The "normal" refers to the present site of the instruments. Standard period for normals is 1941-1970. No normals are available for stations with only short records.

*Indicates that the sunshine recorder is not located at the station but is in the near vicinity.

A rain day is a day with rainfall equal to or greater than 0.1 mm.

Where the extremes of temperature and rainfall have occurred more than once during the month, the date of the first occurrence is given.

WEATHER NOTES FOR OCTOBER 1979

General—During October pressures were slightly below normal in the north of New Zealand, but appreciably above to the south of the country. There was a lower frequency of north-west winds over the southern half of the country, but in the north the wind-flow was near normal. Throughout New Zealand, conditions were generally wetter, but slightly warmer than usual.

Grass growth was reported to be very slow in most districts especially in the North Island, where rain and cold winds kept feed in short supply. Stock was in good condition apart from some lambs and young cattle, but milk production was down because of lack of feed.

A combination of exceptionally high tides and winds gusting to more than 93 km/h (50 knots) caused the closure of roads around the Auckland waterfront on the 8th. Yachts were damaged when they broke their moorings and were driven ashore by strong winds.

Rainfall—The only areas with rainfall totals below normal were parts of coastal Bay of Plenty, Poverty Bay, northern Hawke's Bay, Manawatu, the Kaikoura coast, and Southland. Some of these areas had only 50 percent of the normal rainfall. At Invercargill the total was the lowest measured in October since 1966. In Waikato, Central Districts, Wairarapa, Wellington, Nelson, Marlborough, and Canterbury the monthly rainfalls were more than 100 percent above normal. Taupo and Waingawa (Masterton) recorded their highest October rainfalls since the stations began in 1950 and 1926 respectively, and at Christchurch Airport the rainfall was the highest since October 1947.

Homes were evacuated in the town of Ohura on the 14th when the Waitewhena river which runs through the town breached its banks. Flood waters were reported to be 76 cm deep after heavy rain totalling 109 mm fell in the period from the 13th to 15th inclusive.

Temperatures—Temperatures were above normal throughout most of New Zealand by about $\frac{1}{2}$ °C, but below by the same amount along the east coast of the South Island. Daytime maximum temperatures were lower than usual in most areas but night time temperatures were slightly above average. During one especially cold spell from the 22nd to 26th maximum temperatures were below normal by 3-6°C on the 23rd. From the 27th to 29th some east coast districts had maximum temperatures above average by as much as 5-8°C.

Sunshine—The only areas with sunshine hours above normal for the month were parts of Northland, Auckland, the West Coast, and Canterbury. At Dunedin less than 70 percent of the normal was recorded, and many areas throughout the country had 30-40 hours less sunshine than usual.

WEATHER SEQUENCE OCTOBER 1979

The cold front that had been moving northwards across the South Island at the end of September, brought moderate rain to most of the North Island at the beginning of the month. Early on the 2nd a wave depression formed on the front to the north-west of New Zealand, and moved slowly across the North Island on the 3rd and 4th. Heavy rain was reported in parts of Northland, Auckland, Bay of Plenty, Hawke's Bay, and Wairarapa. Many of these areas had reported falls of 30 to 50 mm in 24 hours. Throughout the South Island only isolated showers were recorded in this period. Temperatures were very cold along the east coast of the country at the beginning of the month.

Late on the 4th a ridge of high pressure extended onto New Zealand, from an anticyclone in the Tasman Sea moving eastwards. Most of the country had fine weather until late on the 7th. On the 7th a complex depression developed in the north Tasman Sea and began to move south-east towards the North Island. By the evening of the same day the depression and associated cold front had passed onto Northland bringing moderate to heavy rain to most areas in the North Island, and parts of the South Island as it continued to move south-east. On the morning of the 10th the depression was lying to the east of the North Island, and a ridge of high pressure extended onto the country from the Tasman Sea.

A trough of low pressure moved onto the South Island late on the 11th and this brought heavy rain to Fiordland, and moderate falls to most of the country as it moved northwards. At Wellington more than 40 mm was recorded in the 24-hour period up to 9 a.m. on the 13th. This trough was followed by another on the 13th which also brought heavy rain to the West Coast, and parts of the central North Island. A small depression developed within the trough of low pressure on the 14th, but moved rapidly eastwards across New Zealand and was lying to the south-east of the country by the 15th. Temperatures were above normal throughout most of the country during the second week of the month.

On the 16th an anticyclone covered the North Island, and a cold front associated with a depression moving to the south of the country moved onto the South Island. Heavy rain was reported on the West Coast, and light to moderate falls elsewhere west of the main ranges in the South Island. Until the morning of the 19th the anticyclone covered the whole of New Zealand and fine weather prevailed throughout the country. A cold front associated with a depression to the northwest of the North Island moved onto Northland early on the 19th. The depression had moved onto the country by the morning of the 20th, and rainfalls of more than 70 mm were recorded in 24 hours in Northland. Light to moderate falls were reported in most areas in the northern half of the North Island as the depression moved eastwards. A trough of low pressure brought heavy rain to Fiordland, and lighter falls to the whole country as it moved northwards across New Zealand on the 21st and 22nd.

An anticyclone moved across New Zealand from the west on the 23rd/26th, only light rain falling east of the main ranges in the North Island in this period. On the morning of the 28th a trough of low pressure had started to move northwards across New Zealand, and 24-hour falls of more than 80 mm were recorded at some stations on the West Coast. A wave depression formed on the cold front in the trough, and this produced very heavy rain in Westland on the 29th and 30th. Between 100 and 150 mm were recorded in some areas in 24 hours. Heavy rain also fell in northern parts of Canterbury, Marlborough, Taranaki, and Bay of Plenty as the system crossed New Zealand. Most areas had light to moderate rain. Later on the 31st an anticyclone in the Tasman Sea extended a ridge of high pressure towards the country. Temperatures were warmer than usual in most districts at the end of the month, appreciably higher than normal along the east coasts of both islands.

NOTES TO THE ACCOUNTS

Statement of Accounting Policies

1. (a) Amortisation of Public Securities—Book values of New Zealand Government and Local Authority Securities which were purchased at a discount or a premium, are being amortised annually so as to attain their redemption values by maturity date.

(b) Profits and Losses on Realisation of Public Securities—The difference between book value and proceeds on realisation of New Zealand Government and Local Authority Securities is taken to Profit and Loss Account in equal annual instalments over a period of 5 years commencing with the year in which they arise.

2. Investments—The New Zealand Government and Local Authority Securities are all redeemable at par at fixed dates. Whilst in the ordinary course of business some realisation of the bank's investment in these securities may take place at prices below book values, it is the opinion of the directors that existing reserves are sufficient to cover any losses that are likely to arise on sales undertaken in the normal course of business.

As the name implies this book is written for use by the layman rather than the technician, the engineer, or the scientist. This book does not include conversion tables but rather relates to metric units and their use, comparisons of size and includes a wide range of metric information. How big is a litre? What is a kilopascal? When will I use a centimetre? What will I buy in kilograms? Why is New Zealand going metric? If these and similar questions are causing you concern this book will provide the answers.

MOA-HUNTER PERIOD OF MAORI CULTURE

ROGER DUFF—CANTERBURY MUSEUM BULLETIN No. 1

436 p. Third edition. 1977. $17.50

This book deals with the most important site yet investigated and in its discussions it traverses most of the New Zealand archaeological field.

A chance discovery in 1939 by a 13-year-old boy revealed the grave of a chief in the gravels of the Wairau boulder bank. The grave, goods, and bones of the ancient chief, prone in his gravel grave, with skull directed towards the setting sun, spoke with more authority regarding his race than the distorted memories of Maori tradition.

Although scholarly and technical, the book sustains throughout the drama of this archaeological discovery, and recreates from the evidence of bone and stone the life of our first Polynesians in the Moa-hunter period of Maori culture.
