IN the matter of the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, and in the matter of an application by Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation (N.Z.) Ltd., for a review of the feature film I'm Not Feeling Myself Tonight.

THE CENSORSHIP BOARD OF REVIEW

Mr A. B. Beatson, S.M. (Chairman); Dr R. A. Sharp; Mr B. S. G. Lambert; Mr R. Tanner; Mrs M. T. Cole; Mrs U. A. Ewert; Mrs V. Forbes; and Professor E. M. Dalziel, C.B.E.

Date of Review: 31 August 1979.

Decision of the Films Censorship Board of Review

Having conducted a review of the film I'm Not Feeling Myself Tonight, on the 31st August 1979, and acting in accordance with its authority under the Cinematograph Films Act 1976, the Films Censorship Board of Review decided unanimously that the film should not be approved for exhibition. The Board was thereby in agreement with the decision of the Chief Censor of Films.

The story revolves around the doings of a young sex researcher who manufactures a portable ray machine which encourages uninhibited sexuality. The film depicts the bizarre results of the use of the machine on a number of people who are unaware of its effects.

The Board was unanimous in its view that the film was trite, ill-made and little more than a "sexploitation" production.

In reaching its decision as to whether or not the film was likely to be injurious to the public good (section 26 (2)) the Board took into particular account the matters specified in subsections b, c, and d. Little time had to be spent on reaching the decision that the film had no artistic merit and was of no value or importance for social, cultural, or other reasons.

As for the way the film treated sex and indecent or offensive behaviour, the Board did not consider in fact that, taken as a whole, the film was unduly sexually explicit, particularly when compared with other films which have been passed both by the Chief Censor and the Board of Review itself. But considerable concern was unanimously felt about the way in which the film denigrated women in particular, when the device which has been referred to was used. It was felt that the film simply offered simulated sex for people to leer at and that women were treated simply as sex objects. There were no meaningful relationships between any of the characters (in contrast to the last film dealt with by the Board: The Fruit is Ripe). It was also considered by all members of the Board that the film would be offensive to a large number of people of any age.

In coming to its conclusion the Board was careful not to refuse to approve the film for exhibition simply because it was in bad taste. Bad taste, of course, is not a factor which can properly be taken into account in reaching a decision as to whether or not the film is likely to be injurious to the public good. However, the overall effect of the film, which was exploitive, denigrative of women in particular, and lacking entirely in artistic merit, lead the Board to the inevitable conclusion that the film was likely to be injurious to the public good, particularly as its only real appeal would be to the prurient.

A. B. BEATSON, Chairman.

519 p. 1972. $8.75

The Maori people are honourably known far outside the confines of their New Zealand home. Acknowledged to be one of the finest of the native races within the British Commonwealth they have long been celebrated for their splendid physical appearance, their proud bearing, their aristocratic spirit, their fluent oratory, and above all for their prowess in war. This book contains an account of the social and economic organisation of the Maori people before the organisation was transformed by contact with Western civilisation. It is a major scientific contribution to economic anthropology and has now become a standard work.
