Decision No. 15/78

Decision of the Broadcasting Tribunal

IN the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by Kevin Thomas McNamara, pursuant to section 67 (1) (b), and in the matter of a complaint by Duncan Alan Armstrong, pursuant to section 67 (1) (b).

WARRANT HOLDER: Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Television One).

BEFORE THE BROADCASTING TRIBUNAL

B. H. Slane (Chairman), Lionel R. Sceats (Member), Janet C. Somerville (Member), G. R. Wear (Co-opted Member), G. R. Black (Co-opted Member).

Hearing: 28 November 1978 at Auckland.

DECISION

Both complaints concerned material in the programme "Good Day" broadcast on Television One on Friday, 7 July 1978, at 1 p.m.

Mr McNamara formally complained a few days later to the Broadcasting Corporation making two main points:

(1) The abortion procedure was shown as almost inconsequential.

(2) Statements by Dr Peter Morgan concerning the safety of the procedure were misleading and scientifically incorrect. He also considered it a breach of the standards of good taste and decency.

Mr McNamara referred to the Tribunal finding (b) of the Corporation's decision considering it to be clearly contrary to the knowledge of medical science relating to the safety of suction abortion. Mr Armstrong considered the programme was unbalanced because not enough accurate information was made available for viewers to make an objective assessment of the physical and medical implications of having an abortion. Mr Armstrong also complained a few days after the programme that the status of the unborn child was not mentioned and that the programme gave the impression that the only factor to be considered in an abortion was the woman's comfort and convenience. The complaint also said that the detrimental effect on subsequent pregnancies was not properly stated and that the programme was unbalanced requiring a balanced programme to have been screened.

He also said that the programme was in breach of the Corporation's statutory requirement to have regard to the observance of standards of good taste and decency.

The Corporation considered the complaints and made an identical decision in respect of each complaint on 13 September 1978. The decision of the Corporation was to adopt the following recommendation of its Standing Committee for Television One:

- (a) Given the fact that the item was clearly and explicitly stated to be confined within the restricted parameters of the medical procedure the Committee found itself unable to agree that a charge of lack of balance could be sustained. Nevertheless having regard to the intense controversy surrounding the subject of abortion the Committee was left with the feeling that it would have been preferable for the presenter to have emphasised at the conclusion of the programme that there were a number of questions other than merely medical and surgical ones which required evaluation in any individual case. The Standing Committee does not believe that it would have been necessary to elaborate on these but rather that a more explicit reminder of their existence would have been desirable.
- (b) The Committee could find no foundation for the criticism that the programme was misleading or scientifically incorrect.
- (c) The Committee found no aspect or ingredient of the programme which was contrary to accepted standards of good taste.

However, the Committee was gravely disappointed at the error made by transmitting this particular programme on a day when some schools were closed for the mid-term break. It accepts that this was a genuine error and that when discovered, efforts were made at the last moment to redress the situation, but requires that the Service make a careful check in future of school closure dates.

NOTE—The Committee notes that since the complaint was considered TV1 has adopted the policy that when the subject of abortion is being covered it is first referred to the Controller of Programmes who will refer it to the Director-General at his discretion.

The Tribunal has viewed a tape of the programme which opened with the statement that the programme had a film made by an Australian film director reconstructing an operation to terminate pregnancy. An actress was said to play the patient but the medical staff worked at a Sydney clinic visited by many New Zealand women.

Final remarks before the showing of the film were these:

"This film, I should say, may not be suitable for children, but we feel it is important. It is unemotive and unbiased and we are screening it in the hope that people will have a better idea of what they are talking about."

After the film an English obstetrician and gynaecologist working at Hutt Hospital was briefly interviewed. He explained that the main difference between New Zealand and English procedure and that seen in the film was that abortions in the former countries were usually carried out under a general anaesthetic, making it a shorter procedure. He pointed out that the operation became much more risky if carried out after 10 weeks. He was then asked whether he was happy with the operation procedure in New Zealand and whether it should be changed at all.

He replied, "No—suction method of termination of pregnancy is a very safe method and it does not harm the mother at all and it doesn't affect her chances for future pregnancies and it's a quick, fairly bloodless procedure. I cannot see it being improved at all."

The interviewer then said:

"The film that we have just seen does make the operation to a layman like me seem terribly simple and straightforward. Now I wonder is that really the whole story?"

Dr Morgan replied, "Well as long as it is done before 10 weeks it is a very safe procedure indeed and it is very simple, simpler than it appeared on the programme. It is safe, yes".

The programme concluded with the interviewer pointing out:

"We've deliberately steered clear of the rights and wrongs of the whole abortion issue. I hope that you'll feel that we've presented a film that leaves people rather better informed."

The Tribunal has no doubt that the producer was entitled to tackle this one aspect of the broad abortion topic although it would have been wise to have said that there were a number of questions other than merely medical or surgical ones which required evaluation in any individual case, as the Corporation has suggested.

The Corporation found that there was no foundation for the criticism that the programme was misleading or scientifically incorrect.

It is, however, clear from the report of the Royal Commission and from other material submitted to us that to put it at its slightest the opinions expressed by Dr Morgan did not adequately express the fact that any such procedure must have some attendant risks.

The least the programme should have done was to point out that Dr Morgan's view is not the view held by all doctors. Alternatively he could have been asked to state exactly what the risks were.

As there is research material available on the risks attending various types of abortion procedures at various stages of pregnancy, it would not have been difficult to have qualified the broad statements made by the doctor. One further question from the interviewer based on the programme's own research could have dealt with the point. Where medical views vary it is wise to consult more widely than was apparently done. In our decision on another programme on abortion (No. 5/77) the Tribunal said—at page 7:

"It is perhaps pertinent to suggest that in such matters it might have been appropriate to have approached a university or other authoritative medical sources rather than consulting only one doctor who had, albeit occasionally, worked at Aotea, and a partisan handbook."

In this instance a small consultative panel might have been helpful in ensuring that the question of the degree of risk to the patient was satisfactorily dealt with.

The Corporation has not suggested that the omission has been corrected by any other programme since broadcast. The point could be briefly covered in a subsequent programme.

The Tribunal has upheld the complaint in part under s. 24 (1) (e) which requires that the Corporation shall have regard to the principle that when controversial issues of public importance are discussed, reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest.

The Tribunal does not find that there is any aspect or ingredient of the programme contrary to the observance of standards of good taste and decency.

The Tribunal agrees with the Corporation's finding that the programme should not have been broadcast during the mid-term break and that this was an error.

Membership—

In accordance with s. 61 (10) the Tribunal has co-opted Mr G. R. Wear and Mr G. R. Black as two persons whose qualifications or experience were likely, in the opinion of the Tribunal, to be of assistance to the Tribunal in dealing with the complaint. They have taken part in the deliberations of the Tribunal but the decision, in accordance with the Act, is that of the permanent members.

Dated this 21st day of December 1978.

For the Tribunal:

B. H. SLANE, Chairman.

Decision No. 9/78

Decision of the Broadcasting Tribunal

In the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child Inc., pursuant to section 67 (1) (b).

WARRANT HOLDER: Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Television One).

BEFORE THE BROADCASTING TRIBUNAL

B. H. Slane (Chairman), Lionel R. Sceats (Member), Janet C. Somerville (Member), G. C. Ell (Co-opted Member), G. R. Wear (Co-opted Member).

Hearing: 12 October 1978.

DECISION

Mr J. D. Dalgety, immediate past president of the Society for the Protection of the Unborn Child, has referred to the Tribunal a complaint made by the society in respect of a Television One news bulletin broadcast at 6.30 p.m. on 14 December 1977. Some or all of the item was repeated in another bulletin at 9.30 p.m. that night. It was a report by Television One's political editor, Mr F. Cockram on the progress of the Contraception, Sterilisation and Abortion Bill and the form in which it came out of the debate by the Committee of the House. Parliament had sat throughout the night and on the morning of 14 December, completing its report in the afternoon.

The relevant passage from Mr Cockram's report is as follows:

"When Parliament finally arose at about half past twelve this afternoon it had completed almost 30 hours of debate on the committee stages.

"Although it's clear the conservative lobby won through on most issues, there's still some uncertainty about the practical aspects of the law because of the confusion among tired M.P.'s with the multitude of amendments they had to consider.

"However, this seems to be the situation . . .

"There'll be a Supervising Committee of three . . . chaired by a Magistrate . . . to administer abortion law, license hospitals to perform abortions and appoint certifying consultants.

"If a woman wants an abortion she'll go to her doctor. From there her case will be referred to two certifying consultants. If they approve, her case will go to a fourth doctor, the operating surgeon.

"The Bill does tighten significantly the grounds on which an abortion may be authorised. It does this by an amendment to the Crimes Act to define what constitutes an "unlawful" abortion.

"The mental or physical state of the mother—or of the foetus—will not be one of the criteria considered when granting an abortion . . . an abortion won't be permitted even if the mother's life is in danger, if there is any other way of saving her.

"But despite some contradictory decisions it appears rape will be a ground for an abortion.

"Among many other decisions taken overnight, Parliament threw out a move to have the Bill referred to the public by way of a referendum at the next general election.

"The question now is whether Parliament has finally . . . after several years of agonising . . . produced legislation which is workable.

"This afternoon some very tired M.P.'s had varied views on that . . ."

The statement complained of is,

"The mental or physical state of the mother or of the foetus will not be one of the criteria considered when granting an abortion . . . an abortion won't be permitted even if the mother's life is in danger, if there is any other way of saving her."

There is no argument about the reference to the foetus. The objection is to the first part of the statement which the complainant says does not accurately report this part of the Bill as it stood after the committee had reported.

As national president of the society, Mr Dalgety wrote to the Director-General of Television One on 13 March 1978. He referred to the matter having been brought to the attention of news staff, but it appears that apart from a call by Mrs Marilyn Pryor to someone in the news room a couple of days after the broadcast no formal complaint was lodged until Mr Dalgety's letter. Copies of addresses made by Mr Dalgety and Mrs Pryor in February and March had been given to the channel and in these there were references made to the alleged inaccuracy of the news bulletin on 14 December.

The formal complaint was rejected by Television One which, in doing so, had cited the qualifications in the opening of Mr Cockram's report, the difficulty of reporting and interpreting the legislation after extended sittings and suggesting that the question of inaccuracy was a matter of opinion.

On 18 May a formal complaint was lodged by the society with the Broadcasting Corporation. The Corporation by letter dated 14 July informed Mr Dalgety that it had made the following finding:

"The Corporation, as a result of its investigation under the complaints procedure accepted that the report was attempting to highlight a radical change in the criteria, relating to permissible abortion, namely the consideration whether any other means were available to avert the danger to the physical or mental health of the mother. The Corporation found, however, that in referring to this charge, the report has used language which was open to misunderstanding and the explanation could have been made with greater clarity and precision. To that extent the complainant had grounds for making his complaint.

"The Corporation requests TV 1 to review the extent and depth of its staffing arrangements made to cover the passing of the Contraception, Sterilisation and Abortion Act and to advise the news committee whether it has recommendations concerning such arrangements for future coverage of controversial topics of great complexity under conditions of possible difficulty."

Subsequently there appear to have been some public exchanges reported by television and radio on whether or not this amounted to the upholding of the complaint.

Section 25 of the Broadcasting Act 1976 provides that the Corporation shall receive and consider formal complaints about programmes broadcast by the Corporation where the complainant alleges the corporation has failed to comply with certain provisions of the Act.

Subsections (3) and (4) read as follows:

"(3) If a complaint is found to be justified, in whole or in part, the Corporation shall take appropriate action and shall inform the complainant in writing of the action taken.

"(4) If the complaint is found not to be justified in whole or in part, the complainant shall be notified of the decision."

The Corporation has not made it clear whether or not it accepts that the complaint was justified in whole or in part. The reference to the complainant having grounds to make his complaint is not the statement required under the Act.

The complainant under the same section is allowed to refer the complaint to the Tribunal if he is dissatisfied with the decision or with the action taken by the Corporation.

Mr Dalgety lodged his society's complaint with the Tribunal in August 1978.

The Tribunal heard carefully prepared submissions from Mr Dalgety on behalf of the society. Submissions were also made by the Corporation and the Tribunal had the benefit of some helpful comments from Mr Cockram.

Mr Dalgety made it very clear that he considered the earlier passages to be simple, accurate and impartial. His complaint concerned only the one sentence.

The Tribunal has had no difficulty in arriving at its decision that the passage complained of was not accurate.

It is clear that, under the Bill as reported back to the House, the mental or physical state of the mother would be considered when granting an abortion.

It should be understood that the report was made by an experienced Parliamentary journalist whom Mr Dalgety made clear his society regards as "an experienced commentator whose work on Television is enjoyed and admired by thousands of viewers." There was no question of impugning Mr Cockram's honesty.

(It seems likely that the addition by Parliament of the reporting of legislation as it passed through the House. He made clear to the Tribunal that the Bill as it came out of the House in committee differed from the form in which it was sent into the committee of the House. He pointed out two respects in which he said the Bill had been changed. He did accept that his wording was not as specific as it could have been but did not consider it inaccurate.

In terms of describing the changes that took place it is understandable that such an error could have been made. (It seems some other journalists made the same mistake.) However it is clear from reading the news report that the viewer would understand the comparison was being made with the existing law and not with the form of the Bill as it went to the Committee of the House.

It seems likely that the addition by Parliament of the proviso "that the danger cannot be averted by any other means" had also contributed to the wrong interpretation of the Bill by Mr Cockram. This proviso was repealed in 1978. Mr Dalgety criticised the paraphrase of this proviso in Mr Cockram's report. We do not agree the criticism is justified. He did not complain about the reference in the news item to rape as a ground for abortion which was not strictly accurate.)

TV 1 and the Corporation should have acknowledged the mistake. We do not accept that Mr Cockram's remark "However this seems to be the position . . ." a little earlier in the report excuses TV 1 from correcting an error particularly since the passage concerned opens "The Bill does tighten significantly . . .", which could be said to be so definite as to nullify the earlier qualification.

The society made lengthy submissions relating to the Corporation's later statement that the report was attempting to highlight a radical change in the criteria relating to permissible abortions. We do not think that it is necessary for this Tribunal to embark on an analysis of the legislation in this decision. Suffice it to say, it does not appear that the changes that occurred in the criteria were "radical" changes as claimed by the Corporation. The radical changes in the legislation related rather to the methods of control of the decision making process for authorising abortions.

The issue was of some importance. Many people would have obtained their first information about Parliament's decision on this key aspect of the legislation from Mr Cockram's report and their attitudes could have been moulded accordingly. It is a matter for regret that they were not subsequently told that the Bill and later the Act, did in fact provide that the mother's mental or physical health would be considered, Television One not having put the record straight.

While the Tribunal considers that Television One should have acknowledged the error, it would certainly accept the Director-General's view that to refer some months later in detail to the content of the news item was impracticable and would probably have caused confusion.

The Tribunal does not accept, however, that it necessarily remains impossible even now for Television One to broadcast a programme which might help to explain the criteria laid down in the Act even if this involves providing some explanation of any differing interpretations of the meaning of the legislation as it now stands.

Section 24 (1) of the Broadcasting Act 1976 provides that the Corporation should be responsible for maintaining in its programmes and their presentation, standards which will be generally acceptable in the community, and in particular it should have regard to

"(d) the accurate and impartial gathering and presentation of news, according to recognised standards of objective journalism."

The Tribunal finds that the report in the single respect referred to was not an accurate presentation of news and therefore upholds the complaint. However, the Tribunal declines to find that the Corporation was guilty of failure to present the news impartially.

Co-opted Members—

In accordance with the Act, the Tribunal co-opted Mr G. C. Ell and Mr G. R. Wear, two persons whose qualifications and experience were likely, in the opinion of the Tribunal, to be of assistance to the Tribunal in dealing with this complaint. They took part in the hearing and the deliberations of the Tribunal. The decision however, in accordance with the Act, is that of the permanent members.

Decision No. 10/78

Decision of the Broadcasting Tribunal

In the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by Thomas Francis Gill, pursuant to section 67 (1) (b).

WARRANT HOLDER: Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Television One).

BEFORE THE BROADCASTING TRIBUNAL

B. H. Slane (Chairman), Lionel R. Sceats (Member), Janet C. Somerville (Member), G. C. Ell (Co-opted Member), G. R. Wear (Co-opted Member).

Hearing: 12 October 1978.

DECISION

The complaint referred to the Tribunal by Hon. T. F. Gill, Minister of Immigration, concerned a news item broadcast by Television One in its 6.30 p.m. news bulletin on Monday, 12 June, 1978. The programme concerned the treatment and prosecution of overstayers and originated from the Auckland newsroom. It comprised a report by Carol Archie in which she presented the views of a prominent Tongan lawyer, Mr Clive Edwards, another Auckland lawyer, Mr Kevin Ryan, and the executive officer to the Race Relations Conciliator, Dr Peter Sharples.

The item was introduced by the newsreader thus:

"New Zealand immigration authorities were today accused of being cruel and ruthless in their dealings with Pacific Island immigrants. The claim comes from two Auckland lawyers who represent a large proportion of Auckland's overstayers and other immigrants. The lawyers say they are disturbed by the upsurge of court appearances for Pacific Islanders on overstaying charges and they claim humanitarian considerations are being overlooked if the numbers in Auckland courts increase."

The reporter, Carol Archie, then detailed the number of prosecutions in the Auckland Magistrate's Court each day and said that Mr Edwards was disturbed that many more Pacific Islanders were being charged as illegal immigrants than other nationalities.

The item presented the views of Mr Edwards and the other two persons interviewed and it was claimed that husbands and wives were being separated from each other and their children while others were being deported when they were ill. The claim was made that the concept of "humanitarianism" did not exist in the Immigration Division as, regardless of any case put up on humanitarian grounds, the department said "no". The manner in which Pacific Islanders were apprehended by field officers in Auckland was described by one of the lawyers as "very ruthless".

Mr Gill said that the persons interviewed were "critical of a group of public servants in the performance of their duties as immigration officials, the combined effect of which amounted to an unwarranted unsubstantiated and grossly unfair attack on those public servants".

The Minister summarised his complaint to the Tribunal as follows:

1. Because of its strong bias the news item should not and need not have been transmitted without a counter-balancing viewpoint;

2. That no effort was made to obtain such a viewpoint from Immigration officials or from me, as Minister of Immigration, or, presumably, from anyone else before transmission of the news item complained of; and

3. That Television One on this occasion failed to exercise impartiality in the gathering and presentation of news; and that Television One therefore denied certain public servants an effective right of reply to serious allegations made against them.

Mr Gill first complained to the Chairman of the Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand by letter dated 14 June which was treated as a formal complaint and was supplemented by a further letter dated 15 June. The Minister pointed out that the two lawyers concerned handled cases for overstayers and had received an advertisement from the programme. The Minister pointed out that since the Act was passed giving overstayers who had been found guilty the right to appeal to the Minister, 52 cases had been finalised and of those 15 had been allowed and 37 declined. He mentioned this to counter the statement of Dr Sharples that as far as his office was concerned, "Of late our success rate has been nil . . .".

The Minister pointed out that under the Act the Minister had to be satisfied that "because of exceptional circumstances of a humanitarian nature it would be unduly harsh or unjust to deport the offender from New Zealand." Mr Ryan had complained on the programme that there had been no indication given as to what the Minister meant by those words. Obviously the impression had been given that the policy was laid down by the Minister and not by the legislation. In his original complaint and in his statement on television he referred to a letter from Mr Ryan which confined the statement of grounds in an appeal to the facts that the offender was 17 and had no work to return to in Tonga.

The Corporation dealt with the complaint on 8 August 1978 and in a letter dated 11 August set out its decision:

"In its examination of the case the board took particular note of the requirements of section 24 (1) (d) and (e) of the Broadcasting Act in the manner of accuracy and balance. It was noted that the item was presented in such a way that, if it did contain inaccuracies as you claim, these were presented as the opinions of Messrs Ryan, Edwards and Dansey and not of Television One; in this respect the board felt that subsection (d) above had not been breached by any intention of Television One. However, there is always a residual duty for a news service to ensure that the accuracy of any accusation is put to the test. The board found that Television One did recognise its duties in this respect by early decisions and action taken by the reporter, the assignment editor and the duty editor at Auckland, and by the network editor in Wellington: these decisions resulted in your being interviewed for the 6.30 p.m. news on 13 June.

"This interview, apart from testing the validity of statements made on 12 June, gave Television One the opportunity of meeting its obligations under subsection (e) in regard to balance. Subsection (e) uses the words:

'... reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest.'

"The board was not called upon to make an editorial judgment by deciding whether the issue would have been better covered in one bulletin, but to decide whether, in covering it in bulletins on succeeding days Television One was in breach of subsection (e). The board came to the conclusion that as the Act makes provision for coverage over a longer period than a single programme, Television One was not in breach of its requirements. It found therefore, that it could not uphold your complaint.

"Nevertheless, the board has asked me to convey its sincere regret that, because of an unfortunate misunderstanding between the Auckland and Wellington news sections of Television One, you held yourself in readiness on Monday, 12 June, for an interview which did not eventuate. The assumption had been made, without warrant, that you would be automatically unavailable on a Monday, being Cabinet day. Staff have been advised that such assumptions must not be made in future with regard to anyone's availability.

"Perhaps I could offer an explanation of one other source of annoyance to you when you thought that the reporter who interviewed you, Spencer Jolly, had not seen the original item. His words to you were meant to convey that he had not initiated or taken part in the 12 June item, but had seen it in full."

The Minister was dissatisfied with the decision and exercised his right to refer the complaint to the Tribunal which he did on 23 August, filing the declaration required under the Act on 15 September.

While Mr Gill considered the Tribunal could deal with the complaint without the necessity of the parties appearing personally he was asked by the Tribunal to attend. We also had the benefit of statements made by Mr Eckhoff, editor of news for Television One and Mr Spencer Jolly, who interviewed the Minister the day after the offending programme. It was Mr Jolly's interview which had been found by the Corporation to fulfil its requirement to present significant points of view within the period of current interest.

The Tribunal viewed both items, had a copy of the script and the benefit of submissions made by the Minister and Mr Hudson for the Corporation.

It may be as well to dispose of one minor matter at this stage. There were conflicting versions referred to in the decision of the Corporation as to how the separate interview with Mr Gill was finally prepared. The Tribunal is satisfied that Mr Jolly was informed the day before that he would be required to do the interview and that he viewed the programme when it was broadcast and that no criticism is justified on the way in which he carried out that assignment.

Section 24 (1) Broadcasting Act 1976 makes the Corporation responsible for maintaining in its programmes and their presentation standards which will be generally acceptable in the community. In particular, the Corporation must have regard to:

- (d) The accurate and impartial gathering and presentation of news, according to recognised standards of objective journalism,
- (e) The principle that when controversial issues of public importance are discussed, reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest.

This complaint must be considered in the light of both provisions.

There were serious allegations contained in the studio introduction that "New Zealand immigration authorities were today accused of being cruel and ruthless in their dealings with Pacific Island immigrants," which were not fully borne out in the item broadcast. While the allegation of ruthlessness was broadcast, that of cruelty was not. Though Mr Eckhoff said it had been made by one of those interviewed but was not included in the film broadcast, we were not informed who had made the allegation. The point was not raised by the complainant.

Nevertheless the item as broadcast on 12 October was impartially presented as far as it went. The Tribunal accepts that Television One was justified in broadcasting the material it had gathered.

The question was whether its failure to broadcast in the same item a reply to the allegations was a breach of either section 24 (1) (d) or (e). The Corporation has regarded it solely as a matter to be dealt with under section 24 (1) (e).

We find that it can quite reasonably be dealt with also under section 24 (1) (d) as a question relating to the presentation of the news in accordance with the standards of objective journalism.

Furthermore, the Corporation found that it was not called upon to make an editorial judgment by deciding whether the issue would have been better covered in one bulletin but to decide whether in covering it on succeeding days Television One was in breach of section 24 (1) (e). The Corporation board came to the conclusion that, as the Act made provision for coverage over a longer period than a single programme, Television One was not in breach of its requirements. It therefore declined to uphold the complaint.

The Tribunal takes a different view. In doing so, the Tribunal wants to make it perfectly clear that it is not laying down a general rule requiring the withholding of news items until the views of authorities or other interested parties have been sought and obtained.

There were special circumstances relating to this news item which we consider clearly established that it would have been fairer and more in accordance with the standards of good journalism to secure and broadcast the reaction of those who were criticised at the same time as the criticism was made.

The broadcast item did not arise from the events of the day. It was in fact developed as a piece of investigative reporting over a three week period. The reporter had sought the co-operation of the authorities and had been referred to a senior officer of the Immigration Division for comment. It appears there was an indication that he would not comment personally so it was clear that the Minister would have to be approached. The Minister was not approached until the item had been broadcast despite the fact that a Wellington reporter, Mr Jolly, was told to watch the item on the Monday evening when it was broadcast from Auckland and then to seek the Minister's reaction. (This he did and the interview took place on the Tuesday, and was broadcast on Tuesday evening, 13 June).

It would have been a different situation had this been an item of reported news based, for example, on an event where one of the persons interviewed in the item had publicly made such allegations regarding the immigration authorities. In such circumstances official reaction might not have been available immediately. That, in itself, should not prevent the publication of such an item in the next available bulletin.

But in this case, despite the assertion that Immigration authorities "were today accused of being cruel and ruthless," the item (although filmed that day) was a researched piece prepared over three weeks. The immigration authorities were approached on the possibility of giving their reaction during this preparatory period, but no formal request was made for a person to appear to answer the charges after the interviews with those making the allegations had been filmed.

Television One news had also "assumed" there was no point in approaching the Minister to comment because it was a Cabinet day and that he would not be available. This assumption was found by the Corporation to have been unwarranted. It appears in fact Cabinet did not sit in the afternoon and the Minister would have been available.

No reason was given why it was necessary to broadcast this news item on Monday, 12 June, rather than wait until the other side of the story had been obtained.

Accordingly, although the Tribunal does not attempt to set out guiding principles as to when reaction should be sought from people who are to be publicly attacked and items withheld until it can be obtained, in this specific instance the Tribunal considers that the department and the Minister of Immigration were not fairly dealt with by delaying any presentation of their response to the allegations until the next day. The compiled, investigative nature of the story—as distinct from a spontaneous report from an event—gave ample opportunity to Television One news to complete an objective and balanced report.

The Tribunal has come to the conclusion that, particularly in light of the action taken to ensure that the subsequent interview with the Minister would be published, there was no deliberate attempt to depart from objectivity by Television One news. However, the incident does suggest that the considered editorial decision to delay the seeking of official reaction to serious charges was not in accordance with recognised professional standards. Such a practice can at worst be misinterpreted as showing bias (as indeed was alleged on this occasion). At best it can only lead to the deplorable practice of presenting only one part of the story because that way it makes better "news", with more impact and perhaps even, it might be said, more entertainment value than would be inherent in a balanced item giving the complete picture.

On this occasion, it appears to the Tribunal that a piece of investigative reporting was presented in an unnecessarily incomplete form, so tending to bring this essential form of journalism into undeserved disrepute not only with authority but with thoughtful and objective viewers. Broadcast journalists have a duty to themselves not only to be fair but to be seen to be fair in their investigations if the integrity of their medium is not to be challenged or indeed whittled away by such authority.

To this end, the Tribunal would commend the Corporation's editors to consider the implications of an editorial attitude reflected before the Tribunal by the editor of Television One news. He was asked if he saw any distinction between a news item which records something which happened on the day and must necessarily go to air on that particular day and a news item that arises from research over a period of time and which is finally put to air on a given day. Were they to be distinguished in deciding whether to balance the item in the same programme or later? From his point of view, Mr Eckhoff saw no difference in the two categories.

In relation to the provisions of section 24 (1) (e) the general issue of the treatment of overstayers is certainly a controversial issue of public importance and the Corporation acknowledges that reasonable efforts are to be made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest. It did not accept that this needed to occur in the present instance in the same programme. The Tribunal has already found that this was necessary under section 24 (1) (d).

A fresh set of allegations had been made. The conflict was over factual matters rather than the putting of points of view on a public issue. We find that it was not sufficient, in those circumstances, to have set about presenting one side of the case as news on one day and then to have endeavoured to balance by presentation of a reply as news on the next day.

The failure to secure an interview with the Minister for broadcast together with the allegations appeared to reflect not bias but a lack of editorial co-ordination. The editorial choice of presenting conflicting statements within a period or within the same programme would more fairly have been exercised on this occasion by taking the initiative to complete the investigation before presenting part of its result.

The complaint is upheld on the grounds that the news item should not have been broadcast without a reasonable opportunity given for the Minister or his department to answer the allegations in the same programme.

NOTES TO THE ACCOUNTS

1. Statement of Accounting Policies

- (a) General—The general accounting principles recognised as appropriate for the measurement and reporting of results and financial position under the historical cost method have been followed.
The following specified accounting policies have been consistently applied with the exception of the change of accounting policy relating to the realised gains and losses on New Zealand Government Stock as described in note 1c.
- (b) Tax Allocation—The charge for taxation in the profit and loss account is the amount of the estimated tax liability at current company taxation rates in respect of the net profit reported for the year. Timing differences arising from income receivable which has been accrued but not received in the current period and unrealised appreciation on investments (see note 3) are accounted for in the deferred taxation account.

(c) New Zealand Government and Local Authority Securities—These are all redeemable at par at fixed dates. Whilst in the ordinary course of business some realisation of the bank's investment in these securities may take place at prices below book values, it is the opinion of the directors that existing reserves are sufficient to cover any losses that are likely to arise on sales undertaken in the normal course of business.

The book values of securities purchased at a discount or a premium are adjusted through New Zealand Government stock revaluation reserve so as to obtain their redemption values by maturity dates (see note 3 below).

The difference between book values and proceeds on realisation of New Zealand Government stock is taken to profit and loss account in the year incurred. Previously these were taken to the Profit and Loss Account in equal annual instalments over a period of 5 years commencing with the year in which it arises.

The effect of this change in accounting policy is described in note 3.

2. As at 31 October 1978 the redemption value of New Zealand Government and local authority securities was $71,022,437, book value was $70,562,794, and market value (exclusive of accrued interest) was $68,907,797.

3. New Zealand Government Stock Revaluation Reserves—Arising from adjustment of book value of securities purchased at a discount or a premium and still held.
