NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR JUNE 1977

General—During June pressures were near normal over New Zealand but higher to the north and south of the country. There was a greater frequency of easterly winds during the month, and two spells of cold southerlies from the 3rd to the 9th and 20th to the 22nd. Conditions were cloudy and wet over the major part of the country with the exception of some areas in Central Otago and Southland. Most farmers throughout the country reported good grass growth and stock in good condition. The ground in many areas was still very wet towards the end of the month. On the 28th, winds gusting to probably more than 100 knots caused major damage to ski huts on Mount Ruapehu. The roof was blown off one hut, and most huts in the valley below the Top of the Bruce had some damage. One car was lifted and tipped onto its roof by the wind.

Rainfall—Rainfall was above normal over most of the country, the only areas below normal being parts of Westland, most of Otago, and Southland. Many areas in both islands were above normal by more than 50 percent, and in Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay, and parts of central Canterbury more than 150 percent above. Some areas of Central Otago and Southland recorded less than 50 percent of their normal June total. A severe thunderstorm early on the 4th brought heavy rain to the Wellington area. Almost 47 mm was recorded at Kelburn in less than 4½ hours. On the 20th and 21st, heavy rain in the Gisborne area caused widespread flooding and slips and many homes were evacuated. It was reported that rivers in the area rose to about 2 metres above their normal level. A fall of 156 mm was recorded at Gisborne in 24 hours and this is the highest for June since 1894 and the highest in any month since 1910. The major falls occurred between midnight on the 20th and 6 p.m. on the 21st. The total fall from 9 a.m. on the 20th to 9 a.m. on the 22nd was 218 mm. During this period heavy falls were also recorded in Auckland, Waikato, and Bay of Plenty, and many places in these regions were affected by flooding and land slips. On the 26th, 27th, and 28th, gales and heavy rain in both the North and South Islands caused flooding and damage in many areas. During this period heavy falls of snow were reported in the South Canterbury back country, and rivers were reported to be running high and causing widespread flooding. On the 29th, large hailstones were reported at Pahiatua (Manawatu), and a deep layer of hail covered most of the district causing damage to crops and property.

Temperatures—Temperatures were above normal over most of the North Island, Nelson, Marlborough, North Canterbury, and the West Coast. They were slightly below in Northland, Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay, Canterbury, Otago, and Southland. Maximum temperatures were near normal in the North Island but below by ½°C in the South Island. Minimum temperatures were above average over most of the country, in some areas by about 1°C. There were two cold spells during the month, the 5th to the 9th and the 18th to the 21st, when temperatures were below normal over most of the country.

Sunshine—Sunshine was below normal over most of the country, some areas in Hawke's Bay, Waikato, and the West Coast, by as much as 40 hours. Stations at Greymouth and Westport recorded their lowest June sunshine total since the stations began. The only areas with above normal sunshine hours were parts of Northland, Otago, and Southland.

Weather Sequence—At the beginning of June the weak ridge of high pressure that had moved onto New Zealand at the end of May persisted. A depression that had been centred near Tasmania had become complex and had moved towards the country. A cold front associated with this depression moved onto the South Island on the 1st, and on the 2nd had moved eastwards, bringing rain to most areas except east of the ranges in the South Island. The main centre of the depression moved south-east to the south of New Zealand. A small-wave depression formed on a front in the Tasman Sea on the 3rd and this moved across central New Zealand early on the 4th bringing a severe thunderstorm and heavy rain to the Wellington region. Pressures were high over southern Australia, and a ridge of high pressure extended onto the South Island. Early on the 5th a cold southerly airflow covered the country and temperatures were cold in most areas.

On the 6th the anticyclone had started to move slowly east towards New Zealand, pressures being low to the east of the country. During the 7th and 8th this anticyclone had moved south-east to pass to the south of the country. A cold front associated with a depression to the east of the North Island passed over central New Zealand and the North Island on the 8th. A depression near Tasmania had begun to move eastwards early on the 9th, and the ridge of high pressure over the country had weakened. By the 10th the situation in the Tasman Sea had become complex, one depression in the north deepening, and another in the south moving south-east towards Campbell Island.

By the 11th the ridge of high pressure had moved eastwards away from the country and the depression in the north Tasman Sea had moved slowly south-east towards the North Island. A cold front associated with this depression moved onto the North Island on the 12th and heavy rain was recorded in Northland. On the 13th the depression moved slowly over the country and rain was reported over the whole of the North Island, heavy in Poverty Bay and Hawke's Bay. An anticyclone over Australia had extended a ridge of high pressure eastwards into the Tasman Sea and by the 14th this had moved onto New Zealand. Pressures were low to the south of the country and south of Australia.

A cold front had moved north across the South Island on the 15th, and heavy rain was recorded on the West Coast, Southland, and Otago. An anticyclone was situated over the whole of the North Island. A depression near Tasmania had begun to move south-east and the anticyclone to the north of New Zealand had begun to move away by the 16th. The depression crossed central New Zealand on the 17th and rain was reported over most of the country, heavy falls especially in Fiordland and Buller. Pressures were high to the north and south of the country. By the 18th a depression had formed in the north Tasman Sea, and another to the west of the South Island, with a ridge of high pressure extending onto the South Island from an anticyclone near Campbell Island. Heavy rain fell in Auckland and Waikato on the 18th, as a cold front associated with the depression just to the west of the country crossed over the North Island. Temperatures were cold over most of the country. On the 19th the depression passed over the country, and the depression in the north Tasman Sea moved slowly north-east.

Early on the 20th a warm front associated with this depression moved south-east across the North Island with the low pressure centre also moving south-east. As the whole system moved across the North Island on the 20th and 21st very heavy rain was recorded in Auckland, Bay of Plenty, Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay, exceptionally heavy around Gisborne where major flooding occurred. As the depression moved eastwards away from the country it was replaced by a ridge of high pressure on the 22nd.

A cold front associated with a depression to the south of the country moved onto the South Island on the 23rd and weakened as it moved northwards. By the 25th an anticyclone had become established over the whole country which persisted until early on the 26th. A wave depression which had formed on a front in the Tasman Sea moved slowly south-east and deepened, and crossed the country on the 26th, 27th, and 28th. Gales and heavy rain in both the North and South Islands were reported during this period.

As the depression moved away a strong westerly airstream covered the country until the end of the month. Small disturbances in this flow brought a few showers to isolated areas and warm temperatures over most of New Zealand. A depression near Tasmania was moving slowly east towards the country on the 30th.

NATIONAL INCOME AND EXPENDITURE 1974—75

22 p. 1976. $1
The national accounts record the value of goods and services produced by a community in a particular period and the way in which these are used. Within the accounts the flows of production and disposal of goods and incomes are analysed in ways to provide information on the inter-relationship between industrial and institutional sections of an economy and between an economy and the rest of the world.

NATIONAL MUSEUM MONOGRAPHS

Elsdon Best (1856—1931), who was a member of the staff of the then Dominion Museum from 1911 to 1931, made a notable contribution to the study of Maori ethnology. After a lifetime of experience, including many years in close contact with the Maoris of the Urewera, he spent the last 20 years of his life writing particularly of the social customs and beliefs of the Maori people. There is still a demand for the many monographs written by Elsdon Best and the following titles have been reprinted without alteration to the original text (National Museum):

- No. 1. Some Aspects of Maori Myth and Religion. 43 p. $1
- No. 2. Spiritual and Mental Concepts of the Maori. 57 p. $1
- No. 3. The Astronomical Knowledge of the Maori. 80 p. 75c
- No. 4. The Maori Division of Time. 51 p. $1
