The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments.

Standard period for normals is 1941-1970.

No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER FOR SEPTEMBER 1977

General—During September pressures were unusually low over the whole of New Zealand, and for the third month in succession higher than normal to the south of the country. There was a higher frequency than normal of winds from a southerly quarter. Over most of the country this was the coldest September for many years. The majority of the country east of the main ranges experienced cloudy wet conditions throughout the month, the only areas having rainfalls totals significantly below normal being the northern half of the North Island and the West Coast. Continuing cold southerly winds and rain at the beginning of the month, added to the stock and lamb losses experienced in the Wairarapa at the end of August. Heavy rain caused many large land slips and extensive road scouring; many farms were affected by large-scale erosion. Cold temperatures and lack of sunshine reduced grass growth considerably over most of the country, and many farmers reported that stock condition was seriously affected by the cold, wet conditions. Many cows died of starvation in the Wairarapa, and milk production was down by 30 percent.

Rainfall—Northland, Waikato, and Bay of Plenty had rainfall totals of between 20 and 30 percent below normal. The Nelson, Marlborough, Buller, Westland, and Fiordland regions were below normal by as much as 50 percent in some areas. The greatest falls during the month were recorded in Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay, Wairarapa, Wellington, and Canterbury. A number of rainfall stations in southern Wairarapa recorded monthly totals of more than 200 percent above normal and many others were more than 150 percent above. At Waingawa (Masterton) 14 mm was recorded in 2 hours on the 19th, and during a 48 hour period from the 18th to the 20th more than 84 mm was recorded.

Temperatures—The predominance of cold southerly winds during the month was reflected in the below normal temperatures throughout the whole country. Many stations in both Islands recorded mean temperatures below normal by more than 2.0°C, and the majority of the country being below normal by more than 1.5°C. At Kelburn (Wellington) the mean temperature of 8.3°C was the lowest ever recorded for the month of September. The longest cold spell was from the 5th to the 11th.

Sunshine—Sunshine hours were near to or above normal in the northern half of the North Island and on the West Coast, elsewhere they were below normal. Hokitika recorded nearly 40 hours more than normal, but stations at Waipukurau, Dannevirke, and Waingawa were below by at least 40 hours. Many stations in the southern half of the North Island and Canterbury were below normal by 30 hours.

Weather Sequence: September 1977—A small depression formed on a front which had been approaching the North Island at the end of August. On the 1st of September there were two low pressure centres, one to the south of the country and the other over central New Zealand. Rain was recorded over most of the North Island and the West Coast. Temperatures were cold in the South Island and the southern half of the North Island. Pressures remained low over the whole of the country until early on the 4th, when the depression began to move slowly south-east. During this period rain was reported in both Islands, heavy falls being recorded in Westland, Buller and the Wellington region. On the 4th a depression in the north Tasman Sea was moving slowly towards the North Island and the warm front associated with this depression moved onto Northland. Heavy rain was recorded in Northland, Auckland, and Coromandel as this system crossed the country on 4th and 5th. A ridge of high pressure extended onto the South Island from the Tasman Sea, and the strong cold southerly flow ahead of this ridge brought cold temperatures to the east coast of both Islands from the 5th to the 8th. Rain was reported east of the main ranges with the heaviest falls in Wairarapa, Hawke's Bay, Poverty Bay, and Wellington. By the 8th the ridge of high pressure had extended to the south of the country and pressures were low in the north Tasman Sea and to the east of the country. A depression in the Tasman Sea moved slowly east to pass north of the North Island on the 9th. An anticyclone had become established in the Tasman Sea late on the 9th and moved slowly east and persisted over New Zealand until the afternoon of the 12th. Isolated showers were reported in both Islands and temperatures were very cold on the east coast on the 9th and 10th. A complex low pressure area in the Tasman Sea was moving slowly towards New Zealand on the 13th, and crossed the country from the 14th to the 17th. Heavy rain was recorded in Taranaki, Manawatu, Poverty Bay, Nelson, Buller, and Westland, and lighter falls over the rest of the country during the passage of this system. Early on the 17th a ridge of high pressure extended from the Australian continent to the south of New Zealand with the high pressure centre moving east into the Tasman Sea. Pressures remained low to the north-east of the North Island and to the south of Tasmania. The anticyclone moved slowly south-east to pass south of the country on the 19th, with the depression in the Tasman Sea moving east onto the North Island and crossing the country early on the 20th. Heavy falls of rain were recorded in Hawke's Bay and Poverty Bay, and moderate falls over the southern half of the North Island. Temperatures were very cold in Wairarapa, Wellington, and the Kaikoura coast. A cold front associated with a depression passing south of the country moved onto the South Island on the 20th, and moved rapidly northwards. A ridge of high pressure extended onto the South Island early on the 22nd but weakened, with pressures falling to the south of New Zealand. A number of disturbances in a strong south-west flow onto the country brought heavy rain to the West Coast on the 22nd and 23rd. An anticyclone in the Tasman Sea extended a ridge of high pressure onto the South Island on the 25th and ahead of this ridge a strong southerly flow persisted until late on the 27th. Isolated showers were reported in both Islands. Temperatures were cold over most of the country especially on the east coast. The anticyclone moved onto the North Island on the 28th and brought fine weather to most areas. Cold fronts associated with a depression to the south of the country passed northwards onto the South Island late on the 29th, and on the 30th continued to move north onto the North Island. Heavy rain was recorded in Fiordland, Westland, and Buller.
