NAVIGATION OF THE MOLYNEUX ABOVE THE DUNSTAN.

CAPTAIN MURRAY'S REPORT.

SIR—In compliance with yours of the 17th February, respecting the survey of the Molyneux River, I beg leave to hand you herewith my report on the same.

I left Dunedin for the Dunstan on the 6th instant (having previously forwarded boat for survey), and arrived on Saturday, the 7th, the boat arriving there on the same day, and after making all necessary repairs to boat, got ready to start for the Wanaka Lake on Tuesday evening the 10th instant.

In following up the river from the Dunstan to the junction of the Kawarau, a distance of 14 miles by water, I found for the first 9 miles a great many impediments in the main channel, and not suitable for steamboat navigation, without a large outlay for blasting rocks. The five miles below the Kawarau is unimpeded for navigation. I arrived at the Kawarau on Wednesday, the 11th instant, at 3 p.m.; after remaining here a short time, started to examine the river above the falls; followed the river about two and a-half miles above the falls, where the Louburn Creek empties into the Molyneux. This point I consider about starting place for river navigation; camped here for the night.

On Thursday the 12th, started and followed the river up as far as Ferry above M'Leod and Gibson's, which by water is about sixteen miles from Louburn Creek, found the river this distance safe for steamboat navigation, with a very light draft of water and good speed, the average current being five miles an hour, although on some of the bars it runs about six and a-half miles an hour. Stopped at Ferry about an hour, started again, and found the river, for six miles above last mentioned place, to be about the same as that below the Ferry. About two miles above the Lindis the first obstacles to navigation came to my notice. This is where the first of the high terrace plains commences; the current at this point of the river for a short distance runs rapid, about seven miles an hour, and at this stage of water there being a great many rocks in the main channel of the river, I do not consider it safe for steamboat navigation. About two miles farther up the river we camped for the night; a short distance below our camping place we found similar obstacles to that last mentioned.

On Friday the 13th, started and found the river about two miles below Poison Creek, with a very narrow channel and full of rocks. At the first of the S. Berds, about opposite Poison Creek, the river runs more rapid than any below, and, up to Sandy Point Ferry, is full of rapids and shoal bars; and from thence to the Wanaka Lake, a distance of about fifteen miles by water, there are several rapid and shoal places. Arrived at the Wanaka Lake on Friday evening, at 5 p.m., where we camped on the shore for the night; started on the return trip on Saturday, the 13th, to survey river below Dunstan township. Arrived at the Dunstan on Monday, the 15th, at 11 a.m.: started at 1 p.m., and followed the river about 14 miles down, where we camped for the night; on the morning of the 16th started again at 7 a.m., about one mile below the point, which is 15 miles by water from the Dunstan. The river is navigable for a powerful small-sized steamer, capable of steaming 11 miles an hour. Below this there is a very heavy rapid, about half a mile long, where we had to drop the boat down with lines, as in the centre of the river the water is much higher than on the sides. About 7 miles farther down the river we arrived at 9 a.m., at Reilly's Portage; here we had to make portage of the boat round the Falls—which appear to be about 6 or 8 feet, perpendicular drop, over very large rock in centre of the river—dropped the boat down for about three-quarters of a mile through the rough water, which detained us till 11.14 a.m. About half a mile below this place we came to a very heavy rapid, which we were forced to run as current was very rapid, and could not make landing with boat; we shipped a large quantity of water, and very nearly got swamped. Two miles below this point we had to drop boat down over heavy rapid; and five miles above Capt. Baldwin's station came to heavy rapid and fall, where we had to launch boat over rocks about 20 feet; the fall here is about from 4 to 6 feet, formed by rocks in the centre of the river. Camped for the night about two and a half miles above Capt. Baldwin's station. On Wednesday, the 18th, at 7.50, arrived at Baldwin's station; left there at 8.10; came to heavy rapid about a mile and a-half below where we had to drop the boat down. The river from this rapid to the Teviot, a distance of four miles, is very good. About two and a half miles below the Teviot there is a very heavy rapid, where we had to drop the boat down. One and a half miles further down the river commences to be navigable, and continues so to the Tallaburn, where the river is contracted, and channel very narrow, not safe for steamboat; and from thence to the Beaumont, about six miles, the river is not safe for steamboats.

The river I consider navigable at this stage of water, about 14 miles above the Tuapeka Junction, and from thence with one portage round the Beaumont Rapids, could be opened up within four miles of the Teviot, which is about the centre of all the principal diggings, both on the Molyneux and the Wakatipu Lake. After my making the first trip up the Molyneux with the new steamer, which is now nearly completed, I will be willing to give any information before a select Committee of the Government, on the feasibility of opening up the river to within four miles of the Teviot.

Hoping that the above will answer all purposes,

I remain, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

A. S. MURRAY.
