Departmental Notices

Accident Compensation Corporation

Accident Insurance Act 1998

Consultation on Proposed 2002/03 ACC Premium and Levy Rates

ACC will be consulting on regulations for the 2002/03 premiums and levies for the following Accounts:

- Employers’;
- Self-employed Work;
- Earners’;
- Motor Vehicle; and
- Residual Claims.

Premiums will pay for the costs associated with injuries sustained during the period 1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003. Levies will fund the ongoing costs of injuries that occurred before 1 July 1999.

ACC is keen to have public input on its pricing proposals before it makes recommendations to the Minister for Accident Insurance in October 2001.

ACC would like to invite premium payers to make submissions on the following proposed rates and regulations which also includes the funding requirements for the increased range and scope of entitlements incorporated in the Injury Prevention, and Rehabilitation Bill (Bill). They are as follows:

Employers’ Account

The net average premium is proposed to reduce by 11% to $0.76c per $100.00 of payroll (currently an average of $0.85c).

ACC is able to propose a reduction in workers’ compensation because:

- workplace injuries are down;
- rehabilitation is working well; and
- the tail of long term claimants has reduced.

This reduction reflects ACC’s success in increasing the emphasis on workplace safety practices. Changes in the scope and range of entitlements incorporated within the Bill are included in this rate.

Self-employed Work Account

The average premium is proposed to increase by 25% to $1.69 per $100.00 of liable earnings (currently an average of $1.35). The increases reflect the recent increases in the number of self-employed injuries and the costs of managing these claims. Changes in the scope and range of entitlements incorporated within the Bill also included in this rate.

Earners’ Account

It is proposed that the combined earner premium and levy remain at $1.10 (G.S.T. inclusive) per $100.00 of earnings. Changes in the scope and range of entitlements incorporated within the Bill are also included in this rate.

Motor Vehicle Account

The ACC portion of the annual motor vehicle licence fee is proposed to increase by 13% to $145.00 per standard vehicle (currently $128.45). This increase is due to the increased number and costs of motor vehicle injuries and the additional changes in entitlements in the Bill.

The ACC Board is also proposing that:

- certain previously exempt vehicles (i.e. ambulances, fire service vehicles and hearses) be charged a premium for 2002/03;
- non-petrol powered vehicles (e.g. diesel vehicles) pay an additional premium equivalent to the petrol excise duty currently paid by users of petrol powered vehicles; and
- motor cycle premium differential be increased from 105% to 150% of the standard vehicle rate to reflect the higher costs of injuries to motorcyclists.

Residual Claims Account

This levy funds the ongoing costs of injuries that occurred prior to 1 July 1999. It is proposed that the average residual claim levy remains at $0.35c per $100 of earnings.

Changes in the scope and range of entitlements incorporated in the Bill have minimal impact on this Account.

Summary

The proposals can be summarised as follows:

Account	Premium		Levy

Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000

Code of Practice for Modern Apprentices, Employers of Modern Apprentices and Modern Apprenticeships Co-ordinators Under the Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000

A Code of Practice for Modern Apprentices, Employers of Modern Apprentices and Modern Apprenticeships

Co-ordinators has been approved by the Associate Minister of Education (Tertiary Education), Steve Maharey, pursuant to section 20 of the Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000.

The Code reads as follows:

Introduction

1. Many of the relationships in a modern apprenticeship are governed by contracts and agreements. This code of practice provides a guide to good practice in carrying out those contractual obligations, as provided for by the Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000. The good practice outlined in this code is not exhaustive.

2. The code of practice provides guidance for the relationships between employers and modern apprentices, co-ordinators and modern apprentices, and co-ordinators and employers. The code of practice will come into force on 20 September 2001.

3. The code of practice refers only to the parts of an employment relationship pertaining to arrangements for and practices of modern apprenticeships training. As such, it offers guidance about implementing the training agreement attached to a modern apprentice's employment agreement. It is not intended to offer guidance regarding employment agreements between modern apprentices and their employers. Modern apprentices are employees with duties and protections provided for under the relevant employment legislation.

Legal Duties

4. Parties to a modern apprenticeship must comply with all relevant duties set out in the Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000, and with all legally binding agreements they have signed pertaining to modern apprenticeships. These parties should also ensure that all other relevant laws, subsequent amendments, and any relevant codes attached to these laws, are complied with. Such laws may include:

- relevant employment legislation, for example the Holidays Act 1981, the Wages Protection Act 1983, the Minimum Wage Act 1983, the Parental Leave and Employment Protection Act 1987, and the Employment Relations Act 2000;
- relevant human rights legislation, for example the Human Rights Act 1993;
- relevant health and safety legislation, for example the Health and Safety in the Workplace Act 1992;
- relevant privacy legislation, for example the Privacy Act 1993.

5. In particular, co-ordinators should ensure that employers are aware of their legal obligation to ensure that all workplaces in which modern apprentices work or train comply with workplace health and safety legislation. This includes modern apprenticeships training or work that takes place away from the regular workplace of the modern apprentice. They should also be in a position to advise modern apprentices, potential modern apprentices and employers of their rights and duties under the Human Rights Act 1993.

Principles of Modern Apprenticeships

6. The principles underlying modern apprenticeships relationships are those of fairness, good faith, transparency, co-operation and collaboration, in pursuit of excellence in work and training.

7. Modern apprenticeships is based on the development and maintenance of co-operative relationships among the individuals and organisations involved.

8. Employers and co-ordinators will collaborate in support of the individual training needs of the modern apprentice. As a part of this, employers can expect to employ an apprentice eager to learn the skills of their industry.

Guidance for Modern Apprentices, Their Employers, and Modern Apprenticeships Co-ordinators

Modern Apprentices and Employers

9. Modern apprentices are expected to be good employees. This means they should fulfil their employment requirements according to their employment agreement and commit themselves to their individual training plan.

10. All employers of modern apprentices, including group training companies, should be good employers. This means they should treat modern apprentices fairly and in accordance with the principles of good faith as they are laid out in the Code of Good Faith and the Employment Relations Act 2000. Group training companies should also ensure that providers of on-job training for the modern apprentices they employ do the same.

11. Group training companies should adhere to the good practice set out for all modern apprenticeships co-ordinators in this code. Group training is a unique arrangement involving the employment of modern apprentices by their modern apprenticeships co-ordinator, so special duties apply in addition.

12. Group training companies should have adequate systems in place to avoid any conflicts of interest that might arise through their role as employers and/or training providers of modern apprentices in addition to their role as modern apprenticeships co-ordinators.

The Initial Stages

13. Open communication between co-ordinators and modern apprentices and employers respectively will help facilitate a successful modern apprenticeships placement. Modern apprenticeships co-ordinators will be working with a profile of what an employer wants in a modern apprentice, and will match this with the abilities and aspirations of the modern apprentice.

14. The co-ordinator should consider the capabilities of potential modern apprentices when screening them to work and train in a particular industry. Co-ordinators will be able to advise a potential modern apprentice what the job may be like in practice.

15. Feedback from a co-ordinator to the potential modern apprentice about their suitability to become a modern apprentice should be timely and helpful.

16. Before an employer, a modern apprentice and a co-ordinator sign a modern apprenticeship training agreement, the co-ordinator should confirm with the appropriate ITO that the ITO will register the training agreement.

During the Period of Training

17. A modern apprenticeship has started when the individual training plan has been signed by a modern apprentice and their employer (and endorsed by the co-ordinator), and when the modern apprentice and their employer have signed a training agreement which has been or is about to be registered by the ITO.

18. Modern apprenticeships training will progress according to an individual training plan agreed upon by the modern apprentice and their employer. The individual training plan links to the training agreement that is lodged with the ITO. This training agreement forms part of the employment agreement, but the individual training plan does not.

19. The individual training plan is a statement of commitment by the modern apprentice, the employer and the co-ordinator, and supported by the ITO. It commits them to work together to achieve the plan's quarterly goals. It is important that modern apprentices and their employers are aware of what they are supposed to achieve and work with each other with the assistance of their co-ordinator to achieve it.

20. The development of the individual training plan reflects the results of a training-needs analysis undertaken or arranged by the co-ordinator. This analysis will have been undertaken in consultation with the employer. The training plan will be designed to support the completion of the qualification the modern apprenticeship is to lead to.

21. Good planning by employers and co-ordinators can allow modern apprentices to attend off-job training with minimum disruption to the workplace. Co-ordinators will provide information (such as dates and duration of the off-job training) to aid such planning. This information should be written into the modern apprentice's individual training plan as early as possible.

22. If circumstances arise that might alter a modern apprentice's individual training plan, the other parties should be told as early as possible to allow for the arrangement of alternative training if necessary.

23. Modern apprentices, their employers and their co-ordinators should be aware that identifying the modern apprentice's training needs is an ongoing process. Co-ordinators will build this process into the ongoing management of the modern apprentice's training.

Key Skills

24. "Key skills" is an integral component of modern apprenticeships and refers to transferable skills that enable individual apprentices to complete their training (e.g. numerical calculations, study skills, etc). In addition, "key skills" can be transferable skills that individual industries require their employees to have to "future-proof" their industry (e.g. IT skills).

25. Ideally, "key skills" will be taught and assessed alongside other learning in the individual training plan. This provides a meaningful context for the learning of key skills and ensures that the modern apprentice and their employer can see their relevance to the workplace.

Other Issues

28. Co-ordinators who are not group training companies must not become involved in the bargaining process for an employment agreement. In the event that a request is made for them to become so involved, co-ordinators should provide employers and modern apprentices with timely and helpful information which will allow the employer or modern apprentice to obtain authoritative advice on industrial relations arrangements from an appropriate source. They should not attempt to provide this advice themselves.

27. Modern apprenticeships co-ordinators should avoid taking the role of an advocate for either side in a situation where a modern apprentice is subject to their employer's disciplinary procedures, or the modern apprentice and employer are engaged in an employment dispute. Co-ordinators will abide by their legal duties if asked to provide information by the Employment Relations Authority or called as a witness by the Employment Court.

28. Co-ordinators should, as early as possible, inform their contract manager at Skill New Zealand if difficulties look likely to arise in their relationship with either a modern apprentice or employer. Skill New Zealand will provide advice or otherwise help the parties try to pre-empt any potential difficulties.

29. If a dispute between a co-ordinator and modern apprentice or a co-ordinator and an employer remains unresolved, and in the absence of a prior agreement between them regarding the resolution of such disputes, the co-ordinator's contract manager at Skill New Zealand will either, with the agreement of the parties in dispute:

- act as an independent mediator themselves; or
- appoint a mutually agreeable independent mediator to mediate the dispute.

30. Before asking Skill New Zealand to help a modern apprentice find employment under section 12 (d) of the Modern Apprenticeship Training Act 2000, co-ordinators should exhaust every available option open to them. This might include making alternative arrangements for the modern apprentice themselves or arranging for another appropriate co-ordinator to find employment for the modern apprentice.

Chairman's Report for the Year Ended 31 March 2001

“Donations Up Despite Tough Year”

Prudent investment by community trustees paid big dividends for Bay of Plenty communities as the trust increased its donations in a very difficult investment year.

It is my pleasure to present my second annual report for the Bay of Plenty Community Trust and to elaborate on how we have helped the communities of our region, which extends from Katikati to the East Cape to Turangi. This is indeed a large and diverse region and to match this we are very fortunate to have trustees who come from Taupo, Rotorua, Whakatane, Opotiki, Te Puke, Tauranga and Katikati. Their knowledge of local community organisations is excellent and I never cease to be amazed at the strength and depth of this trust board's representation.

The major downturn in global equities markets meant that investment income was down dramatically from $10.9m last year to $2.5m. But trustees' adherence to sound investment and careful reserving policies allowed the trust to pay out a record $3.9m in community donations to 235 organisations and commit itself to a further $2.1m.

This year has seen very encouraging progress on three major Bay of Plenty projects as a result of the protocol signed with the mayors of the region – seven councils in total. This protocol helps the trust understand regional priorities from elected representatives' (councils') perspectives and helps those councils understand trust constraints. It enables both councils and the trust to work together for the overall benefit of the Bay of Plenty, without in any way compromising any party's ability to make its own decisions for its own reasons.

The first of these regional projects was the Rotorua International Stadium grandstand extensions which saw the trust make its largest ever one-off donation to date of $1m.

A further $1m was also approved for the Whakatane Aquatic Centre and another $1m for the Tauranga Art Gallery. These funds will be paid out over a two-three year period.

The trust has also renewed its major funding partnerships with Sport BoP (Coachforce) and Presbyterian Support Services (The James Family), for $1.8m over three years and $300,000 over two years respectively.

In last year's report I paid tribute to Stewart Edward from Rotorua who retired from the trust after eight years' dedicated service. Jenny Mahoney of Whakatane also retired last year after serving the trust for four-and-a-half years and I thank her most sincerely for her very valuable contribution to the board.

Two new trustees joined us in November 2000. Pam McLeod from Taupo and Terri Eggleton from Whakatane have brought their own perspectives to the table and we welcome them. These appointments are for a term of four years and with the appointment of four new trustees in 1999, there has been a large turn around of trustees, six of twelve in two years. This is healthy as it means there is new thinking and constant rejuvenation at the board table.

In this the Year of the Volunteer, I very sincerely congratulate each and every organisation which has received a donation from the trust and I acknowledge the contribution that volunteers make to our communities. This trust has very few "hard and fast" rules when it comes to considering donations except that the project must enhance your community and that foremost in our minds is the contribution being made by the volunteers within a particular organisation.

In conclusion, may I say it has been a very rewarding year as chairman and I thank my fellow trustees for all their hard work and diligence. I would also like to sincerely thank our trust manager Bruce Cronin and donations officer Cindy Currie for their smooth running of the trust. Their enthusiasm and attention to all their tasks is exemplary.

GLENYS SEARANCKE, Chair.

Accordingly, the trustees consider that the fair value of each class of financial assets and financial liabilities is the same as the carrying value in the financial position.

Concentration of Investments

Ninety-nine point seven percent (99.7%) of the assets of the trust are represented by investments held with a range of financial institutions. However, the trustees consider the risk of non-recovery of these investments to be minimal. Maximum exposure to credit risk as at balance date is:

Interest Rate Risk

The following investments of the trust are sensitive to changes in interest rates: Bank call accounts and deposits, government and local authority securities, and securities held by fund managers.

Fair Value

The carrying value is considered to be the fair value for financial instruments.

5. Investments

The value of investments which are held in equities and fixed interest are subject to market fluctuations. The total investment portfolio has been structured in such a way that any reductions in value in particular asset classes should be offset by increases in other classes; therefore no provision has been made for potential gains or losses that could occur due to market fluctuations. The investment portfolio as at 31 March 2001 is diversified as follows:
