ANNUAL MEDICAL REPORT.

In drawing up Medical Reports, especial attention ought to be paid to the fatal cases, as well on account of their peculiar interest as from their affording the best means of judging of the propriety of the practice pursued.

On referring to the accompanying Tabular Return of Patients treated in the Auckland Provincial Hospital, it will be seen that the mortality has been considerable, amounting to about 12 per cent., a result, however, which will not surprise any one who takes the trouble to read the following remarks:—

The records of the Hospital for the year 1859 fully confirm the truth of the observation that "Fever" is comparatively a rare disease in Auckland; the cases treated amounting only to 4 or 1 in 60 of the total admissions. These were however of a typhoid type, and somewhat protracted in their duration, 3 have perfectly recovered; and 1 remains at the end of the year convalescent.

Under the head of "Anthrax" is a fatal case, that of a man advanced in life who had borne the brunt of the disease at a sawing station, where he had no attention; and was removed to Auckland in so debilitated a state that he survived only a few days.

Referring to diseases of the Eyes, it may be observed that the operation of couching was performed on a young man, who was the subject of double cataract, but owing to the gelatinous softness of the lens, without the effect of restoring vision.

Seven cases of Delirium Tremens have been treated during the year, all of them successfully.

Two fatal cases of Pneumonia or Inflammation of the Lungs are returned, of the particulars of which I am ignorant, my entrance upon office having been subsequent to their occurrence.

Three fatal cases of Heart disease appear in the return; one was prior to my time, and the remaining two were admitted into Hospital in a dying state, a circumstance of constant recurrence, and explaining in part, our high rate of mortality.

For the reason assigned above, I am unacquainted with the fatal case of diseased Liver which is returned.

One case of fatal injury of the Kidneys was admitted since my appointment. The unfortunate man (a Portuguese) was crushed between two heavy pieces of timber and lingered a few days in great agony. The Abdomen was found after death filled with extravasated blood.

The most prolific heading in our return is "Rheumatism," under which, although not generally a fatal disease, two deaths are recorded. One such case occurred in my time, and was that of a man admitted for Rheumatism, but who subsequently took Erysipelas in the Hospital and died of the latter affection. He was a very infirm subject and of advanced years.

To the three cases of Erysipelas, which were admitted into Hospital from without, we must add other three, which appeared in Patients in Hospital under treatment for different complaints and all proved fatal. One was the case referred to above; the second occurred in a man who had an Ulcer on his leg, and who had for many years laboured under organic disease (as proved by dissection) of the Heart and Pleura. The third was a most interesting case—a man was admitted for an Ulcer on his leg, which in due time had almost healed, and his recovery was so far advanced, that he was advised to return to his situation as a domestic servant, but preferring to remain, he unfortunately became the subject of Erysipelas, under which he sunk after a fortnight's illness.

It is incorrect to suppose that Erysipelas has been epidemic in the Hospital alone, numerous cases having occurred in both town and country. One case at present remains under treatment far advanced in convalescence, who had been attended in town for several days by a private practitioner, and sent to Hospital in a very critical state.

In the cases of Pulmonary Consumption that have been treated, the largest number of deaths has occurred, a circumstance which will not surprise any one who remembers that such cases are generally sent to Hospital in the last and hopeless stage.

Two fatal cases of Dysentery are recorded, the first occurred previous to my superintendency, the second was admitted in a dying state and sank in a few days.

Of the two fatal cases of Apoplectic affection, one was very unexpected and sudden in its invasion. It occurred in an old man, who had long been an inmate of the Hospital, on examination rupture of vessel and extravasation of blood were found in the brain. The other case was that of an old woman, who sank through exhaustion after a lingering illness.

Of the two fatal cases of Dropsy, one died on the night of her admission. The other was a sailor brought to Auckland from the Feejees in the last degree of exhaustion, who died within a week after his admission.

The fatal case of Syphilis was that of a man who had been for years in hospital hopelessly labouring under disease of the most loathsome and painful character.

Under Burn is the fatal case of a woman whose clothes took fire while she was drunk, and who was literally roasted alive.

Under Ulcer are two cases proving fatal by Erysipelas, which have been noticed above.

Under the head of Fracture is one fatal case, a compound comminuted fracture of the right leg, extending into the knee-joint, and attended at the time of its occurrence, by so great loss of blood, as to preclude all hope of saving life by Amputation. The patient did not rally for three days, and sank exhausted in about three weeks after admission.

Under diseases of the Skin, is the case of an old man who contracted a violent Bronchitis after having been several weeks in Hospital and died of Suffocation.

Under General Debility is the fatal case of a man who was found by the Police in a house in town, sick and destitute, and was sent to Hospital in a dying state.

In reference to the Surgical Branch it may be mentioned, that upwards of 50 cases of accident have been treated during the year, all of them successfully, excepting two, the burn and compound fracture above mentioned.

It ought to be mentioned that my charge of the Hospital commenced on June 1st, 1859, extending over a period of seven months, at which date there were forty Patients, thirty-one Males and nine Females. On the 21st July the additional wing was opened, affording accommodation for sixteen Male Patients, and comprehending a bath-room with boiler and furnace, cistern, &c., and a day room where the convalescent patients take their meals comfortably together. The dimensions of the day room are similar to those of the new ward above-mentioned and are 43 feet long and 17 feet wide. The ventilation of both is excellent. The average accommodation for sick may be stated at fifty beds—below which complement our number of Patients rarely sinks.

Considering that about one-half of the inmates are not (strictly speaking) sick, but simply infirm and not confined to their beds, but permitted to range about the grounds, the instances of breach of discipline are not numerous. Notwithstanding, a few gross offenders have been summarily dismissed.

The majority seem contented and comfortable, a result much promoted by the reading of books, of which a larger supply and better class are much needed.

The state of the Hospital bedding, and clothing has become such as to require immediate attention.

The supply of rations during the year has been regular, and the quality of the provisions creditable to the contractors.

In concluding my Report on the Hospital I may mention that our Hospital Staff consists of the following persons:

- 1 Surgeon
- 1 House Steward
- 1 Head-Nurse
- 1 Assistant-Nurse
- 1 Matron
- 1 Cook.

Most of the cases under treatment at present are doing well.

PROVINCIAL LUNATIC ASYLUM.

In reporting on the Provincial Lunatic Asylum I have to mention, that on taking Medical charge of that institution, I found in it (June 1, 1859,) thirty-four Patients, of whom twenty-four were Men and ten Women.

Since that time there have been nine admissions, which with seven previously admitted amount to sixteen, ten Males and six Females, the total admissions for 1859. The number discharged during the year has been seven, consisting of four Males and three Females. The deaths have amounted to four, comprehending three Males and one Female, and the number remaining at the close of the year is thirty-three, including twenty-two Men and eleven Women. Of the new cases for 1859, eight may be regarded as Melancholia, sixteen Mania, and two Idiocy. The exciting causes were intemperance; family dissensions; hereditary transmission, &c. Seven (Men four, Females three) have been discharged, sufficiently recovered to return to their families or follow their usual occupations.

1. The first death was Catherine McDonald, admitted August 12, 1857, a Nova Scotian, who had long laboured under mental derangement. The date of her decease was prior to my appointment, February 13th, 1859.

2. The second was Edward Lawson, æt 33 years, admitted for Mania, April 29th, 1859. He was sent to Auckland from the Northward, having been put on shore by the Captain of a coasting vessel and abandoned some time previously. He was in a wretched condition on admission, morally, mentally, and physically, and eventually died, July 10th, 1859.

3. The third fatal case was a very old man, James Jeffries, admitted for Mania, September 1st, 1858, and dying of exhaustion on October 1st, 1859.

4. The fourth and last case was Te Puri, an Aboriginal Native, admitted for Mania, November 3rd, 1858, and dying of Pulmonary Consumption on November 10th, 1859.

Of those at present in the Asylum, the prospect of cure in most instances is very doubtful, but it is hoped, that a few of them will ultimately be restored. They are all in excellent bodily health, and have good appetites. They are treated with great kindness by the Keeper and Matron, for both of whom they entertain a filial regard. They are ruled by the power of kindness only, physical restraint and coercion being never restored to.

Within the last six months, the Asylum has been furnished with enclosed yards for the Male and Female Patients respectively, to which they have free access at all times, and have the advantage of fresh air and exercise. Such of the patients as can be trusted are permitted at proper times to take exercise in the paddock outside.

Since the last report, iron stretchers have been provided for the dormitories, where the Patients before used to sleep on the floor. There has been made also a considerable addition to the western wing of the Asylum, affording increased accommodation for the Female Patients and the family of the head-keeper. A detached kitchen and store room, together with a drying room and straw house have also been recently erected, all materially tending to the completeness of the establishment and the comfort of the inmates. The staff of the Asylum consists of the Head-Keeper, two Under-Keepers, the Matron and Assistant-Matron.

PROVINCIAL PRISONS, CITY GAOL, AND STOCKADE.

My observations on the Provincial Prisons need not be tedious, the Tabular Returns speak for themselves. Very few cases of serious disease have occurred during the year in either Prison, and no deaths. The prisoners are well fed and moderately exercised and appear to be as contented as their condition can be expected to permit.
