Decision No. 9/87

COM No. 9/86

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

IN the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of a complaint by T. F. W. HARRIS.

WARRANT HOLDER—Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand (Television New Zealand).

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Member: Robert Boyd-Bell.

Co-opted Members: Brian W. Stephenson and Hiwi Tauroa.

Dated the 31st day of March 1987.

DECISION

THIS complaint arose from a report broadcast in the 6.30 p.m. Network News on Television One on Friday 30th May 1986, prepared by a TVNZ reporter. The reporter had been assigned to South Africa for a limited period and on a restricted visa to report on the tour of the NZ Cavalier rugby team to the Republic of South Africa.

The Report:

The report of 3 minutes and 50 seconds duration was a compilation in which the reporter attempted to set in context the experiences which the Cavalier rugby team and their tour supporters might have undergone during their time in South Africa and the impressions of that country which they were likely to bring home.

It was of the nature of a personal review of the present state of South African society, using a considerable amount of recent "file" footage.

The Complaint:

Professor Harris lodged a formal complaint with the BCNZ dated Wednesday, 4 June 1986 questioning both the nature and the motivation of the report.

Professor Harris complained that virtually all the visual material in the report been screened previously and the report itself amounted to commentary rather than news.

He said the material was selected to emphasise extremes; was not intended to be balanced; was deliberately designed to show whites in the most unfavourable light and specifically linked fighting in a rugby match with violence at a right-wing political meeting.

Professor Harris alleged that TVNZ had conducted a crusade against the Cavalier tour; had failed to prevent it and was conducting a vendetta against the team. He said TVNZ was anxious to discredit in advance any personal experiences which the soon-to-return Cavalier team might recount and that the reporter had been affected by being snubbed by the team.

Professor Harris specifically complained that the report breached s. 24 (1), Broadcasting Act in that it did not have regard to:

- “(d) the accurate and impartial gathering and presentation of news, according to the recognised standards of objective journalism.
- (g) the privacy of the individual.”

The Corporation Response:

The Board of the BCNZ considered Professor Harris' complaint at its meeting on 29 July and the Secretary of the Corporation advised its decision by letter dated 5 August.

He advised Professor Harris that the item had been specifically commissioned by TVNZ editorial executives following telephone calls from some viewers who had recently toured South Africa but seen nothing of the black riots shown almost nightly on the 6.30 news.

The reporter had been commissioned to set this experience in context with the Cavalier rugby tour. The BCNZ did not believe the report “smeared” the Cavaliers but pointed out that, like many tourists, they did not see trouble spots at first hand and that it was easy to miss them.

The Corporation regarded the report as objective, factual and neutral although the linking of violence on the rugby field with that at a political meeting was considered unfortunate.

The complaint was not upheld by the Corporation.

Reference to the Tribunal:

Professor Harris was not satisfied with the BCNZ response and referred his complaint to the Tribunal on 20 August.

He also made a formal request that TVNZ hold all tapes relating to its reporting of South Africa and the Cavaliers rugby tour since the original announcement, to ensure that the complaint could be considered in context.

Professor Harris expanded on the grounds for his original complaint, alleging that:

- (a) The editing of archival footage was subjective and biased, not self balancing and neutral as the Corporation claimed.
- (b) The association of violence on the rugby field with violence at a political meeting was much more serious than “unfortunate”.
- (c) The BCNZ should have launched a more extensive inquiry into TVNZ reporting of South Africa and the Cavalier rugby tour.
- (d) The news item indicated that “TVNZ adopted an editorial opinion hostile to all whites in South Africa and to the Cavaliers, and used television to influence NZ viewers accordingly.”
- (e) The response of the BCNZ revealed the primary reason for the item as being the complaints from recent visitors to South Africa who said they had seen nothing of the riots which TVNZ had been reporting so frequently, thus the item was “an exercise in justification”.

The Corporation submission:

In its submission to the Tribunal filed on 9 October the BCNZ said that there was no basis for Professor Harris' complaint that the report infringed the privacy of individual Cavalier rugby players.

As to his complaint that the item breached section 24 (1) (d) of the Broadcasting Act with regard to the accurate and impartial gathering and presentation of news according to recognised standards of objective journalism, the Corporation submitted:

- (a) The item was “an honest attempt to encapsulate fairly an aspect of the South African scene from a New Zealand perspective”.
- (b) The item was imperfect in linking violence on the rugby field with violence at a political meeting.
- (c) The use of archival or library film was a legitimate and acknowledged television news production device worldwide.
- (d) The complex nature of the story in question was acknowledged from the outset.
- (e) The rugby violence clip was used twice only because its initial use was as a trailer or tease in the opening of the news to indicate that a report relevant to the Cavalier tour was coming up.
- (f) The Corporation rejected any assertion that it attempted to link the Cavaliers with pro-apartheid extremist groups, or that TVNZ was engaged on a propaganda exercise.

The Corporation summarised its submission thus:

“It (the item) was triggered by reaction TVNZ and its reporter in South Africa had received from those who had been there in recent times. Furthermore, the reporter refers to being tackled on the very point, about what the viewer sees being variance with what sometimes appears on television. His was a sincere attempt to present the scene as best he could, bearing in mind that his visa permit limited his activities to covering rugby matches. In such circumstances coverage from other sources had to be interwoven into his “perspective piece”.”

Decision:

The Tribunal considers that TVNZ editorial executives were expecting a great deal of a reporter whose visa was limited to coverage of rugby and whose experience of South Africa was limited, when they commissioned him to put “the black riots shown almost nightly on the 6.30 news . . . in context with the touring Cavaliers, as the chances were that they too might see nothing of the trouble spots.”

The reporter himself may not have seen or experienced first hand many of the aspects of South African life portrayed in the item he presented and was heavily dependent on material recorded and edited by others.

Experienced foreign correspondents are frequently critical of “instant experts” who, on the basis of brief and limited personal knowledge, present “perspective pieces” to their audience. Fulbright Distinguished Fellow Ms Georgie Anne Geyer voiced such criticism during her recent visit to New Zealand.

It is difficult for individuals in any society to witness personally all the stresses and strains that society is subject to. Few New Zealanders would have personally witnessed the Queen Street riots, the Rainbow Warrior sinking, the Ruatoria arsons, the Forestry and Coal Corporation redundancies and be in a position to comment on them collectively and with authority. Still less so if they were visiting the country on a restricted visa.

To a considerable degree the reporter appears to have set up a “straw man” and then demolished him.

The Tribunal doubts the wisdom of such a commission considering the limitations under which the reporter was working.

Television Programme Rule 5.1 (a) notes that:

“Viewers should always be able to distinguish clearly and easily between factual reporting on the one hand, and comment, opinion and analysis on the other. This is particularly important where a change of approach, say from news to comment, occurs during the course of a programme.”

The Tribunal considers that this rule is more relevant to the report in question than rule 5.1 (b), which refers to the accurate, objective and impartial presentation of news.

Although Mr Ralston's report was given prominence in the 6.30 news on Friday 30 May 1986 it was much more a commentary and “perspective piece” than factual reporting.

The report was almost four minutes in duration, was placed as third item just three minutes into the programme and was more comment, opinion and analysis than fact. These factors all contributed to it appearing as an unusual feature of the 6.30 news, more in keeping with material viewers might expect to see in Eyewitness News or Foreign Correspondent.

The Tribunal does not consider that any substantial effort was made by TVNZ to distinguish between factual reporting and commentary, particularly in the context of viewer's normal expectations of the 6.30 news.

The distinctions between fact, comment and opinion can be as difficult to determine as those between news and current affairs, but viewers are entitled to clear signposts as to the source and authority of the information they are receiving. These entitlements are reinforced in the legislation and the television programme rules which TVNZ editorial executives are required to observe.

The Tribunal does not uphold the complaint that the programme constituted an invasion of privacy.

The Tribunal does not consider that Professor Harris' complaint can be upheld in full, particularly his allegations regarding the motivation, “crusade” and “vendetta” of TVNZ against the Cavalier tour.

The Tribunal does not consider the item in question to have been unwisely commissioned and flawed in both execution and presentation.

The Tribunal will require TVNZ news and current affairs to pay greater attention to the legislation and programme rules under which it operates.

The report could have been more adequately presented as a personal commentary on the difficulties which a television news organisation and reporter face, just as much as tourists, in attempting to reflect responsibly the reality of life in South Africa.

We note in passing that the use of a violent rugby incident in the opening "tease" of the news programme appeared singularly inappropriate. The accompanying text read:

"New questions about payment as the Cavaliers tour of South Africa nears its end."

The "tease" was not designed to refer to Mr Ralston's report at all, but to the previous item in the news during which TVNZ rugby commentator Keith Quinn was interviewed regarding the tenacity with which the Rugby Union was investigating claims that the Cavalier team members had received substantial payments for touring South Africa.

The Tribunal could identify nothing in that item which justified the use of that specific incident in the programme opening, noting clause 3 of Appendix A in the Television Programme Rules relating to the portrayal of violence:

"The representation of violence in news and information programmes should be strictly in accordance with the importance of the event and to the degree essential to the integrity and completeness of the item."

The complaint is upheld to the extent that the report was commentary not fact and the distinction was not made readily apparent to viewers in terms of Television Programme Rule 5.1 (a).

The Tribunal believes TVNZ News should consider very carefully the extent to which such "perspective pieces" should be included within the more "factual" style of the 6.30 news. To the extent that this is done, the distinction must be made readily apparent to viewers.

In Decision No. 6/87 the Tribunal has recently requested the Corporation to hold videotape records of all news and current affairs coverage of South Africa for a period of 6 months.

In Decision No. 7/87 the Tribunal has requested the Rules Committee to review the provisions of Television Programme Rule 8.2.

In the same decision the Tribunal has requested the Corporation to revise its procedures for monitoring coverage of controversial matters.

Those requests are reiterated in the context of this decision.

The complaint is upheld in part.

Co-Opted Members:

The Tribunal co-opted Messrs Brian W. Stephenson and Hiwi Tauroa as persons whose qualifications and experience were likely to be of assistance in dealing with this complaint. Decision No. 8/87
BRO 113/86

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

IN the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of an application by OTAGO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION (INC) for a short term broadcasting authorisation for Dunedin.

Chairman: B. H. Slane

Members: Ann E. Wilson and Robert Boyd-Bell

Dated the 31st day of March 1987.

REASONS FOR DECISION

The applicant applied for a short term broadcasting authorisation to establish an FM station for a series of broadcasts commencing 15 February 1987 and continuing until 15 November 1987 with normal hours from midnight to 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. to midnight.

In addition, on Saturdays and Sundays the station would broadcast continuously.

The purpose of the station (called "Radio One") was to cater for Otago University students.

The applicant was utilising a provision in the Act which caters particularly well for university student stations providing under the short term authorisation provisions of the Act permission to operate a low powered station directed to a specific audience, namely the students at the university. The application is made for the university year and a new application has to be made annually.

Previously broadcasts have taken place from a transmission point on the top of the Hocken Building, part of the university campus.

In the present application an alternative site 630 metres higher on Mount Cargill was applied for as well as the Hocken Building site. The applicant said:

"The site which is most preferred is Mount Cargill."

The applicant said two sites were applied for so that Radio One could commence broadcasting regardless of problems which may arise with the establishment of their facilities at Mount Cargill. Once Radio One's antenna system, remote control and telemetry system, and studio to transmitter link were operational, Radio One's transmitter would be installed at Mount Cargill and the Hocken Building site would be rendered superfluous.

Mount Cargill is the site of the Television New Zealand transmitters for Television One and Television Two. The resulting coverage from transmissions will be to cover all of central Dunedin and the signal would extend to surrounding areas.

The applicant proposed an increase in transmitter power from that previously used and a change of site to give extensive cover. The applicant said it would enable it to comply with what it thought was a Post Office directive that all FM transmitters should be co-sited. We discuss that later.

The applicant said it would have a specific interest in Dunedin North, North East Valley, Leath Valley, City Rise and Maori Hill where the great proportion of out of town students resided. It also wished to broadcast to local students who reside in South Dunedin, Roslyn, and the beach area. It would also like to be able to broadcast to students residing in the Helensburgh Heights Hostel at Wakari and sought to provide a service to other people in the Dunedin area who would like to listen to the station.

In support of the higher power, the applicant also quotes NZPO specifications RB20 as to the signal standards required for FM stereo broadcast into urban areas.

Reasons for Decision:

The application in all other respects was approved as applied for but the transmission power and site were approved as for the previous year. The applicant has asked for reasons for that decision. These written reasons do not therefore include all the other considerations which led to the grant.

The assumption that student stations were encouraged to have full power transmitters on major transmission sites to cover metropolitan areas appears to be based on a misconception of their role and the nature of the application being made.

This is supported by the applicant's statements in support, such as the desirability of raising the signal strength and the definition of the coverage area.

It is also demonstrated by the applicant's views:

"Radio One recognises that initially short term broadcasting authorisations for FM stations will be approved on the basis of low transmitter power from low level sites providing a very limited coverage area and intended to serve a community purpose. We believe that Radio One should be granted permission to broadcast from the Mount Cargill site because:

1. The 'initial' period for STBA's has passed. Radio One has held STBA's for FM operation since February 1984.
2. Using a 300 watt base power is still a relatively low power when compared to the size of transmitters a commercial operation would be using.
3. A high level site such as Mount Cargill is justified in Radio One's circumstances because of the very hilly terrain upon which most of Dunedin is sited. The low level site Radio One is presently utilising is sited on top of a ten-storey high building which in turn is sited at the bottom of a valley. From this position we are unable to clear the crest of the hills to the west nor penetrate very far into the valleys radiating from the gardens area.

Perhaps the city most comparable to Dunedin for its hills is Wellington. Radio Active transmits from Tinakori Hill, a Post Office transmission site, but still has many dead or grey areas. Mount Cargill is really the only available site similar to Tinakori Hill. . . .

4. The antenna system Radio One anticipates using on Mount Cargill is directional. The major lobe produced by this antenna system is aimed at Dunedin City. We are not attempting to broadcast with an omni-directional antenna. Radio One's coverage aims are limited to Dunedin."

The applicant also reiterated its purpose is not to generate profits. The applicant anticipated that changes in the legislation may result in a more permanent environment for student radio stations.

Student radio stations have been encouraged by the Tribunal since it obtained legislation to enable consecutive 28 day periods of broadcasts for up to one year to be granted without the need to apply for a permanent warrant. The Tribunal has in previous decisions set out the advantages of this approach.

The stations do not have to compete on a full basis with existing commercial and non-commercial transmitters intended to cover metropolitan areas and do not carry the obligations that warrant holders have to face of providing continuous service, high management standards and a continuity of approach.

In return they have to accept that the economic arguments that would otherwise be raised in opposition to their obtaining permanent warrants do not carry the same weight with the Tribunal when raised against their applications for short-term broadcasting authorisations. This applies so long as the station is genuinely aiming at the student audience, is not providing a comparable signal strength and therefore is not in a fully competitive position vis-a-vis warranted stations, and the programmes are genuinely complementary. While the Tribunal accepts there will be members of the audience who are not students, the tone and extent of the broadcasts must be such as clearly to identify with the student audience and the programmes genuinely complementary.

In a previous decision (No. 3/81) we said:

"It also needs to be said that the Tribunal does not regard such stations as general broadcasting stations providing a service to a young audience. Every application has to be treated on its merits and the student association applications are invariably put forward to provide a service to students. Any wider purpose invites the examination of the application on a commercial basis akin to a warrant application. It would have to be decided the extent to which the station should be in competition with those holding existing warrants which carry continuous transmission responsibilities and obligations to provide a number of other services to the community."

The applicant misunderstands the position in thinking that the Tribunal requires, and technical considerations require, major co-siting and an increase in power.

The Tribunal has regard to Government policy arising from the recommendations of the Tribunal in its 1981 report on FM broadcasting stated in the ministerial notice dated 28 October 1981:

"(5) (h) Subject to paragraph (1) of this clause, FM transmitters should be co-sited, where practicable, with television transmitters;

(l) Low-powered transmitters need not be co-sited with television transmitters;

(m) The location of transmitters not co-sited shall be chosen with regard to achieving compatibility with other services and efficient use of FM broadcasting frequencies."

(The use of the frequency at low power in a low site is an efficient use of frequencies as the further use can be permitted nearer than would be the case if the transmission were from a high site).

The Tribunal has regard for this policy but is not, of course, bound by it.

There is no policy that the low powered low sited station for community purposes is an initial stage.

While the increase in power to 750 watts erp at this stage is not quite as great as might be required for a commercial station, in the particular circumstances we cannot be sure that we will not be faced with a request for an increase in order to provide a better signal strength, nor that 100 watts erp would be quite inadequate.

The Tribunal has also to be consistent in its approach to student stations and is conscious of the attempts that are sometimes made by individual student stations to push the barriers out a little further. The situation cited in the case of the Victoria University of Wellington student station is somewhat different from Otago. The Victoria University is itself on a high site in the city and therefore the broadcast commenced from a high point. In the case of both Auckland and Wellington the somewhat higher sites recently approved for 100 watts erp have not provided a full coverage of the metropolitan area and yet that is what is in effect sought by the Otago University Students' Association.

The Tribunal starts from the point that such stations, except for very brief short-term broadcasting authorisations, should not be high powered or from a high site. In certain circumstances in order to achieve better immediate coverage some changes of site from the University itself have been permitted. Generally however the applicants have to accept either retaining the character of a student station based round the campus and broadcasting to that area, or to consider applying for a warrant and competing with others who might also seek to establish a warranted station and may be able to provide a continuous or almost continuous service.

In December 1986 the Tribunal notified the applicant that it was concerned about the proposal to broadcast from Mount Cargill because the proposal was not in accordance with the policy previously established by the Tribunal and which applied to other student broadcasts.

The Tribunal would be prepared to consider a modest erp from Mount Cargill or, if the Post Office considered it possible, a slightly higher power from the site previously used on the Hocken building.

In response on 8 January 1987 the applicant said that the desire to cover the student audience was only one reason for the increase in signal coverage. The applicant cited a desire to conform with the Post Office requirements in RB20.

It claimed to be following other student radio stations in raising the level of its transmitter.

The applicant said it was vital to move its transmitter to Mount Cargill and was happy to broadcast there with only 100 watts base power. (That would prove to be 250 watts erp, not 100 watts erp as for the Hocken site.) "However due to Dunedin's difficult terrain, and our stated desire to try to better fulfil the requirements FM stations are given, we feel it would be appropriate to be granted permission to broadcast from Mount Cargill with 300 watts base power."

The references to base power are misleading. The Tribunal's interest is in the maximum effective radiated power (erp) of the signal and the comparison that needs to be made is with the Hocken building's present 100 watts erp, with the preferred maximum erp of 750 watts from Mount Cargill and a maximum erp of 250 watts which is the lowest that would be acceptable to the applicant. These details were supplied on 27 January when further coverage information was sought by the Tribunal.

It was therefore clear that 100 watts maximum erp from Mount Cargill was not a satisfactory alternative as far as the applicant was concerned.

In all the circumstances the Tribunal considered it appropriate to continue with the previous power and site approval for 1987.

That level of maximum effective radiated power is generally approved for student stations. The Tribunal considers that the coverage sought is a significant element of the difference between a short-term authorisation for a continuous broadcast over a lengthy period each year and a fully warranted station.

The issues canvassed in this decision have been discussed with student radio administrators in the past, and references have been made to them in both correspondence and decisions of the Tribunal. We recognise that student management of stations has a fairly rapid turnover and so we have gone to some lengths to explain on this occasion, for reference of future broadcasters, the restrictions they should expect for a somewhat favoured position in the use of the spectrum.

Finally, it is appropriate to record, in case there is any such misunderstanding in anyone's mind, that the granting of a short-term authorisation, even for extended periods, does not form the basis for an application for a warrant. The Tribunal has made it clear time and again that short-term broadcasting authorisations do not in themselves provide a territorial claim or a priority over other applicants.

The Tribunal will look to the programming, and the power and coverage ambitions of the station to identify whether the station is intended to comply with the general needs of a student station, or whether there is an attempt to obtain the benefit of a warrant without having to apply for one.

Generally the fact that an applicant is not able to cover the whole of the metropolitan area is not considered an appropriate reason for moving to both high power and a high site.

Decision No. 12/87

BRO 129/86

Before the Broadcasting Tribunal

IN the matter of the Broadcasting Act 1976, and in the matter of an application by ONSHORE SERVICES NZ LIMITED, for a television short-term broadcasting authorisation for Auckland:

Chairman: B. H. Slane.

Members: Ann E. Wilson and Robert Boyd-Bell.

DECISION

Dated the 31st day of March 1987

THE applicant has sought a short-term authorisation for a period of 6 months to operate a 24-hour television station for Auckland in the second half of 1987.

The applicant is also an applicant for a television broadcasting warrant for Auckland.

The Tribunal has given preliminary consideration to this matter because it felt it important to decide as a matter of principle whether or not the application should be dealt with in the normal way.

This application involves the setting up of a television station for continuous broadcasting over a lengthy period and is more in the nature of a full warrant current for a 6 month period.

The Tribunal has completed hearing the evidence and submissions of all applicants in respect of the warrants for private regional television stations in New Zealand and is at present considering its decisions on those applications.

It is not appropriate for the Tribunal to consider a further application for a means of broadcasting television from an organisation which is already an applicant for a television broadcasting warrant. That first application is still under consideration by the Tribunal, together with all the other applications filed at the same time. While determination of all those applications is still pending, the Tribunal considers it cannot consider an alternative application filed by one of the parties.

The Tribunal is now being asked to consider a temporary station proposal which would involve a full-time commercial service. This would impact on existing television and radio stations and require a hearing to assess that impact. It would not be fair to those awaiting decisions on warrant applications to cause delay so such a proceeding could be undertaken.

It is also part of the general policy of the Government that private regional television be developed without delay.

There appears to be no reason for deferring the application until after a decision on the warrant applications. If this applicant were successful a full-time warrant would be available to it.

If this applicant were not successful, it would not be reasonable to grant a short-term authorisation to an unsuccessful warrant applicant without another full hearing, since it is unlikely a successful warrant application would want to tolerate an unsuccessful applicant providing a continuous service. Any grant then would require the Minister's permission.

If there were no successful warrant applicant, the appropriate procedure would not be to deal with one particular proposal in isolation from alternative competing applications.

In all the circumstances the Tribunal considers it should decline the application rather than adjourn it.

Accordingly the application is declined.

Signed for the Tribunal.
