Decision No. 11/86

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

In the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of applications for television warrants:

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Members: Anne E. Wilson and Robert Boyd-Bell.

Co-opted Members: Wiremu Kerekere, M. S. Aked and G. J. Schmitt.

RULING

AOTEAROA BROADCASTING SYSTEM INC. ("ABS") has applied to the Tribunal to amend the applications for four warrants to an application for a programme warrant. This was to accommodate an arrangement to be entered into with Independent Television (ITV) Ltd. ("ITV") for ABS to supply and broadcast programmes on ITV's third television service if ITV companies should be granted regional television warrants for which they had applied. ABS would do so by means of a programme warrant which gives it legal responsibility for the programmes.

A collateral application is made by ITV to admit evidence from Mr C. J. Fernyhough concerning ITV's willingness to enter into the arrangements, providing some information about the arrangements and providing in support a draft letter which would be amended (since it was out of date) concerning the proposed arrangements.

The proposed evidence would also contain an indication that the offer would remain open for 1 year from the grant of the warrants and ITV would invite the Tribunal to impose a condition on each warrant to require broadcasting by ABS under the authority of a television programme warrant for the time and at the times agreed by ABS and ITV.

In support of the application, Mr Gault said financial support had been withdrawn by the Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (the "Corporation") from ABS a short time before it was to commence its case before the Tribunal. Because it believed it had a compelling case to present, ABS had opened its case on the basis that only such evidence as would be relevant to the present hearing would be adduced even if the application were not pursued in that form. No evidence of financial or commercial ability was presented to the Tribunal.

Mr Gault said the objective from the outset had been to secure a place in New Zealand television for the Maori people and their cultural heritage which involved assured air time, autonomy and control by Maori people in programme making. He therefore applied to have the ABS applications considered and dealt with as an application for a programme warrant accompanied by details of an arrangement considered suitable for transmission of its programmes which had been arrived at with ITV. The proposal would involve the broadcasting of programmes produced by ABS for a total of seven hours and thirty-five minutes per week in the first year, eight and three-quarter hours per week in the second year and ten hours per week in subsequent years. An outline of the nature and schedule of the programmes was given to the Tribunal by Mr Gault and details of the programme content were filed.

Mr Gault said the programme schedule had been formulated on the same principles as had been set out in the application. He indicated that discussions with other applicants had not resulted in any similar arrangement being concluded. (Other applicants' counsel said that statement did not accurately reflect the actual position and what had occurred.)

If the Tribunal did not grant broadcasting warrants to ITV, Mr Gault said, ABS would urge that no warrant should be granted to any other applicant unless that applicant first agreed to accept a programme warrant in the terms ABS had agreed with ITV.

The Tribunal was informed that access to ITV facilities would be given to ABS as a production house and programme warrant holder. The cost of making the programmes would be met by ITV on an agreed "formula".

Mr Fernyhough's evidence indicated that ITV would "issue or transfer new shares to ABS or its nominee comprising a 20 percent interest in consideration of ABS taking up a programme warrant in conjunction with warrants issued to ITV."

Mr Gault said that ABS had decided not to press for the grant to it of television warrants subject to arrangements for funding.

Mr Gault submitted that if warrants for a third service issued without the imposition of appropriate conditions for Maori broadcasting, the opportunity to develop the structure of broadcasting in New Zealand consistent with bi-cultural interests would be lost. There would be formidable difficulties in re-structuring after a truly competitive commercial system had been established. For those reasons ABS supported the grant to ITV subject to a programme warrant grant to ABS. He said that such an application had been expected for some time and was a logical step. To defer the application for a programme warrant would be time-consuming and wasteful. It would postpone dealing with the issue. He said there were wider interests than those of the other applicants to consider, namely the public interest.

In support Mr Thomas argued that it had not been possible to make the applications earlier; that a programme warrant was a lesser application than an application for a television warrant but was within the framework of the earlier applications; that the change represented an updating of existing ABS evidence; that ever since the Corporation's proposed funding was withdrawn, ABS's uncertain status had been made known and it had avoided seeking an adjournment which would have caused delay; and that the issue went to the public interest which was a primary concern under section 80.

Mr Galbraith for the Film Commission and the Independent Producers and Directors Guild urged that the public interest issues be addressed first as they were fundamental to the grant of any warrants to any applicants.

Counsel for SCTV and UTC, ESTV and TV3 opposed the applications and referred to correspondence with ABS.

This description of the submissions put forward is necessarily brief and does not set out every argument which was put to us.

1. The Nature of the Application:

Section 71, Broadcasting Act 1976, provides for two kinds of warrants relating to television. A television warrant authorises the holder to operate a television station and to broadcast programmes from that station.

A television programme warrant authorises the holder to broadcast programmes from a television station. It does not authorise the holder to operate the television station.

Section 71 provides that there can be more than one warrant operating in respect of the same broadcasting station and the warrants would specify the times on specified days of the week during which the holder of the warrant may or shall broadcast programmes.

The essential benefit of a programme warrant is that the owner of the transmission equipment used to broadcast under the programme warrant is not under any liability by reason of being owner of the equipment, in respect of anything published in the course of the broadcast. In other words, responsibility rests with the programme warrant holder. No legal liability for what is broadcast falls on the television warrant holder who owns the station from which the programme is being broadcast in accordance with the programme warrant.

Section 71 (3) provides that where the Tribunal grants a television programme warrant it shall not issue the warrant unless it is satisfied that the applicant has made arrangements with the holder of the television warrant for the joint use of the transmission equipment and such other equipment (if any) of the television station as is necessary to enable the applicant to broadcast the applicant's programmes.

We see the latter provision as indicating that final arrangements regarding the use of the transmission equipment need not be formalised at the time the application for a television programme warrant is made, although the Tribunal would want to have evidence of the arrangements proposed in order to decide whether they would be feasible.

An application for a programme warrant is essentially different from an application for a television warrant. It would normally be accompanied by supporting material relating not only to the programmes to be broadcast but also financial and other evidence relating to matters to be considered under section 80 and the Tribunal's rules and directions that would be given upon the filing of such an application.

The Tribunal considers the application now proposed is so inherently different from the application filed by ABS that it is inappropriate to attempt a procedure to amend applications for television warrants. A new application would have to be filed.

The applicant would then have to file evidence in support specifically directed to the proposition. The Tribunal has heard evidence relating to the desirability of Maori programming in connection with the ABS application for television warrants and in evidence relating to other applications. But it has not yet passed judgment on that. It would be better to consider a programme warrant application in the context of the Tribunal's conclusions drawn from the lengthy evidence and submissions it has heard.

ABS elected not to call some evidence in support of its application. It did not file an application to amend its application, although this was requested in September 1985. The amendment then contemplated was not to change the nature of the application to that of a programme warrant. The evidence in support was related to a third 'channel' not to providing programmes on contract for television warrant holders or to broadcast via a programme warrant.

ABS claims that the sole reason for failure to complete its case is that the Corporation has withdrawn support, but the Corporation states that that support was predicated on ABS obtaining sufficient outside support, which it had failed to do. If what ABS says about the withdrawal of BCNZ support coming as a surprise is true, it is clear the September 1985 intention was not to apply for an amendment to change the type of application.

2. The Consequences of Granting the Application:

The original call was for applications for four television warrants for four regions of New Zealand, i.e., warrants that authorised the holder to operate television stations, and to broadcast programmes from those stations. (Applicants had also to specify provision which would be made for news programmes by an independent news company. The Ministerial direction referred to such a news company operating pursuant to a programme warrant. Thus applications were filed for programme warrants for news companies.)

The Tribunal has not called for applications to be filed for programme warrants to provide Maori programming on any stations established as a result of these hearings.

If the Tribunal now received such an application and intended to proceed to hear it, then time would need to be given for objections and may also need to be given for other persons to make applications for programme warrants. Additional hearings of a proposal quite different from what was originally applied for would be needed for the ABS application.

This would necessitate a period of 3 to 4 months for potential applicants to organise themselves and prepare applications. There would then follow a further period when it would be necessary for evidence in support to be filed and for those who opposed the applications to prepare their evidence. We can envisage about 6 months being added to the present hearings for the purpose of giving to others an opportunity which ABS claims for itself alone on the grounds that it had applied for television warrants and was unable to complete a case for the grant of such warrants. It would delay the decision on the applications for television warrants.

There are also implications for the ITV application. It is clear that the proposal involves ITV in financing ABS production costs and possibly capital facilities (together with Television New Zealand should it be agreed that ABS would supply such programmes for TVNZ stations as well as for the private warrant holders). If the ABS application were to be considered, then it would be necessary to consider amendments to the ITV applications. These would cover financial arrangements, corporate structure and all the consequences that flowed from such changes. The amendments might be challenged as a radical change to the basis of the ITV applications. Further accounting evidence would once more have to be produced and examined.

ITV indicated that it should be able to approach the matter on the basis that as it developed its thinking it should be able to inform the Tribunal and modify its application to absorb new ideas. But this is not a change of emphasis or degree. It is a proposal to introduce new programming and that applications be changed during the period of the hearings to vacate programme time in favour of another applicant which wishes to change its application to a fundamentally different type of warrant.

The Tribunal notes that at an earlier stage ITV indicated a willingness to accept a condition that would require it to make a substantial financial contribution to the cost of production and transmission of Maori programmes on TV2 during peak listening times. It was a significant departure from ITV's original proposals.

That proposal in essence was for the grant of funds from the third service operators to the Corporation to assist it to provide extensive Maori programming at peak hours.

The proposal was criticised by ABS because it failed to give autonomy to Maori programme makers. It was not taken up by the Corporation.

The new proposal is of a different kind. It is for ITV to carry additional Maori programmes, produced by ABS and transmitted in time vacated by ITV for the purpose.

ITV has concluded its case except for some matters of clarification and some rebuttal evidence it has sought to introduce. If the Tribunal were to grant this application it may then have to allow the other applicants who have all closed their cases to re-vamp their applications to the extent that any may wish to do so.

3. Unfairness and Natural Justice:

Regulation 15, Broadcasting Regulations 1977 (S.R. 1977/11) requires the Tribunal to advertise applications for warrants and to receive relevant evidence and representations.

If the application were amended to be an application for a programme warrant, and we were to proceed to deal with it then we would deny possible objectors an opportunity to be heard and possibly deny the Tribunal relevant evidence and submissions.

A proper procedure would require a full application to be filed and advertised, evidence submitted in writing and any interested persons given ample time to consider the matter, which would lengthen the hearings by months.

To do so at this stage of a long hearing may actually inhibit interested parties from making submissions or objecting because they might believe that ABS has been given some special preference as an applicant because it had earlier applied for a different type of warrant.

If the Tribunal were to proceed to a hearing without adequate opportunity for other applications to be considered there would be a likelihood of unfairness to objectors or to potential applicants who may wish to provide Maori programming for any private warrant holder. Because the ABS application for television warrants was supported by the New Zealand Maori Council and by District Maori Councils, ABS has contended that the possibility of any other application for a programme warrant should not be considered by the Tribunal. Mr Gault said he could find nothing in the Act or regulations which required the Tribunal to flush out other potential competing applicants. We find no justification in the Act for the Tribunal to favour an applicant by permitting an application of one kind (which had been advertised and heard) to be changed after the hearing to an application of another kind. Public notice would be required on the grounds of fairness to possible objectors. The amended application may be open to objection on different grounds. There may be others who would wish to apply for a programme warrant, especially if they were to learn there may be an opportunity to be fully financed by a television applicant and possibly to receive capital grants towards the establishment of studios.

It also appears on the evidence that the possibility of a programme warrant had not been considered by ABS previously. Yet it was open for it to negotiate a position with any of the applicants before television warrant applications were even filed. It chose not to follow that course.

ABS has claimed that it is now put in an adverse position because of the proximity to the scheduled end of the hearings. Certainly if opposition of other counsel were based solely on the shortness of time before final addresses, we agree there would be merit in the ABS argument. But it has to be said that ABS has received concessions that no other applicant has received in relation to the timing of its evidence, the nature and extent of the evidence being filed, the conduct of hearings and the procedures to be adopted. It could not have coped with an early date for the hearing of its case.

In fact if ABS had been ready it may well have been dealt with earlier in the list and the same situation would have occurred upon the withdrawal of Corporation support. An application to amend would have been made after ABS had closed its case.

If a grant of warrants were made to ITV, then there would be no difficulty about dealing with an application from ABS or any other applicant to provide programmes pursuant to a programme warrant.

However, Mr Thomas submitted that once the hearings were over, if television warrants were granted, successful applicants (other than ITV) would do their best to avoid carrying out public interest responsibilities.

The Tribunal does not agree. Upon the grant of warrants to any applicants, the Tribunal would be capable of imposing conditions regarding programming and in particular Maori programming if, after hearing all submissions, it thought that to be appropriate. Such a condition could, for instance, require arrangements to be made for autonomous broadcasting through a programme warrant holder or some other arrangement if this were thought to be appropriate. We therefore consider there is no advantage in dealing with the question of a programme warrant for Maori programming at this stage.

There are in fact advantages in dealing with it afterwards. Those who may be interested in producing and broadcasting Maori programmes would be dealing only with successful warrant holders.

Negotiations would be carried out within the framework of any public interest requirement that the Tribunal saw fit to impose as a condition.

ABS has offered no evidence on basic matters under section 80 including the financial and commercial ability of the applicant to carry on the proposed service. A later application would enable ABS to get staff into a position to organise its finances and other operational matters and to give evidence to satisfy the Tribunal as to its financial and commercial ability. ITV is prepared to undertake to keep its offer open for a year after the grant of warrants.

If there were no grant of any warrant to any applicants then there would have been a great deal of time and effort saved on the part of all concerned. Considerable delay in the hearings would have been avoided.

Since submissions can be made on the desirability of Maori programming conditions it is actually premature to be considering now an amendment application for a programme warrant before the Tribunal's position on Maori broadcasting and programmes has been established.

In all the circumstances the Tribunal considers it is undesirable to grant the application for amendment.

The Tribunal will allow Mr Fernyhough to give the draft evidence concerning the proposed arrangements with ABS.

The evidence is similar in kind to that which the Tribunal has previously allowed to be given. It states a changed intention but does not extend the detail much beyond the information given through Professor Winiata.

The revised offer relating to ABS updates evidence produced in cross examination of Professor Winiata and will be admitted.

The draft letter will not be admitted. Its probative value is quite limited and it opens up matters of detail which are not needed at this stage but which would be relevant to a programme warrant application.

LPG Fuel System Approvals—Concessional Fuel Cylinder Approvals

PURSUANT to regulation 90B of the Traffic Regulations 1976* (as inserted by the Traffic Regulations 1976, Amendment No. 7) and pursuant to the powers delegated to me by the Secretary for Transport, I, Robert Norman Abram, Chief Automotive Engineer, hereby approve the components listed in the Schedule hereto for inclusion in any LPG automotive fuel system installed and operated in accordance with the requirements of New Zealand Standard NZS 5422, Part 1, 1980 (and any standard made in amendment thereto or in substitution therefor) subject to the conditions of approval set out in respect of any component in the said Schedule.

SCHEDULE
LPG FUEL CYLINDERS

MOT Reference	Manufacturer	Country of Origin	Specification	Material	Inspection Authority	Working Pressure Rating (MPa)	Test Pressure (MPa)	Nominal Water Capacity (litres)
AF LO3C 027	Manchester Tank Co.	U.S.A.	ASME 8/1	Steel	ASME	1.64 (238 psi)	2.46 (358 psi)	72 (19.2 U.S. gal)

CONDITIONS OF APPROVAL

LPG fuel cylinders are approved subject to the following conditions:

1. That they be permanently and clearly marked, on a suitably attached metal plate, with characters not less than 6 mm high if space permits but in any case not less than 3 mm high, displaying the following information:
 - (a) The specification to which the cylinder was manufactured.
 - (b) The manufacturer's name or mark and the serial number of the cylinder.
 - (c) The date of the original cylinder inspection and the identification mark of the inspection authority who made the inspection.
 - (d) The date of any periodic cylinder test and the identification mark of the cylinder testing station who made each test.
 - (e) The cylinder test pressure.
 - (f) The nominal water capacity of the cylinder.
 - (g) The tare weight of the cylinder.
2. That they be clearly marked or labelled to indicate that the cylinder is suitable for use with LPG.
3. That they be provided with valve threads and fittings which provide the following functions:
 - (a) Filling connection incorporating a non-return valve.
 - (b) Service valve incorporating an excess-flow valve.
 - (c) Contents gauge.
 - (d) Pressure relief valve.
 - (e) A fixed liquid level indicator and an automatic fill shut off device which prevents the cylinder being filled beyond 85 percent of the total cylinder capacity.

Valves and fittings shall have a service pressure rating of at least that of the cylinder to which they are fitted and shall be dimensioned, threaded and marked in accordance with the requirements of section 2.3 of New Zealand Standard NZS 5422 "The use of LPG and CNG Fuels in Internal Combustion Engines—Part 1 LPG Fuel".
4. That they be tested at periods not exceeding 5 years in accordance with the requirements of Australian Standard AS 2337-1980 or in accordance with the periodic test requirements laid down in the specification to which the cylinder was manufactured.
5. That they be fitted to a motor vehicle in such a position that they will not be subject to the direct rays of the sun, either by fitting them within a suitable vehicle compartment, or by providing a suitable shield if the cylinders are fitted to the exterior of the vehicle.
6. The terms of this approval do not allow the continued importation of such LPG fuel cylinders and it does not apply to cylinders which have not been installed in a motor vehicle by 31 December 1985.

NOTES: The effect of this notice is to allow the continued use of LPG fuel cylinders which are known to have been imported into New Zealand prior to the introduction of the Dangerous Goods (Class 2—Gases) Regulations 1980 and which were acceptable under the previous dangerous goods requirements, but whose working pressure rating would disqualify them for approval for general use under the Traffic Regulations 1976. They are approved subject to the additional proviso that they must not be exposed to direct sunlight (to reduce the possibility that solar radiation would raise the temperature of the contents of the cylinder such that the developed pressure of the cylinder contents exceeded the working pressure rating of the cylinder).

Dated at Wellington this 25th day of August 1986.

R. N. ABRAM, Chief Automotive Engineer.
