Decision No. 10/87
Com 6/86

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

In the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by PETER LORIMER FRAWLEY of Auckland.

WARRANT HOLDER—Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Radio New Zealand).

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Member: Robert Boyd-Bell.

Co-opted Members: Brian W. Stephenson and G. J. Schmitt.

Dated the 31st day of March 1987.

DECISION

THIS complaint arose from the broadcast of an item in Midday Report on Radio New Zealand's National Programme on Wednesday, 5 February 1986.

The Complaint:

Mr Peter L. Frawley lodged a formal complaint with the BCNZ on 6 March 1986.

Mr Frawley complained that the item in question dealt with workers being made redundant and comment was sought from only one economist, Mr Len Bayliss.

He said Mr Bayliss was recognised as a supporter of the economic policies of the current Minister of Finance and could be described as a "monetarist".

Mr Frawley submitted that economics is not a value-free science and alleged Mr Bayliss essentially said the lay-offs were a good thing and part of the rationalisation process, which could not be considered impartial.

He submitted that the programme makers did not satisfy the statutory requirement of balance by not presenting the views of another economist, nominating as an example Professor Bryan Philpott of Victoria University.

Mr Frawley said "the issue of the lay-offs" was of sufficient controversial public importance to justify the presentation of different points of view.

The Corporation's Response:

The Board of the BCNZ considered Mr Frawley's complaint on 30 April and the Secretary of the Corporation, Mr I. H. McLean, conveyed its decision on 14 May 1986.

Mr McLean said the complaint was considered under section 24 (1) (e) of the Broadcasting Act and the principle that when controversial issues of public importance are discussed, reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest.

He noted that there had been no mention of the item of redundancies or lay-offs in the industry.

The BCNZ said Mr Bayliss was approached "for his general economic expertise and knowledge of the general tendency for companies everywhere to seek the most favourable manufacturing environment, including the movement of operations to other countries and moving them back home when conditions changed."

The BCNZ also said it was difficult to find anything controversial or supportive of the policies of the present Minister of Finance in the series of statements.

The Board did not consider there had been a breach of the Act and did not uphold the complaint.

Reference to the Tribunal:

Mr Frawley was not satisfied and referred his complaint to the Tribunal on 11 June 1986.

He reiterated his original complaint regarding lack of balance and the selection of Mr Bayliss as a commentator.

The main points of Mr Frawley's submission can be summarised as follows:

- (a) The BCNZ failed to address the central issue of balancing significant points of view.
- (b) Contrary to the Board's opinion, he considered the comments made by Mr Bayliss implicitly supported the policies of the present Minister of Finance.
- (c) Mr Bayliss had publicly supported the Minister's monetarist economic policies.
- (d) Such policies were largely responsible for the economic changes prompting New Zealand firms to shift manufacturing off-shore.
- (e) The Board "entered the merits" of the dispute by apparently subscribing to the Bayliss view as self-evident truth.
- (f) There was a clear lack of depth in state broadcasting financial journalism.
- (g) The programme makers were too ready to assume that economics is a value-free science where non-political and impartial views are easily "subscribable".
- (h) No one view is right, but other significant expert views should have been sought.

The Corporation's Submission:

In its submission to the Tribunal dated 24 July, the BCNZ said it appeared that the complainant had misheard or misunderstood the news item in question. The Corporation said Mr Frawley seemed more concerned about Mr Bayliss being invited to explain a newsworthy development than with what he actually said.

The BCNZ said the item was handled in a pragmatic rather than political way which required explanation as distinct from argument. RNZ news staff did not identify the topic as having a controversial dimension requiring a range of economic or political opinion and argument.

In a detailed analysis of specific elements in the complaint the Corporation said:

- (a) Redundancies, lay-offs and rationalisation were not mentioned in the item.
- (b) Mr Bayliss' comments were basically in the nature of a common-sense factual exposition which, they said, pointed out:
 - (i) The fact that companies were moving activities off-shore was noted as not being something new.
 - (ii) The economy was going through a process of change and off-shore movement could be accelerating.
 - (iii) The overseas movement took advantage of cheaper labour there.

(iv) In the long run this did not necessarily mean fewer jobs in New Zealand, companies grew and provided more jobs as they got bigger.

(v) Though there were direct benefits of off-shore locations, the profits came back to New Zealand so the country could well benefit from the move.

The item was regarded as "embracing non-political expert comment (a brief one, at that) on a matter of public interest at the time, but hardly controversial, and certainly not covering the ground which Mr Frawley alleged".

The Corporation added:

"The debate about economic change has been aired continuously since the change of Government in 1984, and it is submitted that the item in question was not an appropriate topic on which to explore further elements of that debate. As already indicated, it was a look at the fundamentals of a given manufacturing situation."

The Report:

The Tribunal was supplied with a full transcript of the item as broadcast, together with news reports from the previous day of the PDL decision to move some production off-shore.

The Tribunal invited Mr Bayliss to comment on whether the interview as broadcast was a fair and reasonable representation of his views.

Mr Bayliss advised the Tribunal that the report was a "heavily edited and shortened version of the interview".

He went on to say that those who make public statements face varying qualities of reports being made. They have to take the rough with the smooth and, by and large, he was happy with the quality of reports made.

DECISION

THE Tribunal accepts the point made by the complainant that economics is not a value-free science.

As reported and edited some of the comments made by Mr Bayliss were, at the least, debatable. The changes in the New Zealand economy were and are matters of political and public controversy.

The Tribunal also accepts the Corporation's submission that Mr Frawley appears to have misheard or misunderstood some parts of the item; that he ascribed statements and views to Mr Bayliss which were not so expressed in the report; and that the debate about economic change has been widely aired.

Nevertheless, the Tribunal considers there are real dangers in conducting interviews on major economic changes and presenting heavily edited versions as "non-political expert comment" or "common-sense factual exposition".

The reporter explicitly sought opinions rather than factual explanations in the questions posed to Mr Bayliss:

"Does New Zealand just have to sort of grin and bear it?"

and

"In the long term, is there any advantage to the country in New Zealand firms going off-shore to produce?"

But section 24 (1) (e) of the Broadcasting Act refers to:

"The principle that when controversial issues of public importance are discussed, reasonable efforts are made to present significant points of view either in the same programme or in other programmes within the period of current interest."

The Tribunal considers that "Radio New Zealand news people" and the Corporation were in error in considering that the topic was not controversial.

While the terms "lay-offs" and "redundancies" were not used in the item as Mr Frawley alleged, the reporter's questions referred to "fewer jobs", Mr Bayliss mentioned "job creation" and "jobs terminating". It would be narrowly semantic to assert that the issue of continued employment was not present in the report.

As for the question of economic change being related to Government policies, both the previous day's reports from PDL Industries (so far as they are relevant to this complaint) and the introduction to the item explicitly referred to the inflation effect of devaluation, the float of the dollar, high interest rates, and the instability of the de-regulated economy.

Insofar as the item was about a particular instance of change in manufacturing, the defence that "the debate about the economic change has been aired continuously since the change of Government in 1984" is not relevant.

Insofar as the item purported to explore "the fundamentals of a new manufacturing development", it moved into the area of political and economic controversy and falls within the ambit of section 24 (1) (e) of the Act.

The Corporation presented no evidence that reasonable efforts had been made to present significant points of view within the period of interest.

Further, while Mr Bayliss did not use the term "rationalisation" as Mr Frawley alleged, he did say "we're concentrating on those things we're good at". The Tribunal finds it difficult to distinguish between that process and rationalisation.

The Tribunal finds that, while Mr Frawley over-stated his case, he did have some grounds for complaint.

The topic was controversial and should have been identified as such.

Mr Bayliss had opinions on the topic, which were sought and broadcast.

Some, at least, of those opinions as broadcast are open to challenge. For example, the unequivocal statement that "we (New Zealand) benefit" from such off-shore manufacturing and that profits or dividends are remitted back to New Zealand.

(The examples Mr Bayliss himself used of Fisher and Paykel and Allflex as successful "new life in the Corporate field" both developed under a regime of some economic protection different from current economic policy.)

Other significant opinions ought also to have been presented within the period of current interest.

The complaint is upheld.

In so ruling, the Tribunal does not endorse all the comments which Mr Frawley made regarding Mr Bayliss. The issue in essence is one of balance under section 24 (1) (e).

Co-Opted Members:

The Tribunal co-opted Mr Stephenson and Professor Schmitt as persons whose qualifications and experience were likely to be of assistance in dealing with this complaint. They took part in the deliberations of the Tribunal but the decision, in accordance with the Act, is that of the permanent members.

Signed for the Tribunal.

Transcript of Interview Broadcast on Radio New Zealand—Complaint 6/86

Wednesday, 5 February 1986.

Presenter: Following a report that PDL industries are moving their heater manufacture offshore because of currency changes and high costs, the export institute has warned that there could be an exodus of exporters because of the instability of the deregulated economy. However economist, Len Bayliss, says there's nothing new in the trend of establishments moving on and off-shore.

Len Bayliss: To some extent, it seems to be accelerating because our economy is going through a process of change and we're concentrating on those things we're good at. Some of those things where the manufacturers or the firms concerned are setting up overseas subsidiaries others of them have a very high labour cost and depend upon exports to some extent and are moving over to where the labour costs are cheaper so that they can survive.

Reporter: Now when something like the PDL shift happens, it does in the long-term mean that there are that many fewer jobs in New Zealand. Does New Zealand just have to sort of grin and bear it?

Bayliss: Well, of course, not necessarily. I think the process of job creation is going on all the time. I mean, there are jobs terminating and firms going bankrupt, or winding down, or so on—and there are new there's some new life in the corporate field. For instance, there are firms like Fisher and Paykel, for instance, which 40 years ago was a relatively small firm. It's now a very large and very efficient firm. Allflex, the ear-tag makers, started off with nothing 20 years ago and now has hundreds of employees in Palmerston North.

Reporter: In the long term, is there any advantage to the country in New Zealand firms going offshore to produce?

Bayliss: Well, by and large, the straight answer to that question is yes—and presumably a firm is going overseas because it is profitable to it and because it sees better business opportunities. Obviously there are direct benefits to Singapore and Australia in terms of new factories and new jobs and so on. But these firms will be remitting profits, or dividends, back to New Zealand. So we benefit.

Presenter: Economist, Len Bayliss, talking to Peter Minson.

Decision No. 11/87

COM 1/85

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

IN the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by the GROUP OPPOSED TO ADVERTISING OF LIQUOR (CLIFFORD REGINALD TURNER).

WARRANT HOLDER—CAPITAL CITY RADIO LIMITED (Radio Windy).

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Members: Ann E. Wilson and Robert Boyd-Bell.

Co-opted Members: Brian W. Stephenson and Wayne Sellwood.

DECISION

MR Clifford Reginald Turner, on behalf of the complainant, the Group Opposed to Advertising of Liquor ("GOAL") complains of a Lion Breweries commercial for a competition. It was broadcast on Radio Windy about 11 a.m. on 31 October 1984.

The Commercial:

The dialogue in the 29 second commercial is set against a buzz of conversation of the kind to be heard in a crowded bar. Two male voices are talking animatedly as they enthusiastically tear the tabs off cans and discover, presumably from the tabs, the number of points they have gained in the competition. Beer is not mentioned, nor is the advertiser's name. A voice-over invites listeners "to be in the draws for 10 world holidays in New Zealand's great tear tab competition," and says that an entry form with details is available from liquor outlets.

A transcript of the commercial, reconstructed from a recording, is appended to this decision.

The Complaint:

For GOAL, Mr Turner argued that the advertisement was in breach of Advertisement Rule 1.11.5 which prohibits advertising referring to any lottery or competition which requires the purchase of liquor to participate.

Radio Windy's Response:

By letter dated 16 January 1985 Radio Windy's Managing Director Mr Doug Gold responded that, having obtained the rules of the contest from Lion Breweries' agency, he was satisfied that it was not necessary to purchase alcohol in order to enter the contest. He said:

"There is very clear evidence that numerous people collect tear tabs and, when appropriate, bottle tops to enter these contests from friends and from locations where alcohol is consumed without actually purchasing the liquor themselves. Accordingly, an individual may enter the contest without having purchased liquor themselves".

Decision:

The Tribunal accepts that proof of purchase was not necessary for entry into the competition. A would-be contestant could collect tear tabs from anyone prepared to part with them. Nevertheless, the design of the competition was such that someone had to purchase liquor in order for anyone to obtain the tear tabs with the numbers printed on them and it was made clear that entry forms were to be obtained from liquor outlets. The question is, is this design of competition caught by Rule 1.11.5 of the Radio Advertisement Rules?

The rule states:

"1.11.5 No advertisement may include reference to any lottery or competition which requires the purchase of liquor to participate".

The rule refers to the "purchase of liquor". It is silent as to whether this is meant to cover the purchase of liquor generally, or is confined to prohibiting any requirement that the contestant personally purchase liquor. The choice is between construing the rules permissively or restrictively.

We think the restrictive approach is correct. The scheme of the rules generally is that alcohol may not be advertised at all, unless the advertisement fits squarely within one or more of an intricate and (as we have said before) somewhat ill-defined array of exceptions.

The complaint is therefore upheld.

The Tribunal accepts that Radio Windy may well have considered that the advertisement was not in breach of the rule. The exact point has not previously been decided. Mr Turner conceded that the management of Radio Windy may have thought that, because no reference was made to liquor or to Lion Breweries, the rule was not breached.

Co-opted Members:

The Tribunal co-opted Messrs Stephenson and Sellwood as persons whose qualifications or experience were likely to be of assistance in dealing with the complaint. They took part in the deliberations of the Tribunal but the decision is that of the permanent members.

Dated this 31st day of March 1987.

Signed for the Tribunal.
