The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard period for normals is 1941-70. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

WEATHER NOTES FOR OCTOBER 1978

General—During October pressures were higher than normal over the whole of New Zealand, and slightly below to the north of the country. Winds were predominantly westerly with a period of strong winds about the middle of the month. Most areas had above normal sunshine hours apart from the east coast of the North Island, Otago and Southland. It was a cold month over most of the country, and drier than usual except in parts of the South Island. This was the fifth consecutive month that parts of Canterbury and Otago have had above normal rainfall. Farmers in the North Island reported that feed was short and rain was needed to promote grass growth. On the West Coast grass growth was good and stock in excellent condition with lambing percentages above usual. Some heavy stock losses were reported during the heavy rain in Southland and Otago on the 13th/14th.

Rainfall—Rainfall was below or near normal over the whole of New Zealand apart from Otago, Southland, parts of Canterbury and the West Coast. Conditions were very dry in Northland and Auckland where some stations recorded less than half their normal monthly totals. During the 24-hour period from the morning of the 13th almost continuous heavy rain was recorded in many areas in Southland and Otago. Civil emergencies were declared at Maitara and Riversdale as rivers burst their banks, and extensive flooding and land slips isolated other towns and blocked the main highway from Dunedin to Invercargill. The town of Kelso and parts of Alexandra were evacuated. Jet boats and helicopters were used to rescue people and stock, but stock losses were reported to be heavy.

The highest 24-hour falls were recorded in an area south of Queenstown to Invercargill. At Tapanui, which is situated in the area of highest rainfall, 119 mm was recorded in the 24 hours to 9 a.m. on the 14th. This has never been exceeded since the station began in 1897, the previous maximum of 110 mm being recorded in June 1935. The following stations also recorded high 24-hour rainfalls in this period: Clinton 125 mm, Roxburgh 117 mm, Balclutha 116 mm, Inch Clutha 107 mm, Owaka 99 mm, Queenstown 87 mm and Alexandra 70 mm.

Temperature—Temperatures were below or near normal over the whole country. In parts of Northland, Auckland, Bay of Plenty, Poverty Bay and Hawke's Bay they were below normal by 1° to 1½°C. In other areas of the North Island cooler night time temperatures reduced the mean temperature to ½° to 1°C below normal. In the South Island colder day time temperatures caused a drop in the monthly mean temperature of approximately ¼°C. There was a warm spell of 3 days at the beginning of the month, and another from the 12th to 14th inclusive, the rest of the month having cooler temperatures in most areas.

Sunshine—Most areas had above normal sunshine hours for the month, the only areas below being Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay, Wairarapa, Otago and Southland. Many stations on the west coast of both Islands recorded 40 hours more than usual. The sunshine total of 234 hours at Wellington was the highest recorded there in October since 1937.

WEATHER SEQUENCE OCTOBER 1978

The ridge of high pressure that covered New Zealand at the end of September moved slowly east, and an anticyclone became established over the country until early on the 3rd. Pressures were low to the north and south of the country. Fine weather prevailed in most areas, with only isolated showers being reported in some eastern districts of the North Island. Temperatures were slightly colder than usual at the beginning of the month. By the afternoon of the 3rd the anticyclone had weakened, and a depression that had formed to the north of the country had started to move slowly south. A cold front moved across the South Island bringing isolated showers to Fiordland, Westland and Southland.

On the 4th the depression was centred to the northeast of the North Island and moving slowly southeast. A cold front associated with a depression to the south of the country moved onto the South Island. Early on the 5th a wave depression formed on a front in the Tasman Sea and this started to move eastwards towards New Zealand. Heavy rain was recorded in Fiordland and Westland. During the morning of the 6th the situation became complex with one depression moving slowly down the east coast of the country; the wave depression in the Tasman Sea moving towards Northland and a further small depression moving to the south of New Zealand. An active cold front associated with the depression to the south crossed onto the South Island and moved northeast. Most districts of New Zealand had light to moderate falls of rain, the heaviest being in Poverty Bay, Hawke's Bay and West Coast. Temperatures were colder than usual in most areas.

From the 7th to the 10th a ridge of high pressure extended onto New Zealand from an anticyclone centred to the east of Australia. A few areas in both the North and South Islands reported some showers, as small disturbances in the southerly flow ahead of the anticyclone crossed the country, but the weather was predominantly fine. During the night of the 10th and the morning of the 11th a deep depression moved eastwards to the south of New Zealand. A cold front associated with this depression crossed onto the South Island during the evening of the 10th, and moved northwards across the country. Heavy rain was recorded in Fiordland and Westland; more than 70 mm in the 24 hours to 9 a.m. on the 11th at Milford Sound. Light falls were reported in many districts west of the main ranges in both Islands.

During the evening of the 12th an extremely deep depression passed southeastwards near Macquarie Island, where one of the lowest pressures ever recorded was measured. A cold front associated with this depression extended northwest as far as the middle of the Australian continent. Early on the 13th the front had moved onto Southland and by noon had moved as far as Otago. By the evening of the 13th a small wave depression had formed on the front in the southeast Tasman Sea area, and the front began to return southwards. It moved as far as Southland until the morning of the 14th when it started to move northeastwards once more. The front had reached North Otago and South Canterbury by about noon on the 14th and continued to progress northwards across New Zealand. Throughout the period that the front passed across the Southland and Otago districts almost continuous rain was recorded in the 24 hours from the morning of the 13th. The heaviest falls occurred in an area around Clinton, Tapanui, Kelso, Riversdale and Gore. Twenty-four hour falls to 9 a.m. on the 14th were in excess of 100 mm in this area. Light to moderate falls were recorded across the whole of New Zealand as the front moved northwards, clear of the country on the 15th.

On the morning of the 16th an anticyclone moved onto the country and persisted until the afternoon of the 17th. A cold front associated with a depression to the south of New Zealand moved onto the South Island late on the 17th, and this brought heavy rain to Fiordland, Westland and parts of Buller. Lighter falls were reported over most of the North Island as the front moved north. A wave depression formed on the front in the Tasman Sea on the 18th, and by the afternoon of the 19th had deepened and moved towards central New Zealand. As this depression crossed the country on the 20th, heavy rain was reported in parts of the North Island west of the main ranges and in Marlborough, Nelson, Canterbury and Westland. More than 90 mm was recorded in Greymouth in the 24 hours to 9 a.m. on the 20th. There were many falls of 40–60 mm during the same period in other districts. Heavy rain also fell in the Poverty Bay district on the 22nd. Temperatures were near normal throughout the whole of New Zealand from the 16th to the 20th.

A ridge of high pressure extended from the Tasman Sea onto New Zealand for a short period on the 22nd. A cold front moved onto the South Island late on the 22nd and moved northwards bringing moderate rain to the West Coast and lighter falls to the rest of the country. By the morning of the 24th the ridge of high pressure had become re-established and the anticyclone in the Tasman Sea was moving east towards New Zealand. A weak cold front moved northwards across the country on the 25th and 26th and this brought light rain to some areas in both the North and South Islands.

The anticyclone became centred over New Zealand early on the 27th and persisted until the end of the month bringing fine weather to most of the country. A weak cold front passed quickly over the South Island on the 30th and some heavy showers were reported in Fiordland. Temperatures were warmer than usual along the east coast of the country at the end of the month.

SHADOW OF THE LANDBy Ian Wards*

$9

The title for this book was provided by Nopera Panakarero, a Kaitiaki chief of much influence, who, in May 1840, believed that only the "shadow of the land" had gone to Queen Victoria whilst the substance remained with the Maoris. Less than a year later he revised this opinion convinced that only the "shadow" would be the Maori portion.

The author examines the British acquisition of New Zealand. The Maoris trust in the Treaty of Waitangi and their confidence that its terms would be honoured and explains it was only by accident that the Maoris were guaranteed the possession of their lands and ancient privileges.

It is under these circumstances that the book considers the use of military force in New Zealand, analyses the arguments surrounding the provision of troops and concludes that, beyond any reasonable doubt that there was never an attempt to govern by "moral suasion".

New Zealand followed the normal nineteenth century British pattern of territorial acquisition.

The book is an essential introduction to the Maori wars of a later date.
