The Proposal

The Proposal for a taiapure was made by Rohe Tautoko Takiari, J.P. of Ngati Te Waho Waikato Maniapoto. It was endorsed and supported by Tainui Maori Trust Board, Maniapoto Maori Trust Board and Ngati Raukawa Trust Board, which were representative of the people in the area of the taiapure.

The Proposal is a comprehensive document comprising 80 pages and sets out a large amount of background detail as well as objectives and principles. Much of the information sets the scene for the application and has passed without comment. I do not intend to try to summarise the information in the Proposal, particularly as the Ministry will hold the original. I will under this heading simply refer to the main thrust of the Proposal in respect of a taiapure and any other provisions which have drawn comment.

I am told that the original Proposal was for a much larger area based on the seaward boundary of the rohe potae and that the present area is a compromise following discussion between the applicants and the Ministry. The Proposal does not contain a written geographical description of the area, the original description having been deleted and replaced by a map headed 'Revised Kawhia/Aotea Taiapure Boundaries', a copy of which is reproduced at page 19. I would describe the area, in layman's terms, as bounded by a line starting at Taranaki Point north of the Aotea Harbour and proceeding four nautical miles in a westerly direction, then proceeding south to join a line two nautical miles west from the shoreline at Albatross Point and continuing south at that distance from the shoreline until Tirua Point which forms the south boundary, and including the Aotea and Kawhia Harbours, also an area of one nautical mile surrounding Gannett or Karewa Island.

The defined limits of the area according to the Gazette notice which appeared in the New Zealand Gazette on 20 June 1996 were:

Area 1: The area enclosed by a line commencing at the mean high water mark at Tirua Point on the west coast of the north island (at 38° 23.45'S; 174° 38.00'E); then proceeding directly through a north westerly direction to a point 38° 23.00'S; 174° 34.40'E; thence proceeding in a northerly direction along a line every point of which is 2 nautical miles seawards of the mean high water mark along the coast to a point 38° 06.75'S; 174° 38.25'E; then proceeding directly through a easterly direction to the mean high water mark at Albatross Point on the west coast of the North Island (at 38° 06.75'S; 174° 40.80'E) and then to the point of commencement at Tirua Point (at 38° 23.45'S 174° 38.00'E).

Area 2: The area enclosed by a line commencing at the mean high water mark at Albatross Point on the west coast of the North Island (at 38° 06.75'S 174° 40.80'E); thence proceeding directly through a westerly direction to a point 38° 06.75'S; 174° 38.25'E; thence in a northerly direction along a line to a point 37° 58.40'S; 174° 41.70'E; thence proceeding in an easterly direction to the mean high water mark at Taranaki Point on the west coast of the North Island (at 37° 58,40'S 174° 46.75'E) thence along the mean high water mark of the coast to include all internal waters of Aotea Harbour and Kawhia Harbour to the point of commencement at Albatross Point 38° 06.75'S 174° 40.80'E.

Area 3: The area within a one nautical mile radius centred on Gannet Island 37° 58.40'S; 174° 34.00'E.

Later in discussing the area of taiapure I refer to each of the above areas as Areas 1, 2 or 3 as described above.

While the Proposal was filed by Rohe Takiari, it was widely discussed within the rural district of which Kawhia and Aotea form part and an investigatory committee drawn from representatives of the local community including Maori interests was established to assist in the promulgation and prosecution of the Proposal. I must say that, unlike some other taiapure Proposals which have been dealt with, this Proposal is widely supported by the local community, as may be gauged from my subsequent analysis of the submissions and objections received.

The Tribunal was told that it was intended that the investigatory committee, namely the Kawhia Aotea Fisheries Committee would become the Committee of Management for this taiapure.

The Proposal is expressed to be without prejudice to pending Tainui claims, no doubt referring to claims that have been lodged in respect of the Kawhia, Aotea and other west coast harbours. The Tainui Maori Trust Board's support for the Proposal was couched in similar terms. The Tribunal finds it hard to envisage how the granting of a taiapure under the Fisheries Act 1996 could prejudice a claim for ownership, possession or title to the harbours under some other form of legislation or grounds but in any event notes the expression 'without prejudice' in the Proposal and by the Trust Board so that it is recorded in this report.

Submissions and Objections

As I have said the taiapure Proposal was publicly notified on 20 June 1996. Seventy submissions or objections were received, 47 in support and 23 by way of objection.

Most of the support was from individuals residing in the Te Kuiti, Otorohanga, Kawhia, Te Awamutu and Hamilton areas but included support from the following bodies or organisations—

Waikato Conservation Board
 Tainui Trust Board
 Waikato Salt Water Fishing Club
 Department of Conservation
 Kawhia Aotea Fisheries Committee
 Waitomo Scuba Club
 Te Waitere Boat Club
 Marokopa Community
 Te Runanga O Ngati Hikairo
 Moana Rahui O Aotea Limited
 Kawhia Boating and Angling Club Inc
 Kawhia Community Board
 Aruka and Te Koraha Marae
 Marokopa Kiritere Recreational Fishermen
 Waikato Branch Royal Forest and Bird Protection Society
 Waikato District Council
 Rakaunui Marae

Objections were in the main from the fishing industry or those connected with it and I list the major objections—

Simunovich Fisheries Limited
 Moana Pacific Fisheries Limited
 New Zealand Fishing Industry Board
 New Zealand Federation of Commercial Fisherman Inc.
 Sanford Limited
 Kawhia Fisheries Limited
 Hartstone (Raglan) Limited
 Hartstone Seafoods
 Central Eel Enhancement Co Limited

Two objections were received from Maori sources, from Eva Rickard and James Rickard. Eva Rickard maintained that the nature of the legislation still left the effective control of the taiapure with the Ministry of Fisheries in that the appointment of the committee of management and the implementation of regulations was ultimately directed through that source. This was implementation of law through kawanatanga and not proper recognition of tino rangatiratanga.

James Rickard referred to historical links between the Whaingaroa, Aotea and Kawhia Harbours and complained that application tended to sever these links. Mr Rickard also objected to recreational fishermen supporting the application so as to further their own interests. He claimed that there was no link between traditional fishing and recreational use and that one use should not be penalised to advantage others. In his view if there were to be prohibitions on fishing that should apply to all users.

Legal Issues

Mr Hollings appeared for the New Zealand Fishing Industry Board as well as the New Zealand Commercial Fishermen's Association Inc. As part of his submissions he raised a number of legal issues all of which had been presented to the Manukau Taiapure Tribunal. These concerned mainly the question as to whether the area of taiapure constituted 'estuarine or littoral coastal waters' and as to whether they were areas of 'special significance'. These terms are used in sections 174 and 175 of the Fisheries Act 1996 in defining the areas of New Zealand fisheries waters in respect of which a taiapure-local fishery may be established. Similar submissions were made by a number of other objectors.

There is nothing new in these submissions to change my view on the meaning of these terms as were expressed in my report on the Manukau Taiapure which was sent to the Minister of Fisheries on the 18th day of May 1998. In that report I concluded that 'littoral coastal waters' meant coastal waters of or pertaining to the shore of the sea or adjacent to the shore. The littoral zone would comprise mostly shallow waters where the effect of tidal phenomena and currents is apparent. I was loathe to express a distance from the shore that such zone might extend as this could well depend on such physical characteristics as reefs, headlands and islands.

I can see nothing in the present application which would lead me to rule that the proposed taiapure, namely, the two harbours, the area around Gannet Island and areas of coastal waters extending two to four nautical miles from the shore, extends outside the area of littoral coastal waters.

The other words referred to by Mr Hollings were 'special significance' as they appear in section 174. The area of a taiapure is thereby limited to areas of littoral coastal waters that have customarily been 'of special significance to any iwi or hapu'.

There is no doubt that fishing played a major part in the lives of early Maori and the seas were an important factor in the provision of sustenance. The seas that formed part of the rohe (territory) of a hapu would normally be of significance to that hapu. The use of the word 'special' within the legislation imports that the area had something more to recommend it than being simply part of the traditional fishery of an iwi or hapu. It needed to be an area of the fishery which had particular attributes or importance to make it special or precious to hapu or iwi. I address this question later in this report.

Consideration of the Objections

As I have already noted objections in the main came from the fishing industry or persons connected with it. There were, however, two objections from Maori sources, from Eve Tuaiwa Rickard and from James Rickard. Mrs Rickard's objection was in essence against the nature of the legislation rather than against the Proposal itself. She felt that the legislation did not really acknowledge tino rangatiratanga and that the objectives could be given effect by imposing rahui on traditional fishing areas.

Mr Rickard's objections to some extent echoed Mrs Rickard's. Both these objections were outweighed by the considerable amount of local support for the Proposal.

Aside from legal issues which I have already commented on and the size of the taiapure which I will address later, members of the fishing industry commented particularly on the impact a taiapure might have on their businesses. This particularly applied to Hartstone Seafoods Limited which operated from Raglan. In evidence Mr Drew Hartstone said:

"Our boats typically go out for the day and come back in the evening. So we never go very far from port. That area that the taiapure is discussing is key to us. It's within that day's fishing distance for our boats and in particular in the winter when there are strong south-westerly swells coming through, the area that's sheltered by Albatross Point is very important for us in terms of safety. It's dangerous enough to be at sea fishing without any sort of protection while you're fishing but certainly when you go to pick up equipment, pick up nets from the sea floor, you want to be in a sheltered place and Albatross Point provides that. Albatross Point's within the area of the taiapure and if all the, it seems the intent embodied in the taiapure application are imposed, that would prevent our fishing boats from picking up their equipment in that area. And I personally believe that would put some fishermen and their lives at risk."

Mr Roydon Hartstone from the same firm estimated that 20 percent of the firm's total catch was taken within the taiapure area. Both witnesses referred to the poor weather on the west coast which kept boats in port for considerable periods especially during the winter months. They emphasised that the area down to Albatross Point was particularly important to their business and the impact of a taiapure which could close the area to fishing could be quite devastating.

For Moana Pacific Fisheries Limited from Auckland Mr Mike Stevens spoke of the considerable investment that had been put into its business for the purpose of fishing some of the very areas that are now sought to be included in the taiapure. He contended that if this area was included in taiapure it would have a marked effect on their fishing and would also have an effect on other iwi in that fishermen would have to concentrate on other areas.

Adam Langley from Sandford Limited of Auckland also objected on two substantive grounds. The first was for legal reasons which echoed those to which I have already referred and the second was from the implications that a taiapure could have on his firm's future operation on the west coast. Again Mr Langley spoke of the investment in and the development of the fishery. He said that his firm owned approximately ten inshore vessels that operated along the west coast, typically based in Onehunga but extending the main fishing operations from 90 Mile Beach all the way down to the Taranaki; that the distribution of fish is variable from year to year and consequently his firm needed the flexibility to harvest and catch the fish throughout the area along the west coast; that the areas proposed in the taiapure particularly north of Albatross Point were regarded as a substantially important trawling ground both for his and other trawler operators including Hartstones and Simunovich and any further closure of that area would restrict their operations. He added that the area north of Albatross Point is of special significance to the trawl fleet in that it provides a shelter during south-westerly conditions and that at those times there were no other areas on the west coast that provide a sheltered opportunity to carry out and conduct fishing, particularly for the smaller vessels of the fleet.

A slightly different objection was presented by Mike Holmes of Central Eel Enhancement Company. His firm fished for eels and he indicated that there were at least ten eel fishers operating in the proposed area harvesting a significant annual catch. He therefore supported the objections which had been put forward by other fishing industries interests. He pointed to a difficulty with the definition as to where the boundary of the taiapure is. Most of the eel fishing is from the tidal region into the upper waters of rivers. In his view the taiapure application was vague as to just where the boundary is. He acknowledged that once he was out into the main harbour very little commercial eel fishing took place.

The weight of evidence presented to the Tribunal by the commercial fishing operators is that the area running along the coast within the proposed limits of this taiapure is very important to their businesses. In particular Albatross Point provides a shelter from south-westerly swells in bad weather and the area north of Albatross Point is an important area, especially in the case of smaller boats, in such conditions. The taiapure proposes that there would be further limitations on fishing to protect the fish within the taiapure and I have no doubt that any such prohibition would impact on the commercial fishermen. This is a matter that I must take into account in reaching a recommendation.

Consideration of Section 176 (2):

Section 176 (2) provides—"The Minister shall not recommend the making of an order under section 175 of this Act unless the Minister is satisfied both—

- (a) That the order will further the object set out in section 174 of this Act; and
- (b) That the making of the order is appropriate having regard to—
 - (i) The size of the area of New Zealand fisheries waters that would be declared by the order to be a taiapure-local fishery; and
 - (ii) The impact of the order on the general welfare of the community in the vicinity of the area that would be declared by the order to be a taiapure-local fishery; and
 - (iii) The impact of the order on those persons having a special interest in the area that would be declared by the order to be a taiapure-local fishery; and
 - (iv) The impact of the order on fisheries management."

The above provisions itemise the matters which the Tribunal is bound to take into account in making a recommendation to the Minister. Section 174 provides as the object of a taiapure better provision for the recognition of rangatiratanga and of the right secured in relation to fisheries by Article II of the Treaty of Waitangi. Insofar as the Proposal is supported by local hapu, covers areas of their traditional fisheries waters and provides a means of control to the hapu, although not full rights of tino rangatiratanga, the Tribunal accepts that an order would further the object set out in section 174 of the Act.

Turning to the matters that are specified in section 176 (2) (b) the first of these is the size of the area of New Zealand fisheries waters to be included in the taiapure. Mr Greenwood, who assisted the applicant in the presentation of his case to this Tribunal, submitted that when measured against the total area of New Zealand fisheries waters the area of the taiapure was small. He calculated that the area of taiapure measured against the waters in New Zealand's exclusive economic zone of 4,116,670 km² on a percentage basis was 0.0042 percent, while measured against the snapper 8 area of 381,070 km² within which the taiapure was situated the percentage was only .045 percent.

Mr Royden Hartstone countered that such type of comparison was unreasonable in that different species were caught in different areas and that, by way of example, snapper were normally caught within the 12 mile limit. It was therefore unfair to compare the area of the taiapure with the total area of New Zealand Fisheries waters extending to the 200 mile limit. He contended that the area of the taiapure extending along the coastline from two to four nautical miles out to sea occupied an important part of the snapper fishery and that the area of the taiapure should be assessed in this light. In answer to a question from the Tribunal, after first consulting with his office, he estimated that 20 percent of his firm's snapper catch came from the taiapure area. In reply Mr Greenwood countered that if the snapper 8 area was measured only to the 12 mile limit the percentage area of the taiapure would still be only 1.58 percent.

I do not see that comparing the size of a taiapure against the total area of New Zealand fisheries waters or even against the area of a specific fishing zone such as snapper 8 provides a reasonable measure of size. In these terms it could be argued that a substantial area of taiapure, even the whole of an iwi's traditional fishery, could still be regarded as small. I believe that the size of a taiapure should be measured by its physical size, the impact it may have on other users and use to which it is put by the public at large, interest groups and the fishing industry.

The present Proposal covers two sizeable harbours, and extends, in a straight line by my measurement approximately 60 kilometres along the west coast from Taranaki Point to Tirua Point. Measured against the New Zealand coastline and the coastal rohe of Ngati Hikairo and associated tribes I regard the area of the taiapure as large. It is a substantial area of the traditional fisheries waters held and used by those tribes. While the adjoining lands are not subject of heavy urban population the evidence before the Tribunal showed that there is considerable public use of the seas for recreational and fishing use and that the area is an important part of the commercial fishery.

The impact of an order on the general welfare of the community in the vicinity of the area of taiapure is another factor to be assessed. There has been ample evidence that an order of taiapure would be widely accepted or even welcomed by the local community as a means towards improving fisheries in the area of the taiapure. Such is the dissatisfaction with the general state of the local fishery that any initiative to improve the fishery would be acceptable. There is no apprehension over the establishment of the taiapure and no evidence that the general welfare of the community would be adversely affected.

The third provision is the impact upon persons having a special interest in the area. Those most likely to be affected will be the commercial fishermen and I have already considered their objections and noted that the taiapure will impact on them.

The final factor is the impact of the order on fisheries management. The area proposed is only a small area out of the area of New Zealand fisheries waters and this has been accepted both by the applicant and the Ministry of Fisheries. There may be some difficulty in trying to reconcile the different objectives that a taiapure has and the different forms of control and regulation that may be required over the area of taiapure as opposed to adjacent areas of New Zealand fisheries waters. Mr Drey for the Ministry of Fisheries in his report to the Minister on the Proposal saw difficulties in policing the areas of taiapure outside the harbours and additional costs arising therefrom. With all due respect to Mr Drey's opinion, if the Ministry is already policing the existing one nautical mile limit and the harbour bubbles then I fail to see how a slight adjustment to these limits over a reasonably well defined area of coastline would bring much of an increase in the cost of policing the taiapure boundaries. On the establishment of any taiapure some impact on fisheries management is to be expected but in this case the Tribunal does not see that the impact would be great.

Scarcity of Fish

During the course of the hearing and in the Proposal, submissions and objections there has been much emphasis on the scarcity of fish stocks within the Kawhia and Aotea Harbours and the outer areas of the Taiapure. The Tribunal has had before it an abundance of evidence as to the rapid decline in fish stocks over the last 30 to 40 years. Surveys of fishing catches conducted in the west coast harbours since 1990 show that Kawhia Harbour has the lowest catch rate of all the harbours.

Visual observation reveals that both Kawhia and Aotea Harbours are relatively shallow and most of the water therein empties into the open sea at low tide and it is said that the fish also go out of the harbour. The applicants claim that the concentration of commercial fishing outside the harbours means that these fish and other fish which might enter the harbours are caught and thus affect the fishing in the harbours. Members of the fishing industry dispute these claims pointing to land clearing around the edges of the harbour and farming activities, including the application of fertiliser and pesticides, as polluting the harbours and being a cause of the paucity of fish in the harbours. They also claim that fish stocks are generally increasing.

While the question of availability of fish is not a prime factor in an application for taiapure, the principal object being to provide rangatiratanga over an area of fishery which has special significance to hapu or iwi, insofar as the scarcity of fish has been the catalyst which has brought about the filing of the Proposal and its general acceptance by the local community I make some brief comment on this issue.

There has been presented to the Tribunal reports on the availability of fish stocks under the present system operated by the Ministry of Fisheries and I do not propose to review those reports or discuss them in detail. Evidence presented to the Tribunal suggests that fish stocks in the west coast fishery are gradually increasing although the biomass for snapper which will sustain the maximum sustainable yield has yet to be reached. It must be said that the reports that I have read are based on modules and certain assumptions but subject to that qualification the weight of evidence is that fish stocks are slowly increasing.

In his report to the Minister on the Proposal Mr Drey acknowledged the localised depletion of popular species of fish in the Kawhia-Aotea Harbours and then said—

“The reasons for a localised depletion are also difficult to determine. Localised overfishing is one possible explanation and temporary or longer term changes in environmental conditions can also be a factor. One area of possible concern is the changes which have occurred to the bed of Kawhia Harbour, with the consequent loss of shellfish resources in this area. The extent to which the bottom dwelling or benthic community in the harbour currently provides suitable or attractive habitat for snapper and other finfish species is largely unknown. Whatever environmental conditions may apply at present, it will be necessary to adapt fishery management in the area to fit within that context. In many respects, fisheries management is primarily adaptive and changes constantly according to differing environmental conditions. A major problem in this instance, however, is determining what management response is appropriate, given a set of conditions which is not fully understood.”

It is not possible for this Tribunal to determine whether the decline in fish stocks in the harbours has been brought about by over-fishing or through environmental reasons and it is possible that both have a part to play. Certainly it has been acknowledged that there has been over-fishing on the west coast at least up to 1986 when the present regime was put in place by what is now the Ministry of Fisheries.

During his submission on behalf of the New Zealand Fishing Industry Board, Mr Hollings made the point that the quota management system is recognised internationally as an innovative and successful approach to fisheries management and is aimed at ensuring long term sustainability of the resource. He went on to say—

“The general public seems unaware of the substantial change in the management of the commercial fishery that started in '86 when the quota management system was introduced. Commercial fishing is now highly controlled to ensure sustainable management of the resource. A comprehensive fishery research programme is in place and commercial catch levels are reviewed annually. Fish species subject to the QMS are managed on a stock by area basis. For most species which are caught commercially in the Taiapure area sought, the stock boundaries extend over a much larger area. Fish movement throughout this area mean there is regular movement and mixing of fish inside and outside of the proposed Taiapure area. Accordingly, the total allowable commercial catches for each species are set for the entire fish stock over its range which includes open areas of the coast.”

While the quota management system aims at managing the resource at a sustainable rate it is a system of general application rather than one which can be aimed at protecting the resource in specific areas. This application illustrates how the system can have its failings when measured against the requirements of traditional and recreational fishermen in certain areas. Subject to zoning and to compliance with any regulatory controls, holders of quota can catch their entitlement where they like. If commercial fishermen concentrate their fishing in a certain area then this is going to impact on the availability of fish in that area for local fishermen.

It appears that by virtue of circumstances this is what happens in the area of this taiapure. The importance of the coastal area has been emphasised by or on behalf of four major fishing firms. The prevalence of south westerly swells means that Albatross Point offers the only protection to trawlers over a vast area of coastline and that for safety reasons the trawl fleet prefers to pick up its nets in the area north of Albatross Point in adverse conditions. That area is where both the Kawhia and Aotea Harbours are situated. According to Roydon Hartstone fifty per cent of Hartstone Limited's fleet of 10 trawlers which operate out of Raglan would turn south and fish between Raglan and Tirua Point. Twenty per cent of its total snapper catch would be caught in the coastal area of the taiapure, that is, if one allows for the one nautical mile exclusion zone and the two nautical mile harbour bubbles, in a passage three nautical miles wide for the 15 kilometre stretch between Taranaki Point and Albatross Point, and in a passage one kilometre wide over the 40 kilometre distance between Albatross Point and Tirua Point.

The evidence suggests that there is a pattern of commercial fishing dictated largely by the weather, whereby a large number of west coast trawlers fish the area of the taiapure and concentrate in the protected waters north of Albatross Point to lift their nets. The concentration of commercial fishing in this area impacts on customary and recreational users. Notwithstanding that in general terms the quota management system may be seen to be improving fish-stocks, in the area of this taiapure no tangible improvement has been noted.

I cannot conclude that the concentration of fishing in the area outside the harbours brought about by the circumstances I have explained is the sole cause of the depletion of fish species within the harbours and along the coastal areas of the taiapure. It does however appear logical to conclude that it is one of the reasons and one that will have to be addressed if fish stocks in the taiapure are to be improved.

Assessment of Taiapure

I have found that the area of taiapure is large and that it extends into an important area of the commercial fishery. I have also found that the establishment of a taiapure, which will no doubt bring more regulation and control within its area, will impact on the interests of commercial fishermen. These are matters that I have to take into account in making recommendations to the Minister.

The other matter which I have to determine is whether the area of taiapure constitutes an area of special significance in accordance with section 174 of the Fisheries Act 1996.

The Proposal recited the fact of occupation of the coastal areas bordering the taiapure and evidence was presented of such occupation by Ngati Hikairo and other tribes. Mr Greenwood in his submission in support of the Proposal said that the number of Marae and hapu who traditionally fished the area or who had access to the fishing by agreement or treaty were in the order of 70.

Mr Drey in his Report to the Minister of Fisheries on the Taiapure Proposal commented on the customary significance of the area as follows:

“Customary Significance

In preparing the Proposal, the applicants researched the “Rohe Potae” land claim. The history of this claim, which is documented in the Maori Land Court and the Department of Survey and Land Information, is of particular importance to local iwi. The claim includes a significant area of coastal water and this has been used, in part, to frame the proposed boundary of the taiapure.

The taiapure application carefully researches Tainui association with the area back to the great canoe voyages and lists some 37 Urupa and Wahi Tapu located adjacent to the boundaries of the proposed taiapure. The customary use of the area, including some 76 named, site specific fisheries, is provided in great detail.

MAF Fisheries is not in a position to judge the extent to which this area is of customary significance to the applicants, but from the information provided in the application it would appear that this criterion has been satisfied."

I have perused the Proposal and evidence very closely and have been unable to find reference to the 70 Marae and hapu referred to by Mr Greenwood. Likewise I have been unable to find anything like the 76 named, site specific fisheries referred to by Mr Drey in his report.

From my own specialised knowledge I am aware of the scale of occupation of Waikato-Maniapoto hapu along the coastal region adjacent to the taiapure. Evidence of that occupation is illustrated by the list of 37 urupa and wahi tapu. I have no doubt that the area of taiapure, being an area of customary fishery within the rohe potae was an area of significance to those hapu.

The reference in section 174 of the Fisheries Act 1996 is to areas of 'special significance' and I have already acknowledged the argument of Tom Hollings for the New Zealand Fishing Industry Board that the use of the word 'special' denotes something more than ordinary significance. That section refers to areas of New Zealand fisheries waters "that have customarily been of special significance to any iwi or hapu either—

- (a) As a source of food; or
- (b) For spiritual or cultural reasons....."

In referring to the construction of statutes the authors of Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th Edition, state at page 915, (para 1484):

"Construction as a whole requires that, unless the contrary appears, every word in the Act should be given a meaning."

Applied to section 174 this confirms that the word "special" must be given its full meaning.

Special is defined in the Shorter Oxford English Dictionary as: "of such a kind as to exceed or excel in some way that which is usual or common; exceptional in character, quality or degree."

In seeking to justify the area's special significance the Proposal refers to its importance as being part of the rohe potae, its historical significance and the recognition given to it by King Tawhiao who knew of its fishing resources and the necessity to protect its spawning grounds. Mr Greenwood in his submission in support of the application seems to simply adopt the proposition that this was an area of significance without considering the precise words of section 174. He said:

"Details of this 'Rohe Potae' area and its history are well recorded in the application so I will not recapitulate them here, suffice to say the 'Rohe Potae' was recognised by the Maori Land Court in 1886 as an area of significance to the local iwi."

I have no doubt that the area of the rohe potae is regarded by the tribes supporting the application as an area of significance, even of special significance. However in section 174 of the Fisheries Act 1996 the reference is to areas of New Zealand fisheries waters that have customarily been of special significance to any iwi or hapu as a source of food or for spiritual or cultural reasons. These are the criteria for special significance. As I commented earlier the legislation imports to taiapure the need for the area to be something more special or precious than just being all or part of a traditional fishery or within the rohe of a hapu. If the latter was the case then virtually the whole of New Zealand could be ringed by taiapure out to distance of two or three nautical miles which from the wording of section 174 is clearly not the intention of parliament.

I accept that the rohe potae was an area of significance to iwi and hapu. Having regard to the context of section 174 there was a need to show that the area of taiapure was of special significance, that is, that it was an area of the fishery that was exceptional or of extreme importance compared with the rest of the customary fishery.

Dependence on the protected waters of the Kawhia and Aotea Harbours was evidenced by the number of Marae that surrounded them and the Tribunal has no doubt that these harbours were areas of special significance. Evidence from the fishing industry has emphasised the stormy nature of the west coast waters and the inability of fishing boats to venture into the open sea at times for safety reasons, particularly during winter months. Accordingly the protected areas would have provided a safe haven for year round fishing by the many Maori who lived within their environs and even from further afield and thus constituted areas of special significance to hapu.

A similar case may also be made for the Gannet Island area, that is, Area 3. Although access must have depended upon suitable weather conditions evidence was presented as to expeditions to this island to catch hapuka which were plentiful in the deep waters around it. I can accept that this also was a fishing ground of special significance and although Gannet Island is about 10 nautical miles offshore it is a coastal island within New Zealand coastal waters and the waters in its immediate vicinity constitute littoral coastal waters within the context of the Fisheries Act 1996.

The nature of the evidence leads me to conclude that part of Area 2 situated outside the harbours, that is the area of taiapure from Taranaki Point to Albatross Point, would also be an area of special significance to the hapu. The shallow nature of the harbours and the fact that they are largely bereft of water at low tide leaves little doubt that the hapu would, when weather conditions allowed, also rely heavily on the area immediately outside the harbours as an integral part of their fishing operations. The two points are natural landmarks, they are less than 10 nautical miles apart and the waters are largely protected by Albatross Point from the south-westerly swells.

As far as the rest of the area of taiapure is concerned, that is, Area 1, the area running along the outer coastline from Tirua Point to Albatross Point, I can accept that this was widely used by the hapu and Marae dotted along the coast as part of the traditional fishery. However while this area was of significance to the tribes as part of their traditional fishery, there is nothing in the Proposal or the evidence in support to convince me that this was an area of special significance within the meaning of the Act.

The primary emphasis in the Proposal appears to be on the lack of fish in the two harbours in comparison to the abundance of fish there 30 or 40 years ago. Similar reference is made as to lack of fish in the waters of the taiapure along the coast. However the emphasis on the coastal waters seems to a large extent aimed at being able to control fishing in them and thus lead to an increase in fish in the harbours rather than at any special features in those waters. Mr John Greenwood, an Environmental

Recreational Consultant employed by the Kawhia Aotea Fisheries Committee to assist in the promotion of the application, told the Tribunal:

“The original application, Sir was, for the Taiapure, was based on the Rohe Potae.

There are four separate sections of marine habitat included in the application. The two harbours, the area in front of the harbours (that’s immediately west of the harbours down to Albatross Point) and the two nautical mile section from Albatross Point to Tirua Point. There is no need for me to justify the inclusion of the harbours in the application. They are largely bereft of fish. That they are largely bereft of fish is a fact that is without dispute. Suffice to say that both harbours are different and both have distinct management problems.

The two nautical mile zone south to Tirua Point is included because, even in spite of the one nautical mile Trawler and Danish Seining restriction, there are still very few fish caught by traditional and recreational fishers on this section of coast compared with what was once the case. The one nautical mile zone has yet to prove its worth under the present management regime.

The area west of the mouth of the two harbours is included because the local people recognise that at periods of low tide, both harbours empty out to a large degree.

That fish leave the harbour, particularly during periods of warm weather, is a recognised fact. Once out of the harbour they are of course vulnerable to being taken by any fishers who are working the area. In the knowledge of the local committee and their supporters, there is a problem of local depletion. This is exacerbated by the operation of commercial boats in the area outside the harbour bubbles. Once again the effectiveness of the one mile nautical mile zone and harbour bubbles has yet to be noticed by the customary and recreational users under the present management. Iwi would like to have their say in the management of these areas in conjunction with other community groups.’

The thrust of the above submission is to give reasons for the extension of the area of taiapure so as to allow management which will enhance and protect the fish stocks in the harbours. While this would appear admirable any extension of the area of a taiapure for such purpose does not appear to be recognised under the Act. The criteria is simply areas of special significance to hapu or iwi and as I have said nothing has been demonstrated to the Tribunal which would bring the waters of Area 1 within that category. I acknowledge that there is reference to one or two important fishing grounds within this area such as Piritoto Reef and Marokapa Estuary but I do not see these small areas as being sufficient to justify some 40 kilometres of coastline as taiapure.

As I have already noted, the provisions of the Fisheries Act 1996 do not enable the area of a taiapure to be extended for the purposes of better managing or protecting the taiapure. The impact of fishing outside the harbours is a matter which the Management Committee will have to address if a taiapure is granted. I note that the committee of management has power under section 185 of the Act to recommend the making of regulations for the conservation and management of the fish, aquatic life, or seaweed in a taiapure-local fishery. It may well be that such regulations need not be confined just to the area of the taiapure but might extend to perimeter areas as a protection measure and this is a matter that the committee could well look at.

Recommendation

After due consideration of the Proposal and the submissions in support and objections against and measuring these against the relative provisions of the Fisheries Act I find:

- (i) that the area of taiapure is not small but covers a considerable area of coastline forming part of the snapper 8 fishery;
- (ii) that the coastal area of the taiapure as opposed to the harbours covers an important section of the snapper 8 fishery for commercial fishing interests and the establishment of a taiapure could have an adverse impact on their operations;
- (iii) that while most of the coastal area of the taiapure formed part of the customary fishery of the hapu supporting the application and was therefore of significance it was not established that Area 1 was an area of special significance within the meaning of section 174 of the Fisheries Act 1996;
- (iv) that a taiapure should be established over the two harbours and part of the coastal area of Area 2.

As far as the coastal area of Area 2 is concerned, that is the area between Taranaki Point and Albatross Point, the question is how to define the area to be included in the taiapure. In this regard I have to make some judgement and I take into account that the areas likely to have been of most importance to hapu or iwi would have been close to shore or immediately outside the harbours. I also must take into account the impact that any extension of the existing fishing restrictions might have on the commercial sector.

It is my view that the part of Area 2 to be included in the taiapure can be best defined by adopting the existing area which contains restrictions applying principally to commercial fishing, that is, the one nautical mile coastal area and the two nautical miles harbour bubbles. This also avoids the need to define an area that is not already subject of existing definition.

It is therefore recommended that the area of the taiapure-local fishery be limited to the area of the Kawhia and Aotea Harbours together with a coastal strip extending seawards one nautical mile from mean high water springs from Taranaki Point generally southerly along the coast until Albatross Point and also including the two nautical mile harbour bubbles around the Kawhia and Aotea Harbours.

The above definition is not intended as a precise geographical definition and it is left to the Ministry’s advisers to define the area with precision if this recommendation is accepted. It is pointed out that the landward boundaries of the harbours have not been defined and need to be defined so that it is known where the harbours cease and estuarine streams begin.

Dated at Hamilton this 28th day of September 1998.

G. D. CARTER, Judge.

(b) Decision of the Minister

Pursuant to section 181 (9) (b) (ii) of the Fisheries Act 1996, the Associate Minister for Food, Fibre, Biosecurity and Border Control, after having taken into account the report and recommendations of the tribunal and having regard to the provisions of section 176 (2) of the Fisheries Act 1996 and after consultation with the Minister of Maori Affairs, hereby publishes his decision on the report and recommendations of the Tribunal concerning the Kawhia Aotea taiapure Proposal.

- (i) In regard to the recommendations in the Tribunal report I accept that a taiapure—local fishery should be established in the area of Kawhia and Aotea Harbours, in the area of the existing one nautical mile coastal strip and two nautical mile harbour bubbles which currently ban trawling from Taranaki Point to Albatross Point, and in the area within one nautical mile radius centred on Gannet Island.

(ii) In making the decision referred to in (i) above I am satisfied, after having carefully reconsidered the matter in terms of section 181 (9) of the Act, with the major finding of the tribunal that the coastal area of the taiapure, as proposed, would cover an important section of the existing trawl fishery and that the establishment of a taiapure in this area could have an adverse impact on that sector. However, I am further satisfied that the amended boundaries of the taiapure, as recommended by the tribunal, are appropriate in terms of section 176 (2) of the Act. I would also like to record that the advice of the committee of management and affected parties will be sought regarding any outstanding fisheries management issues that are associated with, but are outside the boundaries of, the taiapure.

Dated at Wellington this 29th day of July 1999.

HON. DAVID CARTER, Associate Minister of Food, Fibre, Biosecurity and Border Control.

3. Offering a lease of quota in lieu of paying deemed value—(1) Subject to this clause, as from the date this notice comes into effect, any commercial fisherman who but for section 28ZG of the Fisheries Act 1983, could be required under section 28ZD of that Act to pay the deemed value of any fish that is specified as a bycatch species in this notice, may, not later than 15 days after the end of the month in which the fish were taken, by notice in writing, offer the Chief Executive of the Ministry of Fisheries a lease or sub-lease of the right to take fish, under any quota held or leased by that fisher that are specified in the Schedule to this notice as a target species in relation to that bycatch species.
