anticyclone was established over New Zealand from the 13th to the 18th with only one weak cold front passing over the South Island and lower North Island on the 16th and this brought light showers to Fiordland, parts of Canterbury, Nelson and Wellington. Temperatures were warm over most of the country especially on the east coasts of both Islands.

On the 19th the anticyclone moved eastwards and a small depression formed on a front in the Tasman Sea which moved slowly eastwards onto the country. This depression became complex, forming two low pressure centres as it passed over central New Zealand on the 21st. Heavy rain was reported on the 21st and 22nd in Westland, central Canterbury, Nelson, Wellington and Taranaki, and on the 23rd there were heavy falls in the Hawke's Bay and Poverty Bay areas and there was major flooding in Wairoa. Temperatures were very cold on the east coasts of both the North and South Islands on the 22nd and 23rd.

A ridge of high pressure moved onto the South Island and central New Zealand on the 23rd, the depression over the North Island gradually moving northeastward away from the country. Pressures were low to the north of New Zealand and near Tasmania. An anticyclone brought settled weather over most of the country from the 25th to early on the 27th, light showers were reported in parts of Northland, Hawke's Bay, Poverty Bay and the Wairarapa.

On the 27th a depression had formed on a front in the Tasman Sea. This system moved eastwards and in the morning of the 28th the cold front associated with this depression had moved onto the South Island and was moving northwards. Heavy rain was recorded on the West Coast and this gradually spread northwards over the country.
